Red Cross Special

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, July 29—Thirty thousand children without fathers, homes or country are being cared for here through the kindness of the Canadian public. They were snatched from under the Nazi jackboot as the Hun's were invading the British Isles two years ago. They are the sons and daughters of the Channel Islanders who have been left behind as hostages for their German captors. Two years ago the children were playing happily in their sun-scorched fields of their little islands. Then the sky was darkened with the black-crooked wings of the Nazi raiders, and the soil of those ancient isles was fouled with the marching feet of the troops in field gray. A small flotilla of mercy ships raced across the channel to Britain carrying women and children away from the menacing invader.

That was two years ago this summer many children were accompanied by their mothers. Many others were entirely alone—their mothers had sent them to safety but had stayed behind to look after their menfolk. Thousands of children without fathers and mothers were brought to Britain's shores and officialdom scratched a worried path not knowing what to do with such a heavy burden. It was then that the Canadian Red Cross asserted itself with supreme distinction and threw around those little human derelicts the protective net of care and comfort. As each child landed the Red Cross rigged out in clothes and given food-stuffs which the people of Canada had provided.

"Untrivaled All"

That was two years ago and that code of compassion has operated smoothly during the past 12 months. 31,988 children and young people have been distributed among those little isles of the Channel Islands. "Canadian Red Cross overruled all in helping to solve the clothing problem, was the tribute of Right Hon. Lord Justice Du Parc in the annual report just published. Herbert Morrison, who is responsible for the Channel Islanders here, said to me, "By going to the assistance of these refugees the people of Canada demonstrated their deep sympathy in a practical manner. We are knit together by a thousand years of history during which period the people of the islands have rendered notable service to the crown and many are again doing today. We know the hearts of those in the islands are with us and the generous assistance of the Red Cross."

Overseas: Mrs. John Grotto, New Glasgow, N.S., has returned home from a visit to Murray Harbor.

Mrs. William Gerrier, of Trenton, N.S., is enjoying a few weeks visit with relatives and friends in Georgetown, and Charlottetown.

Miss Elizabeth Wood, who visited in Trenton, N.S., for two weeks with relatives, has left on return to her home at Cardigan.

Drowned accidentally: Grey, Jeffrey Albert, Lac, RAF-1336306, J. Grey (guardian) Horley, Surrey, Eng. (The child was drowned July 21 at Cranbrook, B. C.)

Seriously ill: Lytle, Alexander Hugh, Group Capt., C16, Mrs. A. H. Wylie (wife) Ottawa.

Horne, Robie Hector, Sgt. R88053, Mrs. E. H. Horne (wife) 72 Prescott St. Halifax.

Ross, Margaret Stuart, AW, W300640, Mrs. W. M. G. Ross (mother) Edmonton.

Fishermen Punish Own Offenders

Magdalen Island fishermen not only control the catch of the fisheries upon which they depend for their livelihood but they're ready and willing to do something about it if and when any of their number return another year when they have reached legal size. This is in the fishermen's interest just as it is the rule which requires the female lobster bearing eggs which mean many more lobsters on the fishing grounds in years to come and an assurance against the depletion of the fishery.

The Dominion Department of Fisheries designed the regulations and the government made the law and established penalties for any breach of the regulations. The Magdalen co-operative have gone a step further. They passed a by-law to make sure that no member would go unobserved if he were a bit careless in his observance of the size limit. Under their new rule any member fisherman who lands two pounds of undersized lobsters in any one catch, in addition to facing prosecution by fisheries officers for breach of the lobster regulations, will have ten pounds deducted from his total catch by the association. If his account with the co-operative is made up, in other words, the delinquent fisherman will not only face a fine and confiscation but he will also face a penalty within his own group which will cost him the loss of the return from ten pounds of his catch.

This is indisputable evidence of the general approval with which this group of the regulations on size limit. It is evidence too, that "co-operative" in this case does not just mean that the fishermen are banded together only for the advancement of their own interests but they are also being "co-operative" in seeing that the law is observed. It proves that they realize wise restrictions in fishery operations are designed for the fishermen's own benefit and that they are ready to do something about it on their own initiative to see that the regulations are rigidly observed. Altogether it is a condition which makes officials feel that the Magdalen fishermen are really appreciative of the efforts put forth to make sure that lobster fishing continues "good" on Canadian

God Save the King and O Canada as national anthems and entitled to similar recognition.

"That is the position which the government takes and I think it is one which will be generally approved by the country," said Mr. King in comment on an inquiry by A.W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni).

CHERRY PRESERVES

2 pounds pitted sour cherries
1 1/2 pounds sugar
Method: Wash, stem, and pit the cherries. Weigh the pitted fruit and place in a preserving kettle. Add the sugar to the cherries and stir over moderate heat to dissolve the sugar completely. Then bring to the boiling point and cook rapidly until the fruit is clear, skimming as necessary. Pour at once into sterilized jars and seal. Store in a cool, dry place.
