BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY WILL BE INCREASED

The Government Definitely Decides to Abandon Its Policy of a Reduction of Armaments: One of the First of the Far-reaching Effects of the European Crisis.

LONDON, Oct. 15—One of the first of the far reaching effects of the European crisis became known today. The British Government has definitely decided to abandon its policy of a reduction of armaments. Naval construction on a large scale will immediately be resumed, and the army, instead of being further reduced, will be increased.

According to the principle which has now been publicly affirmed by Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy in dealing with the past week's events, Germany will find herself compelled to take the same stand on second thought, despite the awkward situation which it will create for Austria. The question is how far the powers will be willing to go in restoring the only safe basis for international relations. It is too early to speak definitely on the point, but if a strong line is taken and a return to the status quo ante be insisted upon the whole crisis might be peacefully settled. No other course makes for safety and permanent peace. The four powers named could denounce their will upon Austria in this matter. Germany would probably support them if she knew the alternative was an English armament too powerful for her ever to be able to match. Practical statesmen admit the wisdom of such a step, but they doubt that most of absolute necessity that the same demerit diplomacy has sufficient courage of treaties shall be re-established for the task.

The Camberwell Board of Guardians, however, nullified this by a decision to grant all paupers over 70, on January 5, 1905 out-relief to the extent of five shillings a week, which means an additional cost to the Camberwell rate-payers of $65,000 a year.

Fortune of Inventor Goes to His Supposed W

WATERBURY, Conn., Oct. 15—David G. Cooper of Terryville, who made a fortune in the manufacture of oven thermometers for ranges, was supposed to have been a bachelor all his life. His will, however, disclosed the fact that he had a wife and twelve children in Chili, South America, to whom the greater part of the estate was bequeathed to each.

tate as the natural heirs. His nieces were much surprised. Mr. Cooper's will, which has just been probated, directs that the estate be turned into gold and the money sent to Chili to his widow and children. One of the requests of the will ago his two nieces, who took care of his home and his office work, were supposed to be heirs to his estate of $150,000. His will, however, disclosed the fact that he had a wife and twelve children in Chili, South America, to whom the greater part of the estate was bequeathed to each. While sitting in a kitchen watching a woman baking Mr. Cooper conceived the idea of constructing a thermometer for oven doors by which the proper temperature for baking could be ascertained. He established a factory in Terryville, where for twenty-two years he manufactured oven thermometers.
