DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL EVENING - A most successful dance was held under the auspices of the "Carry On Canada Corps" of eastern Kings on Thursday evening, at the new building, now nearing completion, on the McIntyre Highway, in the new frost proof warehouse belonging to Matthew & McLean, Ltd., Souris. This beautiful new building, now nearing completion, was filled to overflowing with merry makers from all parts of the province, who, taking advantage of the completed paved road from end to end of our lovely province, drove to Souris to enjoy the beautiful Autumn scenery and the entertainment. The music was furnished by the military band of the Light Horse Regiment, Charlottetown, and the sincerest gratitude of the Carry On Canada Corps, Eastern Kings is extended to the members of this band for their splendid cooperation and for the great part they played in making this undertaking such an unprecedented success. Many thanks are also tendered to the ladies of the Souris Red Cross, who contributed greatly by their assistance in serving lunches and in other ways towards the financial success of the entertainment, also to Messrs. Matthew & McLean for kindly consenting to give the use of their building for such a successful gathering. The sum of over $300 dollars was realized and it is the intention of the Corps to use these funds for the purpose of forwarding Christmas parcels to our boys in Military Service.

Gay roused at a touch on her shoulder. She opened her eyes and blinked up into the pleasant face of Mathilde, her mother's middle-aged maid. For an instant she lay drowsily smiling, then her eyes widened, she sat erect.

"What time is it?" she asked. "Half past seven, Miss Gay," the woman said smiling. "You asked to be wakened."

"There had been murder done if I hadn't been," Gay tossed back the covers and swung herself into a sitting position on the side of the bed.

"It's snowing," Mathilde held a blue silk negligee embroidered with daisies, knelt with blue satin mules for Gay's feet. "Grand! A white Christmas," Gay drew the negligee around her, wriggled her feet into the mules. "That makes everything practically perfect."

Sea View And Vicinity

Smelt fishing season is now open and the fishermen, taking advantage of the nice days we have had this week.

Mrs. J. MacKay and Mrs. Earl MacKay motored to Kensington on Saturday afternoon and attended the funeral of Mrs. Bradford MacArthur.

The many friends of Mr. Ralph Ritchie are glad to hear of his improvement in his condition. He has been suffering with blood poisoning in his hand for the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Donand and son Clifford were visitors to Summerside on Monday evening.

The Y.P.U. of the Keir Memorial Church held their weekly meeting on Tuesday evening in the Church Hall. A good attendance was present and a very interesting and instructive programme was carried out under the leadership of Miss Dolly Matthews.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murphy, R.C.N., on the birth of an eight and a half pound baby boy at their home in Dartmouth, N. S.

Messrs. Bruce Champion and Bruce MacGowan are spending a few days on furlough at their respective homes.

Mr. John Carson, student preacher at the Keir Memorial Church for the summer months left this week to resume his studies in Montreal. All join in wishing him every success.

Mrs. Lois Green is visiting in Charlottetown the guest of Mrs. Roderick MacDonald, Brighton Rd. A telegram last week conveying silk dressing gown with a scarf knotted under his chin twinkled at her somewhat sleepily over a section of melon. "Worm!" she exclaimed. "I hate you. Aren't you up rather early yourself?" "I didn't heed the ads," he said, mock-tragically. "I failed to do my Christmas shopping early."

"Poor Robert!" Gay smiled. "Though to her father's family it was a mystery, she understood too well why her mother had married Robert. He had, as her mother had, an ingenious zest for living. He was no longer the handsome figure of a man-about-town he had been when he became her step-father. He was getting stout and somewhat florid and his blond hair was receding at the temples, but his spirit was buoyant, his nature restfully uncomplicated and his enjoyment of good food, good sport and gay company remained undiminished. He was kind, and fond of her. His expression, now, as he looked at her across the table and silver and crystal flowers which splintered the light into glittering sparkles, was admiring and interested.

"Go to it, kid," he said. "I'm all for romance myself. If you need moral support, you can count on Uncle Robert."

He was a dear or maybe in her blissful state she felt tender toward all the world. She blew him a kiss and went on along her hair.

In the drawing-room Suki was hanging wreaths made of silvered leaves and bunches of blue glass berries. She knew it was Suki because Togo's province was the kitchen. It occurred to her that it was a little incongruous that small beads on Suki with his flat lemon colored face and black bead eyes should be decorating the apartment for a Christmas festival.

"What would John make of it all, of Suki and Togo who had been with Robert for years, of Mathilde whom her mother had brought back from France, of her mother, of Robert, of Christmas Eve at the apartment? What would he make of the Victorian elegance of 'Dunedin' when they went tomorrow? Could he, as she did, ignore Aunt Flora's disapproval, the curious but premeditated coolness of the relatives who would be there? Panic seized her again. Her spirits sank with the descent of the elevator. She regretted, for an instant, that John was coming. Now at this moment, while her meeting was still in the future, the feeling they had for each other was secure. Now -

But that was absurd. She shook off her fretting fancies. Her spirits lifted when the Negro doorman opened the door for her. "Merry Christmas, William." "Merry Christmas, Miss Graham." "It's nice, isn't it?" "Luck to certain." The Negro's face was lit by an ivory grin. "Good times comin' pretty soon." (To be continued)

NEWSY NATURE NOTES

October is the one month of the twelve which we can recognize at once with one glance at any Canadian landscape. During many of the months the trees are covered in green foliage, and the ground with grass and flowers. And there are many others we see naked limbs and snow covered ground. But in October only are the trees clothed in the glorious colors of autumn, and with still many flowers in full bloom.

This map explains why Hitler covets Dakar, chief city of French West Africa. Already established as the starting point by air for South America, it is the ideal jumping-off place for either peaceful penetration of the new world by Nazi agents, or for an invasion base. It would be useful also for blockade.

Senator Rush Holt Claims British Active

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP)-Senator Rush Holt, isolationist West Virginia Democrat, voiced a claim in the Senate today that President Roosevelt had prevented an investigation of British "propaganda" in the United States.

He claimed Noel Coward, playwright, Sir George Paish, economist, and other Englishmen have been seeking to involve the United States in war against Germany, and that there had been no investigation of their activities "because the President of the United States will not allow an investigation."

Holt said that if the "Union Now" organization and other groups urging support for Britain had been set up under German auspices they would be called "subversive."

"There is pressure from the highest official in this land," he asserted, "not to allow an exposure of British propaganda in America."

Forecasting that soon after the November election the "speed toward war will be greater than it is now," Holt said that "we've reached

All-Steel Minesweeper is Launched

The sad news that Mr. George Simmonds, R.C.N., Halifax was seriously ill, was much regretted by his many friends.

The canvassers for the Red Cross Drive which is now on, are meeting with generous responses. All loyal Canadians join in trying to do their best for such a worthy organization.

Friends in this part of the community will welcome the improvement in the condition of Mrs. Stanford Gay who has been quite ill in the Prince County Hospital.

Of the organizations named by Holt, "Union Now," based on ideas in Clarence Stretts book of that name, advocates federal union of great democracies-the British Commonwealth and the United States, under the name of "Union of the Free." By the "William Allen White Committee" he apparently meant the committee to censure America by aiding the Allies, led by the vigorous editor of the Emporia Gazette. Both these groups have expressed their ideas in full page advertisements. The White Committee advocated the sending of over-age draftees to Britain, and urges removal of restrictions in the way of Americans enlisting in Empire forces, as a means of United States defence.

"Bundles for Britain" is voluntary group organized last January in New York, and is concerned mainly with sending knitted clothing to keep warm British soldiers on patrol and convoy duty in the North Sea and North Atlantic. It now has branches in other cities. It is "inspired by the belief that believers in human liberty, democracy, human decency and freedom of spirit... will wish to render this aid to western civilization's first line of defence."

All three organizations are entirely American in inspiration and set-up. Sir George Paish got into the news in August when Senator Burton Wheeler, like Holt, an isolationist, claimed in the Senate Sir George had told him he was endeavoring to get the United States into the war. Sir George called this a misinterpretation, but in any event was advised by the British embassy.

First Toronto-built naval unit in Canada's increased ship-building program, the minesweeper Nipigon slid down the ways of a Toronto ship-building yard, Sept. 29. Within six months, more of the all-steel vessels will follow it. At LEFT is the trim ship as she splashed into Lake Ontario at the broadside launching. At RIGHT the christening ceremony is caught just as the champagne bottle broke against the ship's nose. Mrs. L. W. Murray, wife of Capt. Murray, R.C.N., officiated. Prayers for the success and safety of the ship were offered by Rev. H. J. Cooy, president of the University of Toronto.
