The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"THE LOVE PENDULUM"

BY MARION RUBINCAM

GIVING UP

Chapter 98

"If one marries for love, one loses love, and if there is nothing else, everything is lost. At least I have this." Her eyes swept the grounds about the house, her mind took in the magnificent house and the staff of servants she managed so efficiently, the huge stables and garages, the farmlands that lay beyond the gardens—and the impressive list of guests who were coming for the week-end.

Nedda had a social secretary now, a pretty little college graduate who kept her engagements straight, filled in a hand at bridge when someone was needed (and played such an intelligent one, that it was never a winning game), planned amusements so no guest ever was bored, and placed people at dinner so they never sat by people they disliked.

"If 'this' brings you any happiness, you are lucky," I answered. "But I don't believe it does."

Nedda laughed, leaning back in her chair, and using her parasol to tease her prize Chow which lay on the terrace at her feet.

"What a lot of odd things have happened to the three of us in the last few years— to you and Shirley and myself," she answered. "I'm luckiest and happiest, because I was cold blooded about the whole only a few years ago we were at thing. Do you remember, Connie, school and used to slip away from Mademoiselle in recreation hours, to buy candy at the village?"

The dog, worried by her parasol got up and moved away from her, Nedda went on:

"Shirley decided love was the only thing in life, so she eloped with a penniless man."

"She was happy enough—"

"For a year or so. She got tired enough of her romantic young beggar, and her poor and virutous life. But she was clever enough not to let her family know it, so she made them settle a handsome allowance on her before she promised to leave him."

"But Nedda—"

"It's true! She got over being in love in no time—she told me. She said it was an experience not to be missed and she knows better now. So she has her allowance, he's getting her divorce, and she'll probably marry the richest man in the city in a few years."

I had not seen Shirley so this was news to me.

"As for you—well, why talk of it! You came off worst of all. I pretended to like my husband, but I married him because I knew he would inherit a lot of money. He has and here we are. I'm going to be the social leader of the country before I'm dead. As for him—well, I like him as well as I ever did."

I smiled to myself. I fancied after all that Nedda cared more for her husband than she pretended. The very zeal with which she kept him interested in her to the exclusion of everyone, proved that. It was more than a desire to be everything to him. She was too lazy to work so hard for just that.

The first carload of guests appeared, in time for luncheon, Nedda moved away to greet them, a slender figure that walked with careful grace, in a gown of cream chiffon and heavy filet lace, a figure that suited exactly her terraced garden and white peacocks and her private strip of ocean.

It was the sort of week-end party Winthrop would have adored. I scarcely saw Nedda after the talk on the terrace, and was glad I had been asked down the evening before the other guests came.

There were motor trips in the afternoon and tennis and swimming for the younger guests who were still not afraid of a little sunburn, and golf for the less active. We wore correct sports costumes in the morning, and dressed for the garden party that every afternoon became. We met for tea, and scattered to put on new and expensive gowns for dinner, and in the evening some of us danced and some played cards. The men gambled in the enormous oak panelled smoking room, with the women gradually drifting in and joining the games as the night went on.

We played until far in the morning, and met next day or rather that very day before luncheon, all of us nervously keyed up to the new program and only a few of us pale from the over-exertion of having a good time. But Nedda, and Nedda's new place, were considered a very great success.

I was assigned a suite of rooms in rose and blue and gilt, pieces of antique French furniture that Nedda had paid thousands for. As I lay in bed and looked about the room, with all its restless lines and gilt and carvings and painted cupids, I suddenly wanted Mother Taylor's house. Restless though that was, it was also homely—it was meant for people who ate boiled beef and dumplings and went to bed before midnight.

So I telegraphed Mother Taylor I was coming within a week. And I lay awake wondering whether I should take little Connie along with me again. In any case, I was giving up this magnificence for some sort of simplicity.

FATHER GIVES FACTS IN DAUGHTER'S CASE

"After the way Tanlac has helped my daughter, I feel that I should tell everybody what a fine medicine it is," is the appreciative statement made recently by J. Dorais, well-known contractor, 210 Boulevard Monkland, Villa St., Laurient, Quebec.

"My daughter, Bertha, was in a run-down condition for a year or more, and nervous indigestion affected her so seriously she had to stay home from school at times. She became very thin and frail, and was so nervous she could hardly write. She could seldom sleep and go so she did not even care for diversion.

"She has gained seventeen pounds by taking Tanlac, and is the picture of health. She eats splendidly, sleeps like an infant, her nerves are steady, she is strong and alert, and enjoys her school work and outdoor life and exercise like other healthy girls. Tanlac is worth its weight in gold."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists... Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. H Murchison, York Point on Thursday, Sept. 19th, when a number of the members of Clyde River Presbyterian Church assembled to bid farewell to Miss Eleanor, prior to her departure for Boston. Mass. She will be one of the principals in an interesting event in a short time, and will make her home in East Pittsburg Penn. The following address was read by Rev. Mr. Colin McNevin and a presentation made of a generous sum of money.

Miss Murchison thanked each and all for their thoughtfulness and the expressions of good-will shown Dainty refreshments were served and after the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" the company dispersed with many good wishes for the future.

Dear Friend:

We have lately heard of your intentions to soon leave our province, so we have met here to night to offer our appreciation for what you have meant to us, and coinvey our best wishes for your future days.

For some years you have filled a large place in our home life, our community life, and our church life. Wherever you went you always brought a smile, which cheered every home that was fortunate to have you as a guest. As a teacher you have served the community well, leaving an inflence on the boys and girls that cannot be weighed or measured. In our church you have been a most faithful warden; your places in the choir and Sabbath School were seldom empty. And now we shall be much the poorer because of your removal. As you leave us taking those fine qualities of heart and head along with, you, we know that some other district will be very much enriched through receiving you as a member; so while we shall feel the loss for many days, we shall not complain. Rather, we shall rejoice that through you we of York Point were able to give such a contribution to the larger society of the world. As you go we should like you to remember that you carry along with you the very best wishes of all your friends. May your days be long and happy and may you have just as much of the good things of this life as you can bear. Along with these wishes we also offer you this, as a small token of our inner feelings and trust that in some measure it may speak to you of the warm place you hold in every heart. We shall miss you but we shall not forget you and trust that ere long we may be privileged in welcoming you back, even though only for a holiday.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach' constipation, topid liver' sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidneys disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

says: "Gertrude Atherton has created in her latest novel, 'Black Oxen,' a vivid story, tremendously appealing in its searching, penetrating analysis of modern life ..... Her people live and grow and are real and the emotion of romance pervades the book. It has the charm of the past and the fascination of the present."

AGREE that "BLACK OXEN" is THE worth while novel of the year.

says: "It has been quite a number of years since I have been fortunate enough to get hold of a story so worth while as Mrs. Atherton's Black Oxen." One cannot find anything modern which is better."
