Behind The Headlines At Ottawa

By Dean Wilson

The Coronation ceremonies and the Imperial Conference have attracted a great many of the leading personalities and officials of the Capital, but a close observation of the Government Offices in the various Departments is productive of many surprises. Under such circumstances one would expect a state of inactivity or a holiday atmosphere, yet that is not the case.

The Hon. Raoul Dandurand, who is acting as Prime Minister in the absence of the Hon. William Lyon MacKenzie King, is a very busy man these days, and a check up of the other Ministers of the Crown shows that the Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Hon. J. L. Isley, Hon. C. D. Howe and the Hon. Norman Rogers, are all engaged in work day and night, and which has caused a story to circulate in the usually well-informed circles that there will be a sudden call for a session of the House of Commons when the official delegation to the Imperial Conference and the Coronation returns from London.

All official statements and reports have tried to create the impression that the next session of the House would not take place until after the Christmas holidays, but these unusual activities on the part of everyone in Ottawa indicates that the Government contemplates the possibility that some extremely important national legislation will have to be passed as a direct and immediate result of the momentous decisions of the Imperial gathering in London. Consequently there is a chance that an unusually early session may be sent out to the Members of the House of Commons to rush to the Capital for a session this fall, and a meeting at such an early date will be no surprise to the close observer of the present doings in Ottawa. Then again it is common talk that an effort will be made by all the various Governments of the British Empire to pass upon the joint decisions of the history-making Conference in London at one and the same time throughout the whole Empire.

It is the first time in the 174 years since Canada has emerged from the primitive colonial development of France into a full-fledged nation that a King of Canada really exists in name as well as fact, because the Coronation finds the Dominion participating in these ceremonies in the Capital of the Motherland as an autonomous nation within the Commonwealth. When King George VI assumed the crown, he also became the King of Canada which is the first time designated with this title. This is the direct outcome of what is known as the statute of Westminster which was agreed upon at the Imperial Conference in 1926, when Canada and the other Dominions gained a full and official standing of nationhood. There is no longer any political links such as existed prior to 1926, and Canada is now a part of the British Empire through sentimentality. The head of the present Government is the Governor-General, but he is the personal representative of the sovereign, and not a delegate of the British Government.

In this coronation year this designation is extremely important because it is not a change in name only since the new standing of the Dominion of Canada infers that a new course of Canadian history will be shaped by the statesmen of the Dominion, and it is certain that Canada will play a far greater and more important role on the international political scene as a direct result of this growth to nationhood. In recent years Canada has used this new power for the purposes of negotiating many trade treaties with foreign powers, but that is only a start on this new course in Canadian history and many highly significant results and consequences are bound to materialize in the near future.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa reported the other day that the wheat bins of the nation were emptier now than at any other time since 1922, and that all signs indicated that the farmers were about to enjoy a harvest of gold such as many have not seen in years. Officials point out that Canadian stocks of wheat total about 118 millions of bushels right now, while it was over 246 millions last year at this same time. Therefore, a very optimistic atmosphere exists in the Governmental circles in Ottawa over the prospects of the farmers of the nation's wheat belt since every report coming to the Capital indicates that Canadian farmers have increased their wheat acreage over that of last summer, and the bright outlook arises from the facts that there are signs of a wheat hunger amongst the war-torn and famine-stricken nations of Europe, and that the world supplies of this product and an expected rise in prices everywhere.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. CHARLES MURCHISON

On the morning of Thursday, April 8th, the people of Glen William and surrounding districts learned with a feeling of sadness that death had removed from their midst a much beloved and greatly respected member of the community in the person of Mrs. Charles Murchison.

Three days previous to her death, and while engaged in her household duties, she was suddenly stricken with apoplexy from which she never regained consciousness, but peacefully passed away on the above mentioned date.

The deceased who was in her 74th year was almost a life long resident of Glen William, having spent many of her happy girlhood days there, and to where she again later returned as the bride of Charles Murchison. When Mr. and Mrs. Murchison set up their home in what was then a comparatively new settlement, no doubt they together encountered many of the hardships of pioneer life at present, but the home established more than fifty years ago, was built on a foundation of love, unselfishness and consideration for others in an unusual degree, shown by the inmates for each other as well as for the "stranger within their gates".

Into this happy home were born seven children: John, at home, who with his kind, good wife, is now the mainstay of his father in his declining years; Simon in Washington; Margaret (Mrs. J. J. Kore) New York City; Jimena, (Mrs. Hayo Rodenburg), New Orleans; Elizabeth (Mrs. Nell McPherson) Glen Martin. Two little boys, John Angus and John James died in early childhood.

Besides the members of her own immediate family, Mrs. Murchison is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Sarah Bruce, Heatherdale; Mrs. John McKenzie, Edmonton; Rev. Donald Finlayson, Spokane; Angus in Boston; and James in Haverhill, Mass.

To her bereaved husband and family and other relatives the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends is extended in the loss of one so near and dear to them. The funeral services were conducted at her late home and at the grave in Caledonia cemetery, on Saturday, April 10th, by Rev. T. R. Goudge, and were attended, despite the very inclement weather, by a large gathering who came to pay their last tribute of respect to one of whom it might fittingly be said: she had many friends but of enemies she had none.

SLAUGHTER FUR-BEARING ANIMALS

REGINA, May 5—(CP)—Fur-bearing and big game animals will become extinct in Saskatchewan unless measures are taken for their protection, D. A. Hall, Liberal member of the Saskatchewan legislature for Athabasca, declared in the legislature just before adjournment.

He predicted wild life would not last for long when civilization got into the far North. At the new northern mining camp of Goldfields during the past year barren land caribou had been slaughtered due to shortage of food supplies. One man was reported to have killed 500 and another 600 of these animals.

The fur situation in the north this year was the worst it had ever been. Over-trapping was partly responsible and there was also a low ebb in the fur-bearing animal cycle.

Mr. Hall suggested a game preserve near Goldfields to protect wild life.

TRYON

The Utopian Society of the United Church in Tryon, entertained the members of the B. Y. F. U. at a very enjoyable social on Friday evening, April 30th. The program opened with a sing-song, followed by an unique debate. The subject for debate was "Resolved, That there should be thirteen months in the year." The negative won. Those taking part were Miss

Miss Lilla Wright has recently returned from Florida where she spent the winter months.

"Mrs. Sarah MacKenzie plans to leave the middle of May for Lake Placid, New York, where she will spend some time with her daughter."
