

Ottawa, Canada's capital, was the centre of interest in the Dominion for the celebration of the diamond jubilee of confederation. Outstanding features of the Ottawa celebration were the inauguration of the carillon in the peace tower of the parliament building on Dominion Day and the visit to Canby's capital on Saturday of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. New York-Paris flier, in the famous silver-winged "Spirit of St. Louis" with an escort of 12 U. S. army planes. Keeping Up Fertility

With vegetables in full growth the main object of a gardener is to keep them growing at a time and in a manner that will do it. There are two ways to do it. One is to fertilize and cultivate. The other is to cultivate and fertilize. Cultivation is the first and most important. It is when the gardener gets a good start all over that cultivation becomes a real task.

gardener because they are so easy to handle. It is a simple matter to sprinkle the powder along the rows of plants and then gently hoe it down water it in.

Nitrate of soda is a garden standard as a stimulant of growth. This should be watered in. Sprinkle the nitrate thinly and then turn on the sprinkler. Many of the balanced fertilizers contain chemicals that need to be watered in for best results. A good sprinkler that will give a wide distribution of water is sufficient to start the fertilizer into the soil in a very useful garden adjunct and much simpler than holding the hose.

Light dressings of commercial fertilizer two or three weeks apart will be much more effective than heavy ones. The plant can take only a limited amount of the food provided for it and if too heavy dressings are given it is a waste of money to add to the food already in the soil and to make it more readily available for the plant.

After the commercial fertilizer has been applied and wet into the soil, the garden should be gone over with a hoe or cultivator to stir the soil again. Hoing is best done after rains, particularly after heavy downpours which leave the surface cake and crust. The powdering of the soil retains the moisture.

Hot Weather Spinach

It is safe to say that not one gardener in ten ever saw New Zealand spinach, which really isn't a spinach, but answers the same purpose and furnishes excellent greens at a period when it would be impossible to grow real spinach. It is an excellent vegetable to furnish all summer greens. Its real name is tetragonia expansa. The expansive part of the name is readily understood when a gardener watches it expand.

It forms large spreading plants from five to eight feet across, producing a wealth of leaves all summer and flourishing in hot weather. Seeds sown now will give crops in August and all through the fall. The plants need plenty of room to spread and should be planted four feet each way to form a mat of foliage. The seed should be sown in warm water for a few hours before sowing, as otherwise it is slow of germination.

The other reliable midsummer "greens" is furnished by the Swiss chard, a light green leaved beet that does not make a thick root like other beets. A few plants of New Zealand spinach and a row of chard will give an ample supply of greens all summer, taking up when the true spinach leaves off. They are of distinct flavor and both can be grown to good advantage to give a variety in the summer diet.

While the old Swiss chard or silver beet yielded a wealth of leaves some of its new and improved varieties give an astonishing crop. The best known of these is Lucullus. Seed may be planted into July for succession crops but if the leaves are cut off instead of pulling up the plant it will furnish new leaves over a long season. The improved varieties produce a very thick fleshy midrib which may be cooked separately like asparagus and is much liked by some. Though it is of a very mild and delicate flavor, it is best served with butter. It is excellent both midrib and greens, for the summer diet of children and an excellent substitute for spinach.

Fire Destroyed Six Hotels At Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 6.—Fire today destroyed six hotels including the Prescott, Rowland, Leonard, and the Boardwalk, most of which were small frame structures. The fire, starting at the Seaside Amusement Concession consumed the Boardwalk from Missouri Avenue to Arkansas Avenue and drove bathers from the beach when the flames reached an exhibition of the Remington Arms Company at Columbia Place and Boardwalk where 20,000 rounds of ammunition were stored. Five blocks were roped off about the fire area but when the bullets began to hum, the ropes became unnecessary to keep back the huge crowds.

TEACHING THE CHILD TO TELL THE TRUTH.

Children are likely to tell untruths from innocent motives. They have active imaginations and are not always able to discriminate between the illusions of their dreams, things they want to believe, and hope and the actual hard facts. They will gradually outgrow these imaginative visions, and come to see the bald truth as they grow older. They should be encouraged to draw the line between "make believes" and the real truth and not think that they can palm off on Society a line of fictions, as the real truth. Wordsworth says the child comes "trailing clouds of glory" but he loses these delightful hallucinations as he journeys "inland". Rather a pity too, isn't it? By a severe attitude, a harsh tone, or display of sorrow over the acts of a child, a mother can so scare the child that she will make him afraid to tell her the truth lest she punish or scold him or grieve over it's used. To shield himself or her, he will make up another story or hide the truth from her. (Probably George Washington's father did not do to him rough shod and ask him severely who chopped down the chestnut, nor threaten to punish him if he did it, nor to act as though he would be terribly ashamed and humiliated or grieved half sick if his little boy did that. He probably approached young George in a kindly manner and made it easy for him to tell the truth. Then, when he had confessed, his father praised his honesty and told him he would rather have a truthful son than a cherry tree. That made the lad resolve that he would always tell the truth, and that set him a notch higher in integrity. Had the father taken it too seriously, the boy would have determined not to let his father know it next time. This thought, together with a memory of one's own mistakes, might make parents more merciful with childish misdeeds.
