CHURCH MONEY

An instance of the momentary success in the collection has been noted when the minister published the following soliloquy in the parish magazine:

I'm too small to buy a ticket for a good movie show. I am also too small to buy a box of undetectable rouge. I am even too small to buy one package of good cigarettes.

O. K. SPRAYERS

The O. K. Canadian Sprayer is constructed entirely of steel, iron and brass. The tank is made of heavy galvanized steel with reinforced heads; is well rivetted and soldered so that it is perfectly water-tight.

All connections are securely reinforced and there is no danger of any leaks. It has a capacity of 54 gallons and is fitted with two screens to filter the liquid.

A vertical agitator is used for keeping the liquid thoroughly mixed and it is impossible for the ingredients to settle while the machine is in motion. The driving power is developed from both main wheels and everything is perfectly balanced, thereby allowing all working parts to start instantly upon the movement of the machine.

ATTEND DOMINION DAY CELEBRATIONS.—Mr. and Mrs. James Paton are at present spending a few weeks in London before proceeding to Scotland. Mr. Paton reports rainy weather in London and roof enough to wear a light overcoat. On Dominion Day he attended a number of services in Westminster Abbey and enjoyed it exceedingly. A presentation of Canadian colors service took place in which the Duke of Devonshire and the Hon. Peter C. Larkin, High Commissioner of Canada, took part. From 3.30 p. m. till 5.30, at the Ritz Hotel, the High Commissioner and his lady gave an At-home and at 7.30 a grand dinner was given in the Connaught Rooms, His Royal Highness, Duke of York and Hon. Winston Churchill, making speeches. Mr. Paton attended all three functions and was the only P. E. Islander at the dinner, but at the afternoon reception he met several Islanders, among them the two Miss Palmers, of Charlottetown and their brother, the service at the Abbey was very impressive and the singing of the Canadian Hymns by the Abbey choir and congregation were lovely. The ladies will be particularly interested to know that the cheap sales are now on, the London stores are selling out the balance of their summer stocks, and that prices are much cheaper than three years ago.

Ex-Empress Zita To Stay In Spain

LONDON, July 15.—It is unlikely the Allies will allow the former Empress Zita of Hungary to go to Germany. I was informed today in connection with the report that she is planning to go to Grunewald, near Munich, where her mother is now living.

In fact, it is understood that she will not be allowed to leave Spain for any other place of residence until she gives a pledge she will abstain from all further intrigue for the restoration of the Hapsburgs to the throne.

On her previous departure from Madeira she was not required to give any promise because of the special consideration shown her in view of her physical condition. Now however, neither a change of residence will be permitted nor any money granted her from the former Hapsburg estates until she gives the pledge.

79,000 AMERICAN TOURISTS LAND IN FRANCE TO JUNE 30

PARIS, July 16.—The present rush of American tourists to France constitutes a record, according to the official figures. Between March 1 and June 30, 79,000 landed here, three times the number for the same period in 1919, twenty per cent more than last year and nearly seven times more than in 1913.

WHEAT CUTTING STARTED.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., July 16.—Wheat cutting commenced near Woodstock on Saturday. The season is so early that the farmers were unprepared for it. The crop will be good, but below last year's average.

Corns?

—just say Blue-jay to your druggist Stops Pain Instantly

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in two forms—colorless, clear liquid (one drop does it) and in extra thin plasters. Use whichever form you prefer, plasters or the liquid—the action is the same. Safe, gentle. Made in a world-famed laboratory. Sold by all druggists.

Prize White Beaver & Black, Toronto, Dept. 10 for valuable book, "Correct Care of the Foot."

Walter Hagen, holder of the British open championship thinks that the trouble with a great many short drivers is the fact that they give themselves a lot the worst of it in the start by selecting poor golf clubs.

If one will walk into a golf shop and look around casually picking out here and there a club because it looks good without any thought to the kind of a shaft or the kind of a head it has the chances are that he will get much the worst of it in his purchase.

Not all of the clubs in any one shop are A-1 in every respect. Not every head is made of high grade persimmon nor is every shaft of the best selected hickory. It is true that only about one in twenty shafts are worth putting into a first class club, no business man would throw away nineteen shafts where he used one. If he did, the price of the one club made up would have to be sold for $25.00 to make up for the waste.

The chances are that every shaft purchased would be used by the club maker. In this case it is up to the buyer to pick out a good one, to separate the wheat from the chaff.

The duffers and beginners never could tell a good club from a bad one and unless it was by chance, they would get the poor ones. It is easy to be seen how the best golfers get the best clubs just as a good workman uses only the best tools.

Beginners and duffers once stung do not change as quickly as a star golfer when he finds that he has a poor shaft in his club. It is little wonder, considering all this, that the twenty and thirty handicapped golfers find it difficult to reduce their handicap.

The answer appears to be simple. Get a steel shaft.

Jock's White Collar.

Jock Hutchison is always good natured and usually sees the funny side of the situation even in serious moments. Over in Scotland last summer some Scotchman, a member of the Royal and Ancient so the story goes, asked who's ball it was lying in a trap close by. When he was informed that it was Hutchison's he remarked: "Well I hope he stays there all day. That is what he deserves for playing those ribbed clubs."

Jock was very fond of the Schenck steady putter but he could not use it in England because the Royal and Ancient had put a ban on it. Recently he had a ban on it. Jock was asked to try out the steel shafted club. He was informed before hitting the ball with the club that the United States Golf Association had barred this club from championship.

Jock looked the club over carefully and then let fly as perfect a drive as any golfer ever made. "That feels good," said Jock, "and they have barred this club. Well, the next thing they do to me will be to bar my standing collar."

It will be remembered that Jock occasionally wears a high stiff collar in playing golf.

Confidence Important to Success at Golf.

There's a saying, "there's plenty of luck in golf—good luck and bad but the winning man is the one who takes both as they come, as part of the game." In the main most players will find that luck pretty well evens up, but the trouble is that a golfer will remember better the put that he hit which cost him a short, forgetting the topped mashie that ran dead to the hole or the one that jumped through a bunker and bounded merrily on the green. He will remember the short four footer that rimmed the cup but will have no recollection of the thirty-foot putt that dropped in with a resounding clunk, and he will recall the dozens he has cast aside a short time after buying. During the recent father and son tournament of a metropolitan club, Glen Cove, L. I., an elderly golfer, when complimented on his improved game, was heard to declare:

"It's because of the putter I am using. See it?" and he pulled from his bag one of the most disreputable looking clubs to be found anywhere. "It was the first one I ever bought—twenty-two years ago. I used it for two seasons then decided it was no good and threw it in the attic. Recently I sold my house and went through a lot of stuff that I hadn't touched in years. Among them a number of putters. Well, I tried 'em all out again, but I couldn't only using it right along. Thus, I am willing to bet that I can run down putts from one to forty feet in length."

A Crooked Shaft.

The club in question had at one time boasted a fine hickory shaft, but with age and dampness was bent and twisted to such a state that a bystander humorously put it, "one had to be bow-legged to use it." Yet the owner had the kind of faith that moves mountains. Although he deplored the state of the shaft and said he wished there were such things as steel-shafted clubs in olden days, in that case his much-admired implement would be in no better condition as the day it was brought.

is even more important than getting back on one's game. Confidence or lack of it, making or breaking a player, may come or go at a single shot. Take for instance the case of Walter J. Travis at Sandwich in 1904 in the British amateur. He had been playing good golf, but about ten days before the tournament started he suddenly went wrong in his putting. This was a large blow, and he worked for hours, tried out various stances and grips and all the methods in sight without effect. He was still floundering when the championship got under way, being unable to lay an approach putt close or to sink a short one. Something had happened to break that mystic link which joined confidence with his play. Then right before going to play, he threw aside his own putter in disgust and borrowed one from an American friend.

The first putt he tried went down with a click and from that point on the national champion gave the greatest exhibition of putting any tournament has ever seen. He simply walked through the field, and nothing in his game had been changed except that he had suddenly recovered his confidence with a new putter.

Must Have Patience.

One of the main things for a golfer to remember in starting to get back on his game is that golf above all other things in the world, is a game of infinite patience. Those who expect too much, who are looking for quick returns, worry too much, get peevish and finally careen. In place of working more easily than usual, they have lost their judgment.

No matter how wonderfully a man may be hitting, if he is off his irons or putting poorly he has little chance. A good long drive may save many a poor drive or bad iron shot, but a missed putt spoils the best drive ever made. Vardon has said—and having lost many a championship through his putting is qualified to speak—that one of the greatest and best secrets of a good short game is to keep your absolutely still than do most golfers, who seem to think it matters less in putting when it matters so much more.

In his wisdom, ingenuity and resource, the golfer has tried every way he can think to solve this problem of nerves and doubts by the present and other means scarce by a word. He has had that same new kind of putter introduced to the expectant multitude of harassed players, and now then a thrill runs through the world of devotees, as they receive assurance that at last some special device has been discovered which will make this putting ever afterwards easy.

One of the main things for a golfer to remember in starting to get back on his game is that golf above all other things in the world, is a game of infinite patience. Those who expect too much, who are looking for quick returns, worry too much, get peevish and finally careen. In place of working more easily than usual, they have lost their judgment.
