Insidious Eye strain

We use this adjective advisedly. Sufferers from Eye strain may have perfect vision and therefore do not suspect the presence of any eye defect. The motive power of the entire human organism is Nerve Energy. Normal eyes, it is computed utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eye strain is present, a much larger proportion is required. Hence defective eyes, through their consumption of an excessive amount of Nerve Energy, may seriously affect the functioning of other organs of the body, and produce ill health.

Golden Wedding

On Tuesday, November 4th Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Howatt, French River, celebrated the anniversary of their marriage fifty years ago. They still enjoy good health, and are remarkably active. They spent the afternoon with their daughter, Mrs. James Sims. On returning in the evening, they were very much surprised to find their home filled with friends from far and near, who came to congratulate them and wish them many more years of happy married life. Mr. Samuel Bernard was appointed chairman, and after a few remarks by himself called on others who gave complimentary speeches. Then Mrs. A. C. McLeod read the following address:

To Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Howatt, your wedding day, we, your friends and neighbors, gathered in your hospitable home take this opportunity of extending to you our heartfelt congratulations on rounding out one-half century of happy married life.

You have travelled over the smooth and rough places of life together, have had much sunshine and also some shadow, and those joys and sorrows you have shared together.

Your family of four sons and three daughters have grown up among us and have reflected great credit on your home influence and training, and are now doing their share of life's activities. We rejoiced with you in your joy, and we grieved with you in your great sorrow in the death of your youngest and well-beloved daughter Vivian, who was called to the higher life.

You have always taken an active part in the general welfare of the community, and your well-known hospitality is proverbial, for the latch-string of your door was always on the outside.

Of the fifty years of your married life, you have spent forty-five of those in your present home. In looking back from this milestone and remembering your then neighbors who are gone, those lives of James Russel Lowell seem appropriate.

As life runs on the road grows strange. With faces new—and near the end. The milestones into headstones change.

'Neath every one a friend. In token our regard and friendship for you, and as a souvenir of this auspicious occasion we ask you to accept this golden gift, and with it our hope that you may still have many years of happiness in the evening of life among us.

Signed,
Mrs. Newton McLeod then presented the purse of gold. Mrs. Howatt, with a few words thanked them for their kindness, and Mr. Howatt thanked them for the gift for the pleasure it gave him to see them all gathered at his home, and he also took the opportunity to thank the neighbors for all their kindness since he came here to live forty-five years ago.

The rest of the evening was spent very pleasantly. One of the best parts was the supper served by the ladies. When departing for

LETTER OF SYMPATHY

To Sister Della Bell, Borden.

Dear Sister Bell—We the officers and members of Three Sisters Lodge, No. 529 of the L. O. B. A., wish to convey to you our sincere sympathy in the death of your beloved sister the late Mrs. Arthur Jay Borden. Whilst deploring the sad visitation which has come to you, yet it is gratifying to know that she a short time previous to herself participated in the journey which we shall all have to make from the shores of time to the realms of eternity. There is the consolation that no more physical pain has to be endured. In time of affliction such as yours we realize that human sympathy is shallow and of little worth. We therefore commend you to a merciful Providence who has said, I will not leave you comfortless, I will come again and receive you, that where I am there may ye be also. With assurance of our deepest sympathy we remain on behalf of our association.

Dr. Arthur H. Moore
Addresses Rotary

An inspiring eloquent and forceful address by Reverend Dr. Arthur H. Moore, President of King's University, was the big feature of the Rotary programme yesterday afternoon.

The dominant note in Dr. Moore's message was that Armistice Day was a challenge for every citizen to be his best and therefore give his best service to the country. He made a ringing appeal to citizens to stand behind our educational institutions and to take an active interest in those.

Rotarian Percy Pope presided and there was almost a full attendance of Rotarians together with the following guests:—W. F. Tildmarsh, H. G. Rogers, Halifax; Rev. E. M. Malone, Capt. J. Sim of the 'S. S. "Downton"; L. Robson of the Marine Department, R. B. Harris, J. D. Wainwright of Halifax; Major T. Edgar MacNutt and B. W. LePage.

The musical programme included a solo, endorsed by Mr. Robson, and selections by the Black Cat Orchestra.

After referring to the fact that he had led a double life before becoming President of King's University, being a preacher and editor of the secular newspapers, Dr. Moore spoke of his visit to Charlottetown with the members of the Canadian Weekly Press Association in the summer of 1923 and the splendid hospitality extended by the Prince Edward Islanders had made him anxious to return again. His first visit was to this Province about twenty-two years ago.

The subject of his address he announced as "Duty" and then proceeded to deal with the challenge of Armistice Day to the citizens of Canada. We should be better citizens and better men for what had happened during the War, he said. He then quoted Dr. MacRae's immortal lines: "To you we fling the torch." This was the challenge to the citizenship of Canada. We should see something of the vision which our soldiers saw. They went out and gave the world the most glorious manifestation of character recorded in the pages of human history. We should have that vision which the pioneers of old had, who labored and sacrificed that oncoming generations should reap the fruits of their lab or. He declared that we had not passed the age of vision. The golden age of Canada he said was really between 1914 and 1918 when we acquired overseas "little bits of land that will remain forever as Canada."

There are certain things in Canadian citizenship that are to be deplored in our spiritual, social and industrial life, but they are tolerated because our people are not so aggressive as they ought to be in removing them.

After paying a tribute to the work of the Rotary Club he spoke of the relation of citizenship to our educational system. The prime object of education was not in acquiring technical knowledge (though technical institutions have their place and should be supported), but the development of character and training of a man for life, and it is the work of education to enrich that training by cultural influence and developing forces applied during the period of youth.

He then dwelt on the duty of the responsibility resting on all citizens with regard to education. He spoke of the movement to build a great central university in the Maritime Provinces. He said that men with lives instead of being satisfied with dividends from bonds and securities, should get a vision of the dividends to be drawn from investments in the institutions of learning.

In his closing peroration he quoted from Canon Scott's patriotic poem and referred to his feelings on beholding the shores of Canada on returning from abroad last year. It is an inspiration to him, and he had consecrated himself, rededicated his life to the service of Canada.

"Some of the great people who live here," said the hotel manager sadly, "seem to regard our shores and forks as a sort of medicine to be taken after meals."
