ZORA The Invisible

"I come to you to-night, by brothers, to utter a warning. The British Government from whom it would appear nothing can be hidden, has become apprised of our peaceful activities in this land of freedom, and I warn each one of you to be on his guard."

Blayne listened to this meaningless jargon fascinated. That voice—where had he heard it before? In spite of its rather obvious disguise, it was vaguely familiar.

"The Great One, my brothers, tells me that there is a traitor among us—a traitor who strikes at the heart of our Cause. Here came a growing murmur of anger and disapproval; a shuffling of feet, and then . . . a flash and a deafening report that echoed and re-echoed widely through the room, followed quickly by a second revolver shot and a cry that mingled and was drowned amid the confusion and the panic."

CHAPTER XXIV.

Blayne Decides to Act

The young man did not trouble to ask himself why the lights had been turned out in the corridor as he stumbled along. His thoughts were mainly concerned with getting out of the house safely, and with the least possible delay.

Reaching the door at the other end, his hand groped in the dark for the handle. It turned but the door resisted him. It was locked.

"Zora." The girl breathed the word with contempt and loathing, and her eyes flashed a challenge.

Roy Hanson Was Completely Relieved of Pains in the Back

North Devon, N. B., Nov. 17.—(Special)—"I am a young man working on the railway at track work, which requires a great deal of stooping, which is hard on the back," writes Roy Hanson, a resident of this place.

"I cannot tell you," he said, keeping up the pretence with regard to his assumed nationality. "I come from over the sea. I come to find Zora and what do I find? Shots! Confusion! I am at a loss to know what it means."

"Zora." The girl breathed the word with contempt and loathing, and her eyes flashed a challenge.

Death entered the home of John W. McDougall, Argyle Shore on September 26th, 1932, and took therefrom their youngest child Florence Edna, a bright and lovable child of six months.

The remains were followed by a large concourse of friends and neighbors to Argyle Cemetery. The services at the house and grave were conducted by their pastor, Rev. Ewen McDougall.

President Hoover's "chicken-in-every-pot" promise has now gone through a strange transformation. It has become a pretty kettle of fish.

Gleanings From Tryon and Vicinity

Misses Buddy and Polly McDonald of Crapaud spent last week end visiting relatives and friends in Tryon.

A very pleasant evening was spent in the Tryon Public Hall on November 8th, when about one hundred of the young people of Tryon and vicinity gathered to do honor to the newly married couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Muttart and presented them with many useful gifts.

The hand platted him through the darkness surely. He heard a door open and close again. Then the hand released him. Following the metallic snap of an electric switch the sudden flood of light half-blinded him, but from the translucent glare he was conscious of a very beautiful girl standing before him; the girl who had been in the room when he and Webster had first visited the house—Natalie Morrison.

Incredibly stared from the blue vista of her eyes. Her face had paled, but not as to dispel the faint blush from her cheeks.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "And I thought it was Uncle C." There was no mistaking the disappointment in her voice, though Blayne could have seen that even if she had not spoken.

"I am sorry," he murmured, lamely, "if you expected someone else." The vision of her standing there completely captured his imagination. She looked so like a child—a very beautiful, delicate child who has been suddenly disillusioned about life for the first time.

"Are you a friend of Uncle C?" she asked quickly. "Tell me, what has happened? Those shots. . . everything? What does it mean? The police?"

Blayne stared at her. Who on earth was Uncle C? And why should she be so immoderately concerned about him?

"I cannot tell you," he said, keeping up the pretence with regard to his assumed nationality. "I come from over the sea. I come to find Zora and what do I find? Shots! Confusion! I am at a loss to know what it means."

"Zora." The girl breathed the word with contempt and loathing, and her eyes flashed a challenge.

Many friends and relatives in Tryon and elsewhere will be interested in the following clipping: Warren L. Laird passed away at his home, 99 W. W. Street, Sunday, September 18th, leaving his wife, Mrs. Melinda L. Laird, three brothers and two sisters. Mr. Laird was born on Prince Edward Island and when a young man came to the States to live. He had been for 40 years a resident of Winthrop, an active member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was an official, a member of the Brotherhood of that Church and Winthrop Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. Mr. Laird for the past two years had been in ill health, but had recovered sufficiently to attend church and be out of doors. Suffering a relapse he was taken quite suddenly. The residence was filled with friends and associates at the funeral services held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. and the flowers banked around the room and covering the casket were beautiful. Rev. C. Oscar Ford, pastor of First Methodist Episcopal Church officiated and W. W. Walker of Boston was the soloist. Interment was in the Winthrop Cemetery. Richard H. White was the funeral director in charge.

He reached the land where peace and love holds sway And seen the glorious dawning of perpetual day. He who on this earth the Saviour knew, Who lived and served the Master with the faithful few.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Daily News says Val O'Farrell, criminal investigator, has a new clue placing Arthur Barry in the Bronx during the negotiations by Dr. John F. (Jasie) Condon for the return of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby.

Barry, a notorious gem thief and escaped convict, was arrested Saturday night in a New Jersey farmhouse.

O'Farrell, the paper says, was informed by an unidentified taxi-cab driver that Barry was making frequent trips to the Bronx at the time Dr. Condon was advertising for instructions from the kidnapers. "Jasie" later handed over the ransom money to a supposed member of the kidnap band in a Bronx cemetery.

O'Farrell was quoted further as saying that Barry threatened to steal the children of Jesse L. Livermore in an effort to deter Livermore from aiding the state in prosecuting him on a robbery charge.

Dr. Condon could not be reached for comment tonight.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

On the evening of Wednesday, October 19th a large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Allen MacKay gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Haslam, Springfield, to tender them a miscellaneous shower. A well filled basket of pretty and useful gifts were carried in by Misses Luella Todd and Hilda Cutcliffe, while Mrs. Ray Carter opened the parcels and Mrs. Alex Macdonald read the accompanying humorous verses. Mr. MacKay then thanked the donors for their kindness and generosity. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and the remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing. At a late hour all departed for their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. MacKay many years of happy wedded life.—E.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any drugstore, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.
