Only Two White Men In County

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

PIERRE, S. D, July 26—Two men!

That's the adult white population of Armstrong County as disclosed today by the 1935 state census.

The nose counters found that Leo O'Neal and Ethan Earl Alexander—both 38 and ranchers were the only white men living in the 530 square mile county. Both are married to Indians. O'Neal has three children, Alexander one.

The census lists 20 Indians in the county.

Ability To See Comfortably

The object of a modern eye service is to enable patients to see comfortably. That means seeing without strain on the eyes. And also the avoidance of many bodily results of eye strain. That thought deserves the consideration of all who are not certain of the condition of their eyes.

WELCOME TO BRIDAL COUPLE — On the evening of July 23rd a large assemblage of people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Wood to welcome home after their honeymoon, their son Wendell and his bride (formrely Miss Ella Edwards, R.N.) and to tender them a miscellaneous shower. Shortly after their arrival and to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Hester Wood, they were lead to the drawing room by little Miss Georgia Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Ward cunningly dressed in yellow taffeta and carrying a lovely bouquet which she presented to the bride. The seats of honor were prettily decorated with maple leaves and white bells. Numerous cut flowers and potted plants added to the beauty of the scene. Soon to approach was a pretty train drawn through the rooms by little Arthur Coffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coffin, Charlottetown, as conductor, and little Ernest Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wood, Royalty, as brakeman. The parcels were opened by Mrs. Laird Jay and the verses read by the Misses Helen and Hester Wood. Mr. Wood made a suitable reply thanking all for their lovely gifts, after which all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Violin solos were played by Miss Helen Wood, accompanied by Miss Hester Wood and vocal solos by Mrs. Harold Gillespie and Miss Sarah Wood, Charlottetown, were much appreciated and heartily encored. Short contests, put on by Mrs. Laird Jay and Miss Ruth Wood brought forth peals of laughter and added much to the enjoyment of all present. Dainty luncheon was served by the ladies, after which all dispersed wishing Wendell and his bride years of happy wedded bliss. A pretty tribute to the bride and groom was paid by the young people of the surrounding communities who gathered to give them a charivari, who, after receiving a treat quietly withdrew.

Col. B. W. Roscoe Re-elected Pres.

Roach Hunt Halts Court Procedure

NEW YORK, July 27—The wheels of justice stopped turning for 20 minutes in Harlem Court Monday in order to permit Magistrate Overton Harris to lead a search for roaches in law books and legal papers on the bench.

Magistrate Harris ordered the search when two large roaches emerged from a copy of the penal code while he was thumbing the pages. Within a few seconds, two more of the pests joined the parade in front of the startled magistrate. He suggested that the custodian of the building have the floor sprinkled with poison after adjournment of court.

Mother To Review Battle For Gloria

NEW YORK, July 28—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, who less than three weeks ago was completely exonerated by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of charges of moral turpitude made during the habeas corpus proceedings instituted by her to regain custody of her 11-year-old daughter, Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, will capitalize on the exoneration on October 4, when she will apply to the appellate division for leave to carry to the Court of Appeals her fight for sole custody of her daughter. This was learned yesterday when Louis D. Frolich served notice on opposing counsel that the application for leave to appeal will be made at the next motion term of the appellate division.

In her application Mrs. Vanderbilt will charge that since she has been given a carte blanche in so far as her private life is concerned, she is being forced to forego the natural rights of parenthood for no greater breach of parental responsibility than is committed daily by other "well-to-do" parents who send their children to boarding schools for the greater part of the year and to summer camps for the remaining months.

Summer Bible School Closes

The Summer Bible School, which was held at St. John's Church, Belfast, came to a successful conclusion, and proved a spiritual uplift to both teachers and classes. Besides the memorizing of Scripture, hymns and prayers, the following "Question and Answer" study books were continued from last year: "The Life of Jesus," "The Bible the Christians' Sacred Book," Old and New Testament History, "The Way of Life," The Twelve Apostles. Primary and Shorter Catechisms. The teachers for the year were Mrs. Wilfred MacWilliam, beginners class; Mrs. Mabel MacEachern, primary; Mr. Reginald MacLean, junior, and Mrs. Robert West, intermediate.

On Sunday evening, July 21st, the Summer Bible School took charge of the service and was much enjoyed by a large audience. Rev. D.L. Griffith presided and catechised the classes on their various studies to which they all answered clearly and promptly. He also was organist for the evening. After the congregation were seated, the teachers and their classes marched in wearing blue and white banners, and occupied the front seats.

Following is the programme:

Doxology—Invocation by Pastor.

The Apostles Creed and Bible Salute—by school.

Hyman, "Dare to be a Daniel."

Scripture verses repeated by school.

Questions on "The Twelve Apostles", intermediate class.

Recitation—by Marion MacKenzie.

Scripture Psalm 121 — primary class.

Questions on "The Life of Jesus" —beginners' class.

Solo and chorus—Joyce MacDonald, "Little Sunbeams."

Recitation — by Mary Margaret MacGregor.

Prayer—by Rev. D.L. Griffith.

Offertory scripture, John 5th, chap. 1-16—by intermediate class.

A vote of thanks was extended to the teachers, parents, and all others who helped to promote the Bible School. The diplomas, certificates and seals which did not arrive in time to be given out at this service, will be distributed next Sabbath morning.

Compromise Bank Bill Is Passed

(Canadian Press)

WASHINGTON, July 27 — Without changing a single word, the United States Senate passed the Compromise Bank Bill designed to increase Washington's control of the country's finances.

There wasn't even a record vote so united were the supporters of the bill intended to impose checks on the ups and downs of the credit barometer.

The measure differs widely from that passed by the House, and was sent to conference with that branch for adjustment.

Liberals who favored the measure but wanted to see greater powers delegated to the Federal Reserve Board to control inflations and deflations pressed only two amendments to a vote. Both were defeated.

One of the motions, defeated 39 to 22, was favored by President Roosevelt. It would have stricken from the bill the provision permitting commercial banks to return to underwriting securities under strict limitations. The President had contended this would open the door to speculation by the banks that brought about the 1929 evils.

The only other roll call sent down to crushing defeat, 59 to 10, the proposal of Senator Nye (R-nd) for a government-owned and operated central bank. Co-authored by Nye and Father Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit, the proposal was offered as a substitute for the credit control section.

WALKS LONG WAY IN SMALL SPACE

(Canadian Press)

REGINA, July 28—George Kanglas, restaurant proprietor, estimates he has walked 132,000 miles in 32 years in his place of business.

Kanglas recently strapped a pedometer to his ankle to find out how many miles his feet covered in his restaurant and found it to be 14 miles in 15 hours—a good day's work.

He has walked more than five times the distance around the equator and gives the average day's travel at 12 miles.

Fire Follows Explosions

ANKARA, Turkey, July 27—A series of heavy explosions in important ammunition dumps serving the Marmora naval base near Ismidt was followed by fire which was still raging tonight.

Military censorship was clamped down and it could not be learned whether there had been any casualties. A number of fire brigades and detachments of troops were called out to fight the flames.

Early Blight Hits N. B. Potato Yield

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

FREDERICTON, N. B., July 27—A survey of the potato crop in New Brunswick this season by officials of the Dominion Plant Pathological Service indicates that early blight is general as a result of the warm and damp weather, but that the outbreak is occurring in mild form only. Early blight is not considered destructive, but it undoubtedly affects the yield of plants by materially reducing the active leaf surface. It is characterized by brownish spots with concentric rings, which occur on the leaves and stems.

Late blight has also been found only in slight form in three localities in the province. Warm, humid conditions enhance the development of this disease. It is one of the most destructive maladies attacking the potato, since it is capable of destroying the foliage as well as the tubers.

Great Need Of Democracy

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

TORONTO, July 27—"Democracy and the press are inseparably bound together," B. K. Sandwell, editor of the Toronto Saturday Night, told delegates to the Canadian weekly newspapers' association convention here.

"The press could not exist without democracy—democracy could not exist without the press," he said. Circulation of newspapers in Italy and Germany had dwindled to half of its former figure since the application of the "muzzle" by dictators, he said.

This, he believed, was sufficient proof the public of those countries had ceased to look upon the press as a vehicle of thought and a source of information.

ELEPHANTINE TROUBLES

ROME, July 28—Richard Halliburton, American traveller and author, who is trying to emulate Hannibal in "conquering Italy" by crossing the Alps on an elephant, struck a snag when Italian authorities at the frontier point of Gran San Bernardo told him he would have to pay a deposit of 50 per cent of the elephant's value.

Halliburton was forced to return to Lucerne, Switzerland, minus the elephant, to obtain funds for the customs deposit—something Hannibal did not have to worry about. Halliburton returned with the money last night, but he still had another modern obstacle to overcome in his journey to Rome—a veterinarian must pass on the elephant' sanitary qualifications before it enters Italy.

Hatfield Still In U.S. Custody

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

CONCORD, N. H., July 27—Captain Freeman Hatfield lost a step today in his fight against extradition from trial in the celebrated Gypsum Queen case, but planned a last ditch stand against removal to Canada.

Judge George Morris dismissed a writ of habeas corpus for the 74 year old retired Canadian skipper and remanded him to the continued custody of United States officials. Hatfield is charged with defrauding the Dominion government of $71,000.

Hatfield's counsel, Allie J. Connor declared he would take the case, if necessary, to the United States Supreme Court.

Hatfield's case has been the subject of many hearings. He was alleged to have collected the $71 000 by representing his schooner, the Gypsum Queen, was sunk by an enemy submarine in 1915. The Canadian government maintains it foundered in a storm.

FACTS ABOUT LIGHTNING

The chances of our being struck by lightning are really very slight. In fact, there is barely one chance in 300,000 that a person will be killed during the year. However, it is comforting to remember that when you see the flash you will know that the lightning has missed you.

Lightning is an electrical spark seeking the earth. Like all electrical discharges, it follows the line of least resistance and seeks the best electrical conductor.

The highest point is most apt to attract lightning. This may be a high tree, a building, a fence, or even an animal or person on flat level ground. The more open the country the greater will be the attraction at that point. Groups of people or animals are more apt to attract lightning than an individual person or animal.

The chimney is the most likely point of a house to be struck and the lightning will follow it to the ground or until it finds an easier path on the way. A metal pipe might provide this, and in order to get from the chimney, the lightning will jump through the air. If indoors during a storm it is best to stay away from the walls, the fireplace, the stove and radiators. The safest spot is usually in the centre of the room, as long as you do not place yourself between the chimney and any good "earth," such as a radiator.

Contrary to general opinion draughts do not attract lightning, and it is not particularly dangerous to stand by an open window.

Never seek shelter under an isolated tree, particularly an Oak or Fir as they are fifteen times as likely to be struck as, for instance, a Beech tree. It is nearly as dangerous to be well out in a clearing by yourself. The safest place is near the tree, which will make it the highest point. If in a group of trees avoid standing under the tallest.

Keep away from wire fences during a storm, and never seek shelter in an isolated building.

Radio aerials do not seem to attract lightning. The reason being, that the wire is so small that it cannot accommodate the terrific electrical charge.

Lightning rods, when properly installed, are an excellent protection. Their main function is not to carry the lightning bolt to the ground as is generally thought, but to disburse the electricity in the air before lightning has occurred.

To determine how far away lightning has struck, count the seconds between the flash and the first sound of thunder. For every five seconds interval you will know that the lightning has struck approximately 1 mile away.

A metal flag pole or a wooden one wired from top to bottom with heavy wire, offers good protection to a small building alongside.—(Ex).

JEWS CLAIM UNFAIRNESS IN TRY OUTS

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

BERLIN, July 27—Charging persistent violation of Nazi pledges Jewish leaders asserted today that the preliminary tryouts that it was unlikely any member of that race would gain a place on Germany's Olympic teams for the 1936 games here.

Nazi spokesmen, in turn, said the failure of any Jews to qualify for German teams thus far had been due to their own incompetence. A member of the staff of the Nazi Sports Commissioner pointed to the establishment of a training camp for Jewish athletes and opportunities given them for participating in the tryouts as evidence of Nazi fairness to all contenders.

"Jews competed in the first tryouts," a Nazi official said, "but none survived."

Prominent Jews, on the other hand, said the factors of widespread anti-Sematic sentiment and restricted training facilities made satisfactory performances by Jewish athletes during the early eliminations virtually impossible.

The latest flare-up over alleged discrimination against Jewish athletes came with the disclosure by the official German Olympic Committee office that there were no Jews among the athletes so far chosen to compete for places on German teams. The Olympic office reported eight of 10 athletes had been chosen for each Olympic sport for the tryouts that eventually will decide the make up of each team.

Only six Jews, among hundreds of other athletes, competed in the trials in Berlin. Among the thousands throughout Germany who trained formally for the eliminations only 20 were Jews who were tutuored by an Aryan instructor at Ettlingen, Baden These figures were given by the Reich's sport department.

Rotate Timber Crop on Coast

(Canadian Press)

VANCOUVER, July 28—Perpetuation of British Columbia's vast timber supply by the century rotation plan is the aim of P. Z. Caverhill, chief forester, and his associates.

The rotation plan is now in operation in the forestry reserves, and experts believe that as a result no forest famine will ever visit British Columbia. Instead, they predict an ever increasing production of mature and young growth timber; scientific utilization of smaller logs for the extraction of silk, and alcohol for whiskey, and for the manufacturing arts.

This plan now covers 22,256 square miles and yearly the area will increase until it embraces the 86,000 square miles of timber growth in the province. By the turn of the century the whole area will be entered. Then, each year's growth will be for sale, just as the agriculturists sells his wheat production yearly.

Should the demand in later years increase above present requirements of 4,000,000,000 board feet of standing trees, the century plan is estimated to produce 8,065,000,000 board feet yearly.

Today there is a waste of 2,800,000,000 board feet through fire, insects and other causes. This loss can be eliminated in the plan through application of scientific care of logs to produce better wood and scientific thinning to eliminate fire hazards.

Huge trees that started growth in the days of Queen Elizabeth, and centuries before, today were a detriment to young timber and a fire hazard. The value of overmature logs was very low because of the excess wastage.

There are 37 reserves entered in the plan up to the present, caring for 14,000,000 acres or 22,256 square miles of timber. Thirteen are situated on the coast and 24 in the interior. Each year an additional 1,000,000 acres is added and by 1950, 25,000,000 acres will be entered.

British Columbia's timber wealth is estimated in a recent report as 263,467,000,000 board feet of mature commercial timber and aged logs. With the rotation plan, only 8,055,000,000 board feet would reach maturity and be of first class quality yearly. A first class log takes from 101 to 120 years to mature, depending on its locality. Those on the coast mature more quickly than the forests of the interior.

SPOTTED FROCKS

Spotted frocks will be particularly fashionable for holiday wear this year. In the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening, they will be seen'

"A holiday wardrobe should include, for morning wear, a natural-coloured linen frock, or coat and skirt, patterned with navy-blue or dark red spots; for the afternoon, a frock of light-coloured spotted muslin or voile, with a white jabot in front or a white muslin collar; for evening wear, a crisp organdie frock with scattered spots embroidered in brightly coloured silks," was the verdict of a London dress designer.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

'Close-ups' and 'Back-lighting'

Proper lighting will add much to the quality of your pictures

WITH the sun so much brighter and stronger now, it is time to exercise a little care in shooting directly into the sun when taking snapshots to avoid "lens-flare" in your pictures. I do not mean by this that you should make it a strict rule not to take pictures with the sun shining directly toward you and your camera for in doing so you will pass by many chances to incorporate fascinating, artistic "back-lighting" in your pictures. However, it's a caution worth remembering.

Lighting is of equal importance with arrangement of the objects or subjects in your proposed picture. It is the variation in the lights and shadows that gives a picture depth and roundness, making the subject stand out from its surroundings. Usually the shadows should be transparent, to a degree, but full in detail. This is obtained by a rather full exposure. If the sun strikes directly in a person's face they are likely to squint and the picture will not be a good likeness. Better have them turn slightly so that they are not bothered by the sun—then you will get a natural, life-like expression. Another point is to avoid making a close-up of a person out in glaring midday sun. At this time of day the strong overhead light casts heavy shadows under the eyes and nose and the picture is far from pleasing. When making a picture of a person during the middle of the day be sure to have him turn his face away from the sun or snap him in bright shade, which can be done very successfully with modern snapshot film.

If the illumination, or sunlight, comes from directly back of the camera, the shadows are more or less lost, giving a flat appearance. When you are a little more advanced, try some early morning or late afternoon shots for splendid pictorial studies for at these hours you get long, fascinating shadows.

Attractive, artistic pictures may be made from a position where you face the sun and shadows fall toward your camera rather than away from it. In "back-lighted" work of this kind, be sure that no sun rays directly strike the lens of your camera. This can often be avoided by standing so that the shadow of a tree trunk, a bush or the corner of a building protects the lens from these direct sun rays.

Under such conditions you should give a slightly longer exposure than would be necessary if the sun rays were directly on the front of the subject. Perhaps the next larger diaphragm opening will let in enough light to record the detail desired in the shaded parts, or, if using a small aperture for increased depth of focus, a slow exposure, 1/10 of a second, or a very short time exposure will bring excellent results. Try it
