ORWELL A GOOD DAIRY DISTRICT—Orwell and the surrounding districts are ideal for dairying and the breeding of young stock in order to encourage the better production of young stock by leaving the skim milk on the farm. The Orwell Dairy Co. had installed this week an up-to-date pasteurizer and changed the plant from a cheese factory to a creamery. Orwell butter has quite a reputation for its good qualities and no doubt the returns to the farmers will be profitable. The farmers fully realize the advantages of a good creamery in their district and are supporting it unanimously.

MASONIC SERVICE IN CRAPAUD—On Sunday evening, July 31st, St. John's Church was filled to capacity, when True Brothers Lodge attended in a body. The Confederation Jubilee decorations had been left for this service, consisting of Festoons of Red, White and Blue in the Nave, with pure white in the Chancel, thus adding charm to an already beautiful church. The large choir, with Miss Miran at the Organ, gave a spirited lead to the musical portion of the service, while Miss Mullins rendered a solo in her usual pleasing manner. The Rector, who preached for the first time since his illness, suggested reasons for the original organization of Fraternal Societies, pointing out how valuable such societies may be, to the individual, the church and the State, when their ideals are kept upon a high level; and ending with an earnest plea, not only to Masons to all men, for a rugged strength of character and a sturdy, true manliness, in these days when there is a tendency to overlook, condone or excuse immorality, shady dealing or flagrant sin for fear of wounding some person's feelings. The special collection for the Protestant Orphanage, produced a tidy sum which will find its way to that worthy institution in due time.

obnoxious. Take the Klan. The Klan leaders in Indiana have made themselves sufficiently obnoxious so that their organization is crumbling. So, I suppose, all bigotry in America will some day become obnoxious.

Word for Politicians.

"Have you any faith in the common people—the farmers, the workmen, the small householder—will arise to force the bigotry out?" "Yes—and politicians, too. You see, when politicians get the idea that the American people are ready to follow common sense—tolerance rather than intolerance—they will appeal to that sentiment. "Politicians are after votes. The day is coming when they'll go scrambling after tolerance as hotly as they have after intolerance, if they find the public wants liberalism."

"If a loved one in your family was sick again, would you break the law and obtain whisky if the doctor advised it?" "Why, certainly! Anybody who has a normal mind and heart would do it. Our Supreme Court has held that it will make exceptions in the proper cases, even though the literal terms of a statute do not make such exception."

"My whole point," he said, "is that the individual physician in the sick room should prescribe, and not outside physicians or a State Legislature. We've got too many preachers in politics, too many professional men engaging in controversies outside of their field. The country is slowly rebelling against the tyrannical rule of intolerance. I'm not afraid of our future. The Constitution will keep us sane."

Finds Wide Approval

Mr. Gilliom paused. There was a worried look in his eyes. He was afraid, he said, that the readers of this article might get the impression he was a wild-eyed radical, an exponent of license rather than liberty. It was decided, finally, to let the readers make their own conclusions.

Gilliom, to his obvious surprise, is getting more support from Hoosiers and from persons in other parts of the United States than he expected. Governor Ritchie of Maryland, wrote a letter of good wishes.

A Mrs. Irma Perella of Pittsburgh, Pa., wrote that she saved the life of her son by administering medicinal whisky.

A surgeon wrote to denounce the "mischief done when our lawmakers were in a brainstorm of pseudo-reform."

Dr. Paul F. Robinson, coroner of Marion County, Ind., declared: Whisky has a proper place in the practice of medicine. . . . This is particularly true in the cases of serious accidents."

The Rev. Joseph F. Weber, pastor

West Indianapolis, speaks in approval of light wines and beer.

"But I'm not advocating wine and beer," says Mr. Gilliom with a touch of weariness in his voice. All he wanted, he said, was to see that the Indiana dry laws conform with the national Volstead Act.

Over in the little summer community's dining room there stutted forth probably the worst music ever dragged out by a nine-piece orchestra of local talent. Mr. Gilliom smiled, proffered a large, hard hand. "If you'll excuse me," he said. "It's lunch time. My family gets very hungry at lunch time. The boys probably are waiting for me."

Gilliom, the new prophet of the midlands, apparently knows the lash of intolerance right in his own family.
