DUKE OF CORNWALL REACHES MONTREAL

A Grand Demonstration Before Leaving Quebec Yesterday Morning

ROYAL AND VICEREGAL TRAINS ON THE WAY

At Montreal the Duke and Duchess are Guests of Lord Strathcona—Address Presented—War Medals Distributed—Cheering Thousands Line the Streets—The Duchess Receives a Splendid Bouquet—Thanks for Courtesies—Warship Runs Aground—The Duke's Aide Sent to President's Funeral.

THE ROYAL AND VICEREGAL TRAINS.

QUEBEC, Sept. 18.—(Special)—The Royal train left the City at 10 o'clock this morning, the Vice-Regal train with the Governor General, Sir Wilfred Laurier and others half an hour in advance.

A GRAND DEMONSTRATION.

The Royal pair on the rear platform acknowledged the greetings of cheering thousands.

Men lined the warships as the Royal Visitors left the wharf for the shore and cheer after cheer went up. The bands played the National Anthem and big guns thundered a royal salute.

FROM WARSHIP TO TRAIN.

A guard of honor from H. M. S. Crescent received the visitors on the wharf.

No time was lost in leaving for the train where a guard of honor from the Royal Rifles received the visitors. The paths to the train were carpeted.

THANKS FOR COURTESIES.

The Duke warmly thanked Mayor Parent for the courtesy extended and accepted a photograph of Halldman House, Montserrat Falls, once residence of the Duke of Kent.

FINE BOUQUET FOR THE DUCHESS.

A WARSHIP RUNS AGROUND.

H. M. S. Indefatigable and Tribune left early for Montreal and the former ran aground, but floated again.

WAR MEDALS PRESENTED.

The Royal train reached Montreal at three o'clock and the Duke was presented with an address of welcome, after which the distribution of war medals took place.

GUESTS OF LORD STRATHCONA.

The procession then formed and the Royal Visitors were escorted to Lord Strathcona's residence.

GREAT POPULAR ENTHUSIASM.

The route was lined with militia and the people gave a most enthusiastic welcome. The City is crowded with strangers.

DUKE'S AIDE TO ATTEND FUNERAL.

The Duke has sent Commander B. Godwin to attend the funeral of President McKinley's funeral and to convey the regret and sympathy of His Majesty, the King.

S. S. LESSON.

SEPTEMBER 22. TEMPERANCE LESSON.

Prov. 23. 29-35. Memory verses, 29-31. GOLDEN TEXT. Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Prov. 20. 1.

OUTLINE.

1. Intemperance Ruins Happiness, v. 29, 30.
2. Intemperance Ruins Usefulness, v. 31-35.

Date of writing.—About 1050 B. C.

LESSON HELPS.

The lesson is important. The inspired writer draws a full-length picture of the drunkard as he knew him, and it is true in those modern days. The evil of drunkenness is with us, and while much has been done by the church and something by legislation, yet a nuisance remains to be done. Abstinence from strong drink is safe and wise, and he who abstains sets his example against a giant vice.

29. Six questions are asked, and we need not go far for the answer. "The drunkard has 'won,' though he may laugh and frolic, though he may sing, or try to. The mirth which springs from intoxication is not true mirth, or innocent, and it ends in sadness. 'Who hath contentions?'—The drunkard is prone to quarrel without cause. 'Who hath babbling?'—That is, talks and says nothing. 'Who hath wounds without cause?'—That is gained in a honourable cause. The man whose life answers to these questions is not to be ridiculed, but to be pitied and to be saved.

30. "They that tarry long at the wine"—Partly for the reason that they love it and partly because they meet their boon companions in the saloon, where they treat and are treated. The social life is too much connected with the drinking custom, and more temperance places of resort should be opened up. "Mixed wine"—Mixed with opium and other drugs which stupefied. In modern days drunkenness has been increased by the process of distillation and by adulteration. To poison poisons for gain is to some extent a modern art.

31. "Look not thou upon the wine"—For much harm comes to the soul when the eye plays the part of the tempter. That which sparkles may be that which lures to destruction.

32. "At the last"—Very emphatic words these are. Not at the first, for if that were so there would not be much danger, no need to give counsel and to utter the solemn note of warning. The path is one of danger because it does not seem to be so at the first, and youth is thoughtless and does not see the dark and frowning precipice ahead. The evil spirit which lurks in strong drink bites and stings like the spider, and is more destructive than either.

33. Intemperance leads to other sins.

Indeed, all sins seem to be linked together, and he who enters on one kind of sin seldom is content until he sins in other ways.

34. "As he that lieth down in the midst of the sea"—The drunkard is helpless and reckless. He exposes his life to accident and to the attacks of the robber.

35. "They have beaten me, and I felt it not"—How true to the fact in the case! Many a man is knocked down when drunk and does not know what has happened to him. His drunken hours are a blank, and when he comes to himself he can give no account as to what has happened. "I will seek it yet again"—This is strange conduct, and shows that reason has nothing to do with it. Again, that is repeatedly.

Concerning The P. E. Island Hospital.

Charlottetown and the Province generally may well feel justly proud of its splendidly equipped little Hospital. I say little, for when compared with similar institutions in Canada and the United States it is small.

Small only though as applied to the structure, for the operating room, over the piece de resistance to the surgeon's heart and many of the nurses, is quite up to date in its appointments and one has only to read the annual report it sends out to be both surprised and pleased to learn what a number of critical operations are successfully performed in this Institution. Having been a patient within its walls for nearly five weeks and a graduate nurse of the City Hospital, Boston, Mass., I imagine that I am in a position to pass an opinion upon its worth.

With regard to the surgical and medical staff, when I say that they will compare more than favorably with such men as Gay, Doe, Beake and Cheever, who have an international reputation, the meed of praise thus offered to them is about complete.

Many of them take a personal interest in their patients, which always serves as an impetus towards a speedy recovery. The circumscribed limits of their operations permit this, another advantage gained over a larger institution where speed is the most desirable attainment. The Open Wards and Private Rooms have all been furnished by private individuals or Church Organizations, another splendid testimonial to the generous kindness of the Charlottetown people and such prettily appointed rooms as they are, with no suspicion of hospital severity about them.

Many of the front ones look out upon Kensington Range, famous as an ideal spot for Tommy Atkins to distinguish himself at target practice and on passant, watching their manoeuvres from my bedroom windows were most interesting and helped not a little to while away many a tedious hour. Looking through a splendid field glass loaned to me by a friend made a successful "bull's eye" almost within my vision.

The convalescents have both an upper and lower veranda from which they view many delightful bits of scenery, and had I been at the P. E. Island Hospital other than a patient I would have thoroughly enjoyed my sojourn there. And now I come to the nurses, last but by no means least, for do they not play a most important part in the administration? Max O'Rell who was at one time a subject of their tender mercies in a foreign country speaks of them as "ministering Angels." His experience must have been pleasant, for the following which I quote from the delectation of Miss V. — Miss I. — or B. —

"According to my experience, a nurse is a disagreeable person who finds in private nursing exquisite opportunities for asserting her superiority over ordinary prostrate mankind. I know of no more humiliating position for a man than to be in bed having his feverish brow soothed by a sprucely dressed woman bristling with starch, and spotlessness. He would give half his income for his clothes and probably the other half if she would leave him alone and go away altogether. He feels her superiority through every pore; he is abjectly polite, contemptibly conciliatory. If a friend comes to see him he eagerly praises her in case she should be listening behind the screen. He cannot call his soul his own and, what is far more intolerable, neither is he sure that his body really belongs to him.

"The angel who is to relieve our sufferings comes in such a questionable shape. She is first of all securing her personal comfort, much given to complaints about her food and possessing an extraordinary capacity for fancying herself slighted or not regarded at the superior being. She knows herself to be morbidly anxious lest the servants should by some mistake treat her with offensive cordiality, pettish, if the patient gives more trouble than she expected. Oh these good women! What sane man wants to have to do with angels!"

I refrain from any comments upon this pessimistic individual, preferring to give my own personal experience. In the matter of carrying out the doctors' instructions tenderly and skillfully the present nurses at the P. E. I. Hospital excel and would do infinite credit to any institution. One thing which particularly impressed me was the immense advantage they have over nurses trained in larger schools abroad in the matter of surgical operations. As there are no resident physicians or surgeons or "Student Day" they are present and assist at most of the operations. Little wonder they make such efficient nurses.

In conclusion let me say that a hospital romance is not an unheard of thing. Were I permitted to do so I could a tale unfold.
