STOMACH PAINS! Relieved Quickly

Yes, cramps doubled him up at night so he couldn't sleep. How he suffered. It is J. E. Winsor, of Berwick, who writes: "I had my troubles with disordered stomach, cramps and colic. I was so doubled up I felt my end was near at hand. It was night time, and assistance not easy to secure. A neighbor brought me a bottle of Nerviline. One slight dose in water ended the cramp in one minute. No home should be without Nerviline; it is an old-time family remedy. Nerviline drives out pain. All dealers sell Nerviline in 35-cent bottles. Y. P. S. PLAY—The Wheatley Y. P. S. presented their 3-act comedy "The Prince of Liars" at Wheatley River Hall on Friday evening, April 13th. The applause and laughter during the performance indicated that the play was appreciated by the large audience present. A great deal of credit for the successful presentation of the play goes to the director, Miss Olga Buntain. The plot consists chiefly of the misunderstanding and confusion caused when Arthur Hummingtop, of London, England, strays from his path in an attempt to conceal from his mother-in-law a harmless escapade, on which he embarked after reading the Arabian Nights. The title role of Arthur Hummingtop (The Prince of Liars) was effectively handled by Mr. Philip Matheson. When Arthur's mother-in-law, Mrs. Whitehead, comes from a visit, her mother tells her of Arthur's alleged indiscretions. The suspicious and accusing mother-in-law, Mrs. Gillbrand, was well played by Miss Florence MacRae. Rosa (Miss Blanche Stead), was a great hit with the crowd. Mr. Melvin King played the role of Joshua Gillbrand, Mrs. Gillbrand's "darling son," who was not the boy his mother thought him. In spite of the fact that his mother desired a wealthy daughter-in-law, Joshua was similar. One of the chief victims of Hummingtop's fabrications was his friend Ralph Armerod (Mr. Wallace Higgin). Playing opposite Ralph was Arthur's niece from New York, Daisy Maitland (Miss Mabel King). Daisy, the formal and dignified "step-son," the formal and dignified "step-son," was sometimes portrayed by Mr. Gordon Andrews. And the part of Barbara, the maid, Dobson's inamorata, was taken by Miss Blanche MacRae. The specialties consisted of a duet by Mr. Harold Chandler and Miss Auland Smith, and a reading by Wallace Higgin. The play was repeated at Brookfield on the 10th. Here, as an added feature, instrumental music was furnished by Miss Florence MacRae and Mr. Donald MacDonald.

HELIOPOLIS, Egypt, April 19—Built to carry 33 heavily armed infantrymen or alternatively a ton or two of supplies, the Victoria, a standard heavy transport biplane of the British Royal Air Force, was engaged in exacting test flights over the African and Asiatic hinterlands. The annual R.A.F. formation cruise to South Africa, starting from Heliopolis April 24. Heavy transport planes have not previously flown over smaller Cairo-Aden route, though smaller British warplanes have made the journey and flying boats have travelled parallel to it over the Red Sea. The object of recent tests is to prove ground organization of the route.

In an earlier form the Victoria was employed in the evacuation of nearly 600 refugees, representing 11 nations, from Kabul during the Afghan crisis of 1929-30. The airplane was flown from Baghdad to the Indian frontier, from which numerous flights were made over the mountains to the Afghan capital. There was no accident in the course of many difficult journeys over "impossible" country.

Early in 1933, three big planes were called upon to carry to a place of safety nearly 800 women and children in danger because of trouble with the Assyrian population in Iraq. They have also been used for the rapid transport of large bodies of troops. In moved a battalion of infantry was moved by Victoria from Cairo to Baghdad at the sign of serious disturbances among Assyrian levies attached to the Iraqi forces.
