NEWSY NOTES

(Continued from page 9) operand of sulphuring is this: lift the corns and after a suitable period of drying, trim off the old (exhausted) corns and roots, and cut off the stalks and leaves close to the new corns. This must be done with a sharp knife or shears, to avoid haggling the stub. Then dip the base of the corn into a bowl of the ordinary commercial sulphur, take out, and store for the winter. I put each kind into a separate cotton bag and store where neither rats nor mice can get to them. I'd like readers to try this treatment on part of their stock this fall, and to report whether they approve of the treatment or not.

Sunspot Maximum Nearing?

We must be nearing the maximum period of sunspots. "Sunspots appear in a cycle of about 11-14 years from one maximum to another," writes Miss Ruth J. Northcott, of the David Dunlap Observatory. The year 1944 had no sunspots and quite possibly the graph took an upward turn that year. C. A. Chant, editor of the Observer's Handbook, says that "the current sunspot cycle has produced the most and largest sunspots ever observed. That of March 1947, and the corresponding group of April 1947, were in each case the largest on record. The maximum of the cycle may be occurring about the beginning of 1948. For the whole of the year 1948 far above average spottedness of the sun may be expected."

In this connection I may recall the warning of Dr. Ralph E. DeLury, physicist at the Dominion Observatory, in The Guardian of February 7, 1948. Dr. DeLury predicted the maximum period of the sunspots in 1948 or 1949, when colder and longer winters, shorter summers, poorer crops, and groucher dispositions would be in order! And he reminded us that scientists believe that certain diseases, as influenza and poliomyelitis, are more prevalent at such seasons. Not until about 1885, when the cycle has swung to another minimum, can the world expect a real relief! The winter of 1947-8 was a real old-fashioned winter, with more snow than we generally get, and there was a good deal of sickness "in a small way." I am inclined, however, to think that the winter of 1948-9 will be the climax of the cycle.

In an old volume of the Encyclopaedia Britannica there is a list of "maximum solar maculae" (that is, sunspots) from 1706 to 1871. This was compiled by the German astronomer Wolf and Fritz, and it is noticeable that the cycles are somewhat irregular as far as the number of years are concerned. In one case the maxima are only seven years apart (1810 and 1817); in another 16 years (1788 and 1804). Making as I suppose, a kind of average, the astronomers of those days gave out that the maxima were 10 years apart. Now, as already indicated, modern astronomers say the period is 11.25 years.

TALLY HO!

MELBOURNE, Australia—(CP)—An English colonial riding at a horse show here had spectators baffled. Resplendent in his colorful uniform, and riding expertly, he kept spectators wondering how — over 12 fences — he was able to keep his monacle in his right eye.

"there is a sentence that deserves repeating—

"I have had to face the possibility that perhaps knowledge is a misfortune and only ignorance can preserve human beings from mutual extermination!"

That knowledge can be a misfortune, and its sequence death, was realized by an unknown writer many centuries ago. To drive home this truth he wrote that wonderful parable in the third chapter of Genesis. So convinced was the writer that man would always put his knowledge to an evil use, that he represented the warning as coming from the Almighty Himself: "If ye eat of the tree of Knowledge ye shall surely die."

Man has at last attained a knowledge that threatens his very existence in nature. How will he make use of it?

Lobster fishermen report serious falling off in the amount of their catches during the past few days. Whether this is a result of the warm weather and southern wind, which always has an adverse effect on lobster catches, or a general fish scarcity remains to be seen and it is hoped that it is not the latter.

EXPORT MORE WOOLLENS

The year was 1792

... the month, May—an historic cargo was aboard the schooner "Fly" when she stood out from Gooderham & Worts wharf.

As her master, James Gooden, felt the lift of Lake Ontario's swells, it is unlikely that his thoughts went beyond the shipmaster's routine concern for his cargo's safe delivery. But this was no ordinary cargo—for the "Fly" carried the first recorded shipment of manufactured goods from Upper Canada!

The "Fly" sailed only to Montreal. Today, 106 years later, by ship and train, truck and plane, Canadian goods go to every part of the world. Canada holds third place among nations in actual volume of international trade.

World Trade Week reminds us of the vital importance of international trade. Let no Canadian forget that our standard of living largely depends on trade—let no Canadian forget that Canada's reputation for reliability depends on the earnest efforts of every individual connected with farm, industry, and business.
