MRS. GUINNESS PERISHED IN FIRE

LAFORT, Ind., May 18.—Identifications of the piece of jaw bone taken from the ruins of the Guinness farmhouse as a portion of Mrs. Belle Guinness' skull bears out most conclusively the contentions of the state regarding the identity of the bodies found in the cellar. A BOMB EXPLODED IN CALCUTTA

CALCUTTA, May 18.—A bomb which had been placed on a street car here was exploded yesterday by the wheel of a cart passing over it, and four natives were injured by the explosion. It was evidently the intention of the perpetrators of the outrage to wreck a street car containing white persons, as notices in Bengali recently have been circulated warning natives not to ride in first class cars. Apparently the bomb was charged with picric acid and not dynamite. This being the fifth attempt within five months to blow up street cars with bombs, much uneasiness has resulted.

NEW PICTURE PROGRAM AT WONDERLAND

Vaudeville Extraordinary—Clyo and Rochelle in Their Attractive Comedy. Illustrated Song

The pictorial portion of the program Wonderland tonight promises well. It is a fine selection of films, the first one being 1000 feet, and depicting fully and most laughably the celebration of a Tin Wedding. All the various articles called into requisition are shown, the jolly courtship of the young couple, the party whose wedding is being celebrated, adding much to the story—while it makes ridiculous situations every where. At the close of the picture of the day, is suggestive of many laughs, and the film throughout is just one scream after another.

A Dog Cop, tells what an intelligent dog can do in the way of detecting a culprit, and the picture is covering a culprit, and the picture is very fine. The detective ability has often been proved in these intelligent pets—in the picture it loses nothing in the depiction, and the dog wins, as would be expected. Clyo and Rochelle repeat the act of last evening, this being the final presentation of it, as tomorrow they should come to Wonderland this evening, for it offers splendid entertainment for all. The illustrated song by Miss Lottie McKinnon is worth far more than the admission price, and the complete show is refined and pleasing.

DANCING CAUSES DEATH OF GIRL

MARSEILLES, May 17.—A passion for dancing has led to the death of a girl named Valentine Taravel, belonging to a wealthy family in the south of France. She began to dance at the age of 4. All through dancing was her chief interest in life, and she refused to translate her every sentiment into rhythmic movements of body.

For years her parents attached no particular importance to her passion but at length it became such an obsession that a doctor was consulted. He prescribed a rest from dancing and a long holiday in a quiet country place. The girl was taken away for two months and came back no better. She was found waltzing one night in her bedroom and was taken to a specialists who gave her sedatives, but could not effect a cure.

SKETCH OF CAREER OF WINSTON CHURCHILL

The Clever Young Statesman Who Has Been Looming Large of Late In The Political Life of The United Kingdom—A Man of Very Many Attainments.

LONDON, May 18.—The following is an appreciation of the character and life-work of Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill:

Mr. Churchill's accession to Cabinet rank gives him in form a position which, in fact, he had already won for himself, that of a Minister able to speak for a great Department of State. I never knew an Under Secretary who achieved so strong a Parliamentary position as Mr. Churchill. True, he had a great subject and a great opportunity. He was the spokesman in the House of Commons of the Government on Colonial affairs during the critical period when it was laboring at the double task which constitutes its main title to fame, the elimination of Chinese labor and the setting up of the fabric of South African self-government.

In the course of this great passage in our policy he made one mistake, a very trifling allowance for so young a hand. Now and then he was a trifle over-confident, over-assertive or over-light in his treatment of opponents. But on the whole he did extraordinary well. He dived deep into his subjects, worked hard, thought clearly, expressed himself at times with remarkable eloquence and felicity. The path he and the Government trod was strewn with pitfalls, and watchful and powerful foes were on the alert to compass his and their fall.

A VICTORIOUS BEGINNING. Mr. Churchill won, clearing all these difficulties. And he fought almost single-handed. Rarely was it necessary for one of his chiefs, "C. B." or Mr. Asquith, to come to the rescue. He was wary and daring by turns; and the party which longed for his discomfiture, for a trip that would have been fatal to him and to the Administration, were disappointed. And he showed moral as well as intellectual qualities. He was loyal and patient, bore blame which he did not deserve and accepted restraint under which he chafed. He liked, of course, the glare and excitement of the footlights before which he lived. But he did not abuse his position.

Now he has won his stars and becomes a Knight of the Round Table that we call the Cabinet. It is hardly a secret that the late Prime Minister thought he had deserved them earlier, as indeed, he had. But he waited his turn with good temper and self-abnegation, and when he got his promotion in a difficult hour, took the honor with its risks. Suddenly he is switched off the great business of Colonial government, just as he was getting ardent in its pursuit, and switched on to the twin problems of home trade and labor at the heart of the Empire. Will he make of them? What is his capacity for such a task? What faculties of mind and heart does he bring to the consideration of questions which he only knows as quick, intuitive intelligence learned by instinct and observation more than by a long course of special labor?

The vessels thus taken off that route will be employed in an Atlantic service, first an irregular line and eventually establishing a strong regular line.
