or not, he felt assured that he spoke the sentiments of the inhabitants of this little island, in common with those of the larger and more important sister colonies, when he expressed the hope that the tie which now so happily bound them to the parent country would long be preserved and that they, her children, while endeavouring to emulate her in her moral and intellectual attributes might continue to grow in national prosperity, in loyal attachment to the throne and constitution of that country.

The Honourable T. H. Haviland of Prince Edward Island, at Charlottetown: He believed that the Provinces would ere long be one great country or nation from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Never was there such an important meeting as this held before in the history of British America, and it may yet be that here, in little Prince Edward Island, was that union formed, which has produced one of the greatest nations on the face of God's earth.

The Honourable Edward Whalen, Prince Edward Island, at Montreal: Of all the attributes of the greatness of Canada, there was one other which he could not overlook. It was to be seen in the personal character of the people of Canada, in the large and generous heart which seemed to draw the light from one end of the Province to the other, unaffected by distinctions of race, nationality or creed. It appeared to feel and give visible manifestation of the feeling that it was capacious enough to enfold within its tendrils every section of British America. The union proposed by the conference in which there were mutual concessions of small sectional claims and a unanimous desire for conciliation, will not when its deliberations are more fully known, alarm any man. Large sectional rights and interests are proposed to be preserved. The connection with the British Crown will not only not be impaired, but will be strengthened and for the preservation of these three institutions which we all value so much and which we hope to transmit to future generations, he thought there was but one remedy, and that remedy was union.

The Honourable Edward Palmer, Attorney General of Prince Edward Island, at Toronto: "The delegates representing the Island will not hesitate to recommend to their people the great union which I hope shortly to see accomplished. We have come here and been delighted with the enterprise of your people. It is not the great hospitality alone that we have met with since we entered within your borders, it is not the kindness which we have received individually or collectively from the people of this Province, which causes us to desire to come into this union. Your excellent institutions of all kinds and your progress in everything that goes to make up a great country, impel us to such a desirable consummation—to form part of the great empire or colony, or whatever you choose to call it, which is to be constructed out of these provinces of British America, sharing the glories of the Mother Country which we all desire to see perpetuated and increased.

The Honourable W. H. Pope, Colonial Secretary of Prince Edward Island, at Toronto said in effect: "The people of the Maritime Provinces do not seek by entering the Confederation to lighten their own burdens by placing a portion of them upon the people of Canada. A scale of taxation lower than that existing in Canada supplied a revenue equal to their necessities, but he believed that the people of the Maritime Provinces desired those advantages which result from union. Many among them are the descendants of the American Loyalists and are acquainted to some extent with the progress made by the old colonies on this continent. At the time when their grandfathers were born the British colonies in America were insignificant, their commerce was utterly unknown. When they left the country its export trade was greater than that of England, when they were born in the days of Queen Anne. It should not be forgotten that the men to whom I allude left their country and the homes in which their children were born

Mid-Day Siesta For Humid Weather

BRISBANE, Queensland, June 29 (C.P.)—Dr. J. Bostock, a prominent medical practitioner, has been concerning himself with the conditions of the workers on the cane-fields of Northern Queensland. That hot, humid atmosphere is not conducive to energy and industrial enthusiasm. Dr. Bostock favors a fairly protracted mid-day siesta.

At present the working day is spent over 12 hours, the actual working time being eight hours and 40 minutes, and sugar producing interests are favorable to an extension of this spread. The suggestion is that work should start at daylight, and after a long siesta in the middle of the day, continue in the cool of the afternoon. This, it is contended, would be beneficial to the workers. F. C. Curlewis, secretary of the Australian Sugar Producers' Association, and W. H. Doherty, secretary of the Queensland Cane Growers' Council are particularly favorable to a long siesta, but the new State Secretary of the Australian Workers' Union contends that the present spread of hours is ample.

The two justices were named by the countries concerned as arbiters to decide whether or not the sinking of the alleged "rum runner," was justified and what compensatory action should be taken, if any.

and emigrated to the ports of the lower provinces, because they desired to live under monarchical institutions and the protection of the flag of Old England.

Honourable Thomas D'Arcy McGee in addressing the students of Bishops' College, Lennoxville, on June 27th, 1884, said:

"Patriotism will increase in Canada as its history is read. No province of any ancient or modern power—not even Gaul when it was a province of Rome—has had nobler imperial names interwoven with its local events. Under the French kings Canada was the theatre of action for a whole series of men of first-rate reputation—men eminent for their energy, their fortitude, their courage, and their accomplishments, for all that constitutes and adorns civil and military reputations. Under our English sovereigns, from the days of Wolfe to those of the late lamented Lord Elgin (to speak only of the dead), our great names are interwoven with some of the best and highest passages in the annals of the Empire. We have not, therefore, a history simply provincial, interesting only to the provincials themselves, but a history which forms an inseparable and conspicuous part in the annals of the best ages of the two first empires in the world, France and England.

"I congratulate you, young gentlemen, natives of Canada, on that fact, and I trust you may, years hence at other convocations, when other dignitaries preside and another age graduates, that you may be enabled to tell your successors how, even within your own time, a great step was taken towards the consolidation and advancement of British North America in the good days when Lord Monck was Governor-General of Canada."

(Quoted by Professor Harvey in a lecture delivered at Emerson, October, 1923).

Honourable John A. Macdonald at Halifax: "The question of colonial union is one of such magnitude that it dwarfs every question on this portion of the continent. It absorbs every idea as far as I am concerned. For twenty long years I have been dragging myself through the dreary waste of colonial politics. I thought there was no end, nothing worthy of ambition, but now I see something which is well worthy of all I have suffered in the cause of my little country. This question has now assumed the position that demands and commands the attention of all the colonies of British America. There may be obstructions, local difficulties may arise, disputes may occur, local jealousies may intervene, but it matters not. The wheel is now re-
