Several segments of big city life are interwoven into this story — the two-acted kind. Miss Mayo plays the role of a financially embarrassed daughter of high society. Bennett is an intelligent and ruthless gambler, a new departure for him on the screen. Richard Rober, from the Broadway stage, plays a detective lieutenant of the homicide squad. His part calls for romantic interludes with Miss Mayo in addition to the more dramatic sequences. Hutton plays Miss Mayo's younger brother in the film, graduating from youthful assignments to the more mature role. Helen Westbrook and Tom D'Andrea are also in support.
