Montague Home School Ass'n Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Montague Home and School Association was held last evening in the new school with the vice-president, Mr. Arnie Maltby presiding.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Ethel Stewart in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Arnold Wichtman.

It was reported that a substantial sum was realized from the recent "Cavaliers" which was sponsored by the Home and School Association.

It was moved and seconded that the Musical Festival fee be paid. A lengthy discussion took place regarding the purchasing of a duplicating machine for the school after which it was decided to get the opinion of the teachers before making the final decision.

The membership committee was asked to take further steps to increase the membership for the next meeting and an extensive program is planned which should prove to be very interesting and educational. After discussing the need of a greater membership, the meeting adjourned.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carr were here from the City on Wednesday, April 8 visiting Mrs. Carr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baker.

A wedding of interest to many friends here took place in Montreal recently. Catherine daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Deveau, former residents here, now in the City, became the bride of Raymond O'Brien, son of Mr. John R. O'Brien, Halifax, N.S., and the late Mrs. O'Brien. Many friends here of Raymond remember him a number of years ago as a good honest boy with one leg, who collected enough funds travelling on his one leg to buy an artificial leg. Then he went to Montreal and to night school and today at thirty-two is doing well in that busy city still remembering all the good people who helping him get a new start in life. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien scores of years of happiness.

Mrs. James MacDonald and her sister, Miss Geraldine Barry, were recent business visitors to the City.

Souris Hospital is recently in receipt of a splendid donation of vegetables, jams, etc., from the Kingsboro Women's Institute. Included in the donation were seven bags potatoes, 19 bottles chow and potatoes and are quite tame. They eat out of the men's hands. There are two more in the North Lake vicinity and Mr. Fred Rose, Red Point, saw a white working in the wood lot in Kingsboro. One of them ate an apple out of his hand. The beavers are gone, it's the deer now—next thing it will be the largest trout caught.

On Easter Sunday afternoon, in the Baltic Hall, a well performed program was put on by the teachers, leaders and pupils of the Red Point and East Baltic Sunday Schools. It was very largely attended by both old and young from the surrounding districts and much credit is due those in charge of the Easter Sunday program.

The dirt roads certainly have improved in the past week. The men in the districts were out daily with tractors and drags and made a smooth job. The dust is flying in some parts and it won't be long now until the dust will be a real nuisance.

Fine Editorial Tribute To Former Geo'town Man

The Eastern Chronicle, New Glasgow, pays the following impressive editorial tribute to the late Mr. Russell R. Maclean, formerly of Georgetown.

"No comparison, with individual nor type, may be made, in attempting to sum in words the lifetime of Russell Robertson Maclean. If ever there was a man blessed with a character of the kind that mankind has come to describe as a rugged individualist, with the limitations of common decency in the implications of abhorrence of sham and greed, that man was Russell Maclean. Rugged individualist he certainly was, not of the type that exploits his fellowman and dell'te take the rest. To the contrary, when you knew the man behind the terse spoken Russell Maclean, you knew a man of fairness, a man to whom duty was the compelling obligation of life.

"Georgetown, Prince Edward Island, was the place of his birth. In April, 1881, son of Angus and Mary Jane LeBrook Maclean; on the paternal side Russell Maclean was a grandson of a Scottish pioneer who emigrated to the Island from Perth, to whence the family had moved after centuries of life on the Isle of Mull; on the maternal side he was descent of the Channel Islands. With that mixture of salt in blood, it was inevitable that in the new land the family would live by the sea. In Georgetown, Russell Maclean's father, Angus, combined farming with fishing and on the side operated a small general store.

"He was mindful of the responsibilities he bore to society, hence his record of past president of the Rotary Club, the Boy Scouts Association, charter member of Branch 34 of the Canadian Legion, his work during the war with the Air Corps, his countless undertakings on behalf of the Red Cross and kindred organizations. He was a member of Trinity United Church, and of the Masonic order, wherein he passed through the multiple branches to the Shrine.

"It was The Chronicle editor's good fortune to know Mr. Maclean well, since our earliest years. We make no apology for attempting to put forth in print our belief that in Russell Maclean there was the type that is the salt of the earth; just that in his dealings, good husband and father, good citizen, servant to Queen and country.

"We like to remember his talk on history, his interest in the soil and in geology, his considered opinions on current affairs which were distinctly his own, drawn from a blend of idealism, common sense and experience.

"Surviving are his wife and children and five grandchildren. It was his wish that he be interred in his native soil of Prince Edward Island. After a funeral service at his Prince Street home, held on Sunday afternoon, with his pastor, the Rev. C. R. F. MacLennan, D. D., and the Rotary Chaplain, Rev. Joseph Abbott, officiating, the remains were forwarded to Georgetown for burial. Pallbearers were Dr. A. E. Blackett, F. M. Johnson, T. Harold Johnson, E. S. MacKenzie, William Munroe and John Rourke.

"Having reached the age of seventy-four, having accomplished all in his life that any man may expect justly to accomplish, his life ended, after brief illness, in Aberdeen Hospital, on Friday, April 3rd. Filled with years and honors, with the respect of his fellowmen, he could have had few regrets in coming to the end of the road."

Residence in New Glasgow "A year later he came to New Glasgow, where he remained until his death. His first job here was the wholesale fruit and produce concern of Nickerson and Crease, as a traveller. Not long afterwards he formed a partnership with his brother in law, Frank M. Johnson, as dealers in wholesale fruit and produce, and a few years later, Sam Williams came into the partnership. Such was the beginning of the prosperous firm that is today known as Maclean, Johnson, and Williams, Ltd., which is amongst the leaders of its phase of commercial activity, in Eastern Nova Scotia.

"A revealing glimpse of Mr. Maclean's character was given The Eastern Chronicle by a merchant of the community, who referred to his demise. "When the war (second) was on, and we were rationed for goods, Maclean, Johnson and Williams struck quotas. You never had to worry. You had your quota, and you got it not an ounce more nor an ounce less. You never got notice that you would get less, and you never got a get a little more. He was fair and square, the same to every customer." In the competition of business, that uncollected tribute is praise indeed.

"Practical as Russell Maclean was in business, there was an idealistic side to his nature. The best example of this the Chronicle knows of it developed in an incident shortly after the second war. A public meeting had been called, to discuss ways and means of erecting a suitable memorial in tribute to the war dead of New Glasgow. There were diverse opinions expressed on the need of a memorial, of concrete form, such as a tank, or community centre, etc. It was Russell Maclean, when asked for an opinion, who bluntly told the meeting that the spirit in which men and women had given their lives was not based upon material hopes, and that a materialistic approach to a problem that was essentially spiritual in nature could not attain the desired objective.

Community Service "He was mindful of the responsibilities he bore to society, hence his record of past president of the Rotary Club, the Boy Scouts Association, charter member of Branch 34 of the Canadian Legion, his work during the war with the Air Corps, his countless undertakings on behalf of the Red Cross and kindred organizations. He was a member of Trinity United Church, and of the Masonic order, wherein he passed through the multiple branches to the Shrine.
