Truman's Aid Plan Answers European Fears

(By J. M. Roberts, Jr., Associated Press News Analyst)

President Truman, presenting the military assistance program to Congress, has answered one of the questions uppermost in the minds of Europeans.

He says specifically that the objective is to prevent invasion of the Atlantic Pact countries, not merely to liberate them in case a war develops.

Europe, impressed by American emphasis on strategic bombing, has wondered if that was all to be expected from the United States in the first months. The war-weary people would take little comfort from the bombing of Russian cities if their own were occupied.

An important part of the pact-and-arms program is the assurance it will give for continued European recovery. The President's expression of policy, however, will have its effect only in direct ratio with the speed in which the policy is implemented.

The administration apparently proposed a $1,000,000,000 program for the first year as enough to convince Russia that the Atlantic Pact means business, and as not too much for the Western economy. But it is really only a beginning.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JOHN N. MACDONALD

There passed away in her home on July 26th, one of the most beloved and older residents of St. John's, Mrs. John N. MacDonald (Effie MacKinnon). She was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on April 28th, 1868, daughter of Mary MacDonal and Lauchlin MacKinnon (Isle of Skye), and enjoyed life as a member of a large family of sisters and brothers. When a young woman, she spent some years in Malden, Mass. On July 6th, 1897 (32 years ago to the date of her passing) she was married to Capt. John N. MacDonald, Kilmuir, who was Inspector of Dredges for many years and who predeceased her in January 19th, 1934. Though of a retiring nature, Mrs. MacDonald was in every sense a true homemaker and a kind loving mother. She led an exceptionally active life in her home, where her quick step and capable hands willingly accepted every task which crossed her path; not only in bringing up her own family, but also in the care of many relatives and friends, whom she made to feel welcome in her home and unfailingly ministered to their needs without any sign of complaint. Mrs. MacDonald became a member in full communion of the Valleyfield Congregation and throughout her whole life was most faithful in her attendance at all services. She loved her Bible and carefully studied its pages. Her prayer life, seemed to be the secret of her steadfast peace and poise. Mrs. MacDonald was for a many years a teacher in the Kilmuir Sunday School, and a charter member of the Valleyfield Auxiliary of the W. M. S. and for a number of years its President. Later she was presented with a Life Membership Certificate. Also she was a valuable and active member of the Women's Institute and on many occasions the meetings were held in her home—a home where young and old loved to visit and where real highland hospitality was extended to stranger and friend.

Mrs. MacDonald is survived by three sons: Neil MacDonald, Fort Churchill, Man.; Rev. Lauchlin MacDonald, M. A., Professor of Philosophy in Mississippi University and John K. MacDonald at home. Four daughters, (Mary) Mrs. W. A. Bruce, Valleyfield; Christine MacDonald, R. N., Presbyterian Hospital, N. Y.; Ann MacDonald, R. N., Oxford, and Katherine MacDonald, B. Sc., R.
