Made-in-Canada Army Trucks Carry British Troops to Smashing Victory

Across the burning sands of Egypt, Canadian-made army trucks are smash against Mussolini's legions. It is regarded as likely they assisted in the capture of Sidi Barrani, which Prime Minister Churchill described as "a victory of the first order." Shown here are some of the vehicles made by General Motors and the Ford Motor Co. of Canada.

Two thousand mechanized units are required for each division, apart from trucks and motorcycles, and it is believed that nearly all the transport equipment in Egypt was sent from the two large motor manufacturing concerns in Canada.

Since this is the first time they have been in action, the makers are eagerly awaiting word of their performance in the navy going at what must have been top speed—the British moved 75 miles in one day, a distance it took the Italians months to gain.
