Prince Will Not Make Tour of United States

(Special to The Guardian.) NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—An Associated press despatch from Washington today says the Prince of Wales who is now touring Canada will come to Washington in about a month for a visit of three days but he will not make a tour of the United States.

CHICAGO OUT IN THE COLD

(Special to The Guardian.) CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Elimination of Chicago as one of the American cities to be visited by the King and Queen of the Belgians is attributed here in despatches from the east to the fact placed on Marshall Joffre when he was in the city through Mayor Thompson and City Council failing to extend any official invitation to the distinguished soldier when a representative of the State Department at Washington made public today the list of American cities to be visited by King Albert and Queen Elizabeth. He was asked why Chicago was left out and replied that he did not know. Was it because of the experience that Marshall Joffre underwent in Chicago? He was asked, and again the state department official feigned ignorance, but when asked is the list likely to be revised to include Chicago he very emphatically replied "It will not be revised."

Sir Edward Kemp Has Arrived

(Special to The Guardian.) OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of the overseas military forces, arrived here yesterday and will be in his place in the House of Commons during the remainder of the session. Among rumors in circulation there is one that Sir Edward may be selected to succeed Sir John Henderson as Lieut. Governor of Ontario. The latter's term expires in a few days. All Canadian Corps in England expect that at Buxton have been closed, stated Sir Edward. The few thousand Canadian soldiers in England would have been home before now, he stated, had it not been for interruption of ocean traffic by strikes.

A Wreck On The Maritime Express

PENOBSCQUIS, Oct. 2.—The Maritime Express met with an accident here today, which, luckily, did not result in injury to passengers or crew. The accident happened a short distance west of this place at 10 a. m. The train was said to have been caused by a broken flange on one of the wheels of the tender. The tender left the rails dragging four of the five passenger coaches with it. They tore along some distance, ripping up the road bed. Had the accident happened 300 yards west of the spot where it occurred the coaches would surely have gone over an embankment.

A special train was made up at Moncton to transfer the passengers to their destination. A wrecking crew was immediately dispatched to the scene to repair the damage and clear the wreckage.

The Labor Situation

DR. DUNCAN SAYS UNREST CREATED BY THOSE WHO DID NOT SACRIFICE.

Preaching Sunday morning in the church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, Montreal, the Rev. Dr. Duncan, who has just returned from a vacation in England, laid emphasis upon the necessity of an appreciation by labor of the seriousness of the situation it is creating. He stated that for the last five years Britain had borne the financial burdens of the world and that but for the fear of a renewed blockade by the British Navy, the enemy would never have signed the terms of peace and now the tables are turned and the British Empire and the stability of human society are imperilled not only by their acts largely of economic laws were imperiling not only their own industries and the welfare of their country but the whole future of the British Empire and the stability of human society.

Most of those who were creating industrial unrest in Britain belonged to the section which had not been subject to military discipline and knew nothing of self sacrifice in their country's cause. Dr. Duncan continued that no doubt in many British manufactures wages were small and in view of the high cost of living some adjustments were inevitable and fair but few now that the tables are turned are willing to make any increase in the cost of living and that unless there was increase of production proportionate to the increase of wages, the problem was insoluble. He spoke of the lack of inclination amongst English laboring men to work and of cases where men had to be bribed one day to ensure their return the next and asked was labor to go on without moral standards. "Till some Jeremiah rises," concluded the speaker "to lead us back to the rebuilding of our social industrial and national life on sober lines, our hope in the grave situation of the hour is in educated, farseeing conciliatory leaders of labor men, it may be, risen from the ranks of industry, such as one who recently addressed the labor convention saying 'Not agitation but education.' Dr. Duncan is a nephew of Mr. F. W. Hyndman of Charlottetown.

President's Condition Is Not Satisfactory

(Special to The Guardian.) WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Despite a fairly good night's rest President Wilson's condition is not at all good this morning and Vice Admiral Grayson, his personal physician, has called in consultation Dr. F. Z. Dercum, a neurologist of Philadelphia.

FURS AND TRAPPING

During recent years the fur of skunks has come into great demand, and good prices are paid for prime skins. The animal are so numerous and the catch is so large that they now rank among the most valuable of our fur-bearers.

They are gentle animals which readily become domesticated and breed freely in confinement, and many efforts are being made to establish skunk farms. Success in such farming depends wholly on the outlay for upkeep. Skunk farming will probably pay better as a side line, like chickens on the ordinary farm, than to establish regular fur farms.

The scent sac may be removed by a slight surgical operation, so there need be no trouble from that source. Common skunks when taken young make affectionate and entertaining pets. They become as tame and playful as kittens, and are vastly more intelligent and interesting.

They are gentle animals which readily become domesticated and breed freely in confinement, and many efforts are being made to establish skunk farms. Success in such farming depends wholly on the outlay for upkeep. Skunk farming will probably pay better as a side line, like chickens on the ordinary farm, than to establish regular fur farms.

Skunks are most common in areas of mixed woods and fields, in valleys, along the banks of streams, and along the borders of swamps and rocky canyons. One of their marked characteristics is a fondness for the vicinity of man. They frequently visit his premises, taking up quarters beneath outbuildings or even under the house itself.

Some trappers smoke their traps before setting believing that the odor of the smoke will smother that of the animal. This however is not in my opinion a good idea as clean iron has no odor and the smell of smoke enables the animal to locate the trap, thus having just the opposite of the effect desired.

Others again, grease or oil the traps which is also bad for the same reason and another thing worth considering is the fact that a greased trap does not have as good a grip as one which has not been so treated.

For my own part I would rather have my traps red with rust than have them oiled, and if it is necessary to oil the joints of a stiff working trap, use some oil having practically no odor, never use strong-smelling substances such as kerosene.

WAIT FOR COLD WEATHER

Don't be in a hurry to set your traps! Remember that skins are not prime until the latter end of November, and you lose money by destroying the lives of your fur-bearers before that time.

There are many things to do before then. Your traps must be overhauled, and properly disinfected of human taint. Particulars will be found in a later article.

Scents may be prepared as explained last week. Quiet observation will show where traps may be set later on.

LOOK OVER YOUR TRAPS

In order to keep steel traps in perfect working order they should have a certain amount of attention. Repairs will be necessary at times and before the trapping season commences one should look them all over and see that they are in good condition. The triggers should be so adjusted that the pan will set level. All parts should work freely and the trap should neither spring too easily nor too hard.

Rust on traps is not desirable, and may be prevented to a great extent by boiling the traps occasionally in a solution of evergreen gaulth, maple, willow, or oak bark or walnut hulls. This will give the traps a blue-black color and they will not rust for a considerable length of time. New traps will not take the color very well, but they should be boiled just the same to remove the oil sale the varnish with which some manufacturers coat their traps.

Instead of waiting to get a big lot. The really efficient trapper is the man who keeps his furs going to the market in a steady stream, from day to day, and welcome, for his pains, a steady stream of checks in return. The big advantages of shipping as you trap are that you avoid congestion, both at the scene of shipment, and at the market; get your money more quickly and sell on a known market rather than one that may drop.

Most successful trappers ship their furs away every week or two, but a few novices follow the waiting policy. That is they hoard their skins and send them away in one shipment.

The waiting policy is a costly one because toward the end of the season the market prices on furs usually drop. Seasonable skins usually sell better at the height of the season because more of the buyers are interested and they meet with a ready sale. Late caught springy skins usually sell better by themselves, Chester, Mass this morning.
