LOVE, HONOUR AND...

... GIVE HER FLOWERS ON HER ANNIVERSARY

THIS is one day a woman never forgets. A bunch of lovely, fragrant flowers will put a glow around her heart, and tell her that you, too, remember. Flowers bring back the magic touch of romance as nothing else can... and renew again, for both of you, the memories of a never-to-be-forgotten day.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it proper to "talk shop" when one is out in society?
A. Not unless someone has asked you a question pertaining to your work. Your work may be very interesting to you, and even to your friends, but to talk it continually in poor taste.

Q. What is indicated when a girl refuses the invitations of a young man without a reasonable excuse?
A. It indicates but one thing—that it is obvious she does not wish to develop the friendship.

Q. If someone starts to tell you a joke you have already heard, should you stop him?
A. No.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I steam velvet to freshen it?
A. Stretch the velvet right side up over a bowl that is two-thirds full of boiling water, and brush the nap gently with a soft brush.

Q. How can I quickly clean pans that are scorched by food adhering to them?
A. These pans should be sprinkled with dry baking soda and allowed to stand for awhile. Then they can be readily and quickly cleaned.

Q. How can I make whipped cream much sweeter?
A. Try adding a small pinch of salt to the cream before whipping.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Monopolistic Wife

Woman Errs in Being Jealous or Mate's Mother And Family

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a young married woman. My husband is good and kind to me, but he loves his mother and his family and I am so jealous of them I cannot stand it. I can't bear it when I see him kiss his mother. I have tried in every way to break him away from his mother, but I have not been able to do it.

Do you think I am too selfish in wanting him to give his family up and have nothing to do with them? He refuses to do so because he says his parents have been so good and kind to him that he can't forget them entirely. What shall I do?
 A MISERABLE WIFE

ANSWER: If you expect to keep your husband in love with you, you will have to conquer your jealousy and learn to conduct yourself like a rational human being, instead of a spoiled brat. If you know anything about human nature at all, you must be aware that when you kill your husband's respect for you, you also slay his love. He can have nothing but contempt for a woman who is so mean and little and self-centered as you are.

WIVES TOO MONOPOLISTIC

Many wives are monopolistic about their husbands and start as soon as they are married to try to separate them from their families. If the man is weak and the wife is determined and shrewish, she often succeeds in doing so. Rather than fight a perpetual battle with his wife over his family, the man gives them up. I have known cases in which a man never went to see his old parents, never wrote them a letter, never sent them a gift, and who was so estranged from his brothers and sisters that he scarcely knew them by sight.

The selfish wife gloated over her triumph and never seemed to realize that while the husband was weak enough to let her dominate him, he secretly revenged himself by hating her. That will be your fate if you keep on trying to alienate your husband from his family.

There is no excuse for a wife's jealousy of her husband's mother, because the love a man has for his wife and the love he has for his mother do not clash. They are entirely different emotions.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Will you advise me on how to keep my home together, as my husband says he has never loved me and has never been happy with me and he wants a divorce? I am aware that

Cook's Corner

CELERY AND OYSTER SCALLOP

1 pint celery
 1 pint oysters
 Crumbs
 Salt, pepper, mace
 Butter
 1 cup hot milk or cream
 1/2 cup white tender celery in half-inch pieces and cook until tender. Butter a baking dish, cover the bottom with crumbs, add a layer of celery and then one of oysters, sprinkle the latter with salt, pepper and a dash of mace, and dot liberally with butter. Repeat until the dish is full, having the crumbs and butter on top.

Dip oyster crackers in milk, let them swell a minute, and with them make a circle around the edge and a smaller one in the middle to my mother-in-law, polite in a hot oven until golden brown. Time in baking, 30 minutes. Temperature 400 degrees. Serves 8.

CUP CAKES WITH CREAM CHEESE ICING

1/2 cup shortening
 1/2 cup sugar
 1-3 cup corn syrup
 2 eggs, beaten
 2 1/2 cups sifted pastry flour
 3 tablespoons corn starch
 4 teaspoons baking powder
 3/4 teaspoon baking soda
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
 1 cup milk or buttermilk
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1/4 cup brown nuts (if available)
 1/2 cup seedless raisins

1/2 cup shortening, add sugar gradually. Add corn syrup and beat well. Beat eggs thoroughly and add. Mix and sift dry ingredients 3 times—reserving 1/4 cup of the flour). Add alternately with corn milk to first mixture. Stir in vanilla. Add nuts and raisins, which have been dredged with the reserved flour. Pour into greased muffin tins, filling 2/3 full, and bake in a moderately hot oven—375 deg. F.—about 20 minutes. Makes about 24 average cakes. Cool, and frost with Cream Cheese Icing.

MOLDED CARROT AND RAISIN SALAD

(Six servings)
 1/2 cup seedless raisins
 1/2 cup vinegar
 1/4 cup sugar
 1 teaspoon salt
 4 teaspoons plain gelatin, softened in
 2 tablespoons cold water
 2 eggs, beaten
 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
 1 teaspoon onion juice
 2 cups ground raw carrots
 1/4 cup finely cut sweet pickle
 1 cup mayonnaise

Cover raisins with boiling water and let stand 5 minutes; drain thoroughly. Add all ingredients except sugar, salt, and vinegar. Pour softened gelatin and dissolve. Pour while hot over beaten eggs, stirring briskly. Add all ingredients except mayonnaise, blend and cool. Whip thick but not firm, add mayonnaise and blend. Pour into mold or in individual molds and chill until firm.

ALTHOUGH there is sign of excellent promise for a gesture of reward and appreciation for abilities, unusual ideas or ingenuity comes from: basking desired and influential sources yet it seems that an erratic, irregular, or extreme move in thought and action may prove devastating to most astute programs or brilliant plans, with drastic and far-reaching denouements. It might be advisable to defer the launching of exceptional ideas until the danger of rash or erratic flairs has vanished.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

"Not understood!" I complained to myself this morning, and sat in judgment on the members of my family at Alderley, until presently I was able to recall continued kindnesses and to remember that only as recently as the wedding, among the guests, James hand (or had mine been the first to move?) had reached out warmly to clasp mine. Human nature is perhaps too demanding of ones own, or they look in the wrong places for tokens of esteem. I wouldn't mind working my fingers to the bone for him! a bride of many years said to me not long ago "If only he would show me that he appreciated it. But I never get as much as a Thank You." I think she forgot for the moment the long tedious days in the field—for her, and the evident concern in his eyes, when she was missing from the kitchen briefly. However, femininity is a faltering estate at best and needs often to be bolstered by those we love and trust.

This came to my mind today, when early and in a hasty step I felt to mark my length—and breath on the good—but hard, earth. "Oh dear!" I moaned, and I'm being near to tears, which at such a time would only be wasted, I smiled wanly, rose and made my way rather painfully to the house, there to determine the extent of my injuries. Fortunately, there were no broken bones, only an aching shoulder, bruised knees (perhaps by way of reminding me to drop to them more frequently) and a twisted elbow. "I—fell," I explained to Jeanie, who found me seated in James' old armchair when she chanced along. "Now, isn't that too bad!" she said in a manner I once learned to my mother-in-law, polite, sympathetic, though "distancing" and with some awe. "Nothing broken, I hope." I swallowed the lump in my throat, smiled brightly managed a "No" and she went out to her house across the lane.

Jack was the next to hear my short tale of woes. I might have made it much longer given a good listener, but of necessity it was brief. "Yes!" I said. "I fell." "And isn't that too bad?" Hurling, I suppose? I nodded. Then he added "Rob wasn't calling me yet was it?" "No," I said. "I fell." "And where were you in such a hurry about?" And let's see, can you move your limbs?" I did with some difficulty. "It's my elbow," I said showing him "and my shoulder—and knees." "I had an awful bad knee myself, Ellen, this Summer." "You—none of you—would care..." I began, and James laughed and said "Now, what would you want us to do, Ellen, stop work and sit around holding your hand? And the turpins not done and this the last day of October?"

So it was, the very last day of the "nut-brown" month. Jamie's Halloween day had come. Jamie came himself and some other small lads after dusk to see again a witch on her broom-stick, who if she did not actually ride up and over the house across the lane, as Jamie had explained to our snooty one moved with a teasing ghostly air. Rob's car lights then disappeared, but returned to allow them another sight of both. The small fellows had their Jack o' Lanterns and were masked and the pumpkin Jamie had hollowed we set in a window so that the broadly smiling face would amuse them and remind older folk, that this was a night given over to the children.

There were treasure trails to be followed indoors, and apples to eat, as well as the plate of fudge. Karolyn had brought. Indeed, "There's no candy to my mind that tastes any better." James said reaching out for a second square of it. And there was fun, and laughter with no sign of tears, and Jeanie and Karolyn had a lunch for all, of sandwiches and doughnuts and a cake with a depth of frosting. Jamie intrigued by the ghostly night at hand quite forgot to dip his nose in the frosting, according to the Mutt dog, or it may be that he is fast growing up and forgetting many childish tricks. But himself was here, a dark shadow about the yard in the moonlight. The grand-daughter was in her cot, for her bed-time had come. "It's too bad," Jamie said nodding his head in the direction of the house across the lane "that she'll not know a thing about this. But next year she will." Jamie's small brother was round eyed at the strange sights but unafraid. "He can walk now," Jamie said, but only around the play pen, assisting himself by holding to the sides, though "wonderful!" James had just agreed. "We have been talking it over, this Halloween which has been so good to us. Very quiet it is here, now that all have gone home. Outdoors all is still and cold. A stick falls to the grate with a sound increased by the quietness. "What's that?" James asks. This is the witching hour.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good!

ject can afford to wait the propitious hour at the turn of the tide. A child born on this day although original, ingenious and exceptionally talented may defeat itself by rushing into action, with half-baked plans. Reflection and patience would serve readily.

SCIENTIFIC ATTACK ON PROBLEM DRINKING
 When we read that a fund of $150,000 has been donated to a medical college and hospital, we naturally have in mind that some wealthy man or woman has contributed the amount toward research in diseases like cancer or infantile paralysis. When we learn that the disease is alcoholism and the organization composed of physicians, clergymen and businessmen, we realize that alcoholism is really a disease and must be fought as vigorously as any other disease that afflicts mankind.

Alcoholism, known as the Research Council on the Problems of Alcohol, organized 10 years ago, is sponsoring individual research projects among scientific institutions to get at the fundamental causes of problem drinking which affects the lives of 750,000 persons in the United States. For every alcoholic there are parents, children and others who are made to suffer because of the grief and distress caused by this disease.

The object of this organization is not only to find out why men and women drink to excess, but also to develop effective methods of treatment and prevention. It hopes to establish research diagnostic (finding causes) and treatment centers in leading medical schools. One already has been established at Cornell University Medical College, New York Hospital under a grant of $150,000 covering a five-year period. What have these research workers discovered as to the cause or causes of alcoholism?

They have found that alcoholism runs in some families just as does rheumatism, tuberculosis, cancer and other diseases. It is called an

THAT'S DIFFICULT

A very attractive blonde boarding a bus carrying in her arms a Pekinese dog, to whom she whispered endless endearments. An elderly woman, sitting opposite, at last could bear it no longer.

"Don't you think," she said tartly to the blonde, "that you would look better with a baby in your arms?"

"No, I don't," the blonde liped sweetly. "You see, I'm not married."

THE SAME FEET

He was a stout man, and his feet were large in proportion. He wore stout boots, too, with broad, sensibly shaped toes. When he came into the shop to buy another pair he had some difficulty in getting what he wanted.

A dozen pairs were shown to him.

"No, no! Square toes — I must have square toes," he insisted.

"But, sir, replied the shop assistant, "these are the most sensibly shaped toes. When he came into the shop to buy another pair he had some difficulty in getting what he wanted.
