Klark-Urban Co. at The Prince Edward Next Week

Few plays in theatrical history have created so great and wide-spread a "friendly enemies" success as the famous comedy success which the KLARK-URBAN CO. will present at the Prince Edward Theatre during their engagement of Thursday October 10. "Friendly Enemies" is undoubtedly the most popular success of the last decade. It has been an overwhelming hit not only throughout the United States but in London and the British provinces. The number of people who have seen it runs into millions. The play is the work of Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman, both of them among the foremost of American playwrights. The story is too familiar to need recounting here. It concerns the relations of two German Americans one of them intensely loyal to America, the other still harboring a passionate affection for Germany. Both of them are humanly humorous, delightful characters. During the play the clash of these two characters, furnishes the brightest, cleverest entertainment since the palmy days of Weber and Fields. But "Friendly Enemies" is also a timeliness and vigour of theme, a pathos, a romantic interest, and a humanness. The play has become so vital a part of contemporary dramatic history that no playgoer can afford to miss it. Seats are on sale at the Theatre ticket office Prices 37c 52c 80c.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ALEXANDER MCKINNON

Mrs. Alexander McKinnon died at New Annapolis on Sept. 22nd, having reached the advanced age of seventy-eight years. In maidenhood she was Bridget Gillis and all through life she discharged her many duties, in whatever relation with religious exactitude, rearing a large family and assistance made effective in securing for them a thorough and practical education. The surviving members of the family are Mrs. L. Gillis and Mrs. Nellie Gillis, Cohasset, Mass., one sister, Mrs. W. Haggerty, New Annapolis, Miss Annie and John J. at home.

She was buried in Indian River on September 24, the pallbearers being D. C. McKinnon, N. J. McNeill, Jas. Pendergast, J. A. Haggerty, R. J. Haggerty and H. Schurman. The burial services were performed by the pastor, Rev. Mr. D. J. Gillis. Her memory will ever live in the minds of the many friends who know the impression a good Christian life makes upon the lives of associating friends. Y.

S. S. Naval Craft Now At Gibraltar

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 6.—The United States dreadnaught, Utah, with Vice-Admiral A. T. Long, commander-in-chief of the European station, has arrived here. She will await the arrival of the cruiser Pittsburg, which sailed from Philadelphia yesterday and to which the Admiralty flag will be transferred, the Pittsburg then becoming the flagship of the United States Naval forces in European waters, the Utah returning to home waters.

Colleague Examining

merely a matter of pass or plough, erring on the side of leniency is not the same grave offence as is the opposite. Here again the colleague examiner is a correcting force. Presumably, except in the cases of the fair sex, the charm is one which takes some time to act, and the extern examiner will gently indicate that in his opinion the marks should be so much lower.

Here the objector may suggest that this possible difference of opinion between two examiners is a strong argument against their duplication. In my experience occasion for disagreement seldom arises. The practice usually is to strike a mean between the marks awarded by the two examiners. It is quite astonishing how close is the similarity between the standards of men who really know their subject. The man who fails to size up a candidate properly is usually a man who is not himself a teacher.

Another argument for colleague examining is that a duty shared is a duty lightened. This is not merely that the two examiners may correct each their own half of the answers to the written questions, but in oral examining it is a very great relief for one examiner to mark while the other asks questions. In this way a breathing space is secured, brains last long in a fresh condition and tempers stand the strain.

It may be reasonably argued, where a university department consists of several teachers each of whom takes his or her part in the examining, that this more than meets requirements in relieving pressure and avoiding the one examiner test. I am not at all sure that it does. One of the chief advantages of colleague examining where one at least of the examiners comes from another university is that new and different emphasis is given to the various branches of the subject. A teacher, especially if he is a man of pronounced views and well on in life, is too apt to lay special emphasis always upon certain things. The whole department tends to take on this special colouring. The student, quick to save himself time and trouble, learns only the professor's views, knowing that he will be examined along these lines. If on the other hand a teacher from a totally different school is introduced the student finds it necessary to broaden his reading. The junior teaching staff sees evidence of this because when a new extern examiner is appointed the candidates, always on the outlook for saving time and trouble, at once make enquiries as to the special fads and follies of the new man. This may be taken as "giving the show away," only a few more facts having to be added to the stock in trade of the examinee; but in the end it certainly results in the man getting a broader view of his subject.

However, the main arguments to my mind for the adoption of the colleague examiner are to be found not in the increased efficiency and fairness of the examining, but in the indirect results which it has on the university itself and on university politics. When the extern examiner, commonly the head of a department in another school, comes up to fulfill his duties, as a rule he stays as guest with his co-examiner; in any case the two spend a number of hours, possibly days, together. In the case of the scientific subjects they go over the laboratories and museums, selecting material for the practical examinations, and they chat over methods of teaching, preparation of specimens, etc., etc. I may frankly say that I have never gone away from a department in which I have been examiner (and I have examined in some six or eight centres outside my own school) without taking with me some piece of useful information which has been of value in my teaching or other work.

But colleague examining has a wider importance—it cements the friendship of the various universities. Not only are the corresponding departments linked, by friendship and co-operation, but owing to opportunities of meeting men working in other lines the staffs of the universities come to know each other well. Thus the way is prepared for a common policy when great matters have to be decided upon.

Colleague examining has been in existence for many decades in the old country. It is there that the author's experience has been obtained. To a certain extent it exists in Canada, e.g. in the case of the Dominion Medical Examining Board. But as far as Canadian Universities are concerned it is non-existent and there is no valid reason why this should be so. To be sure the distance between the various educational centres is considerable; but it is not too great and the author in the short time he has been in Canada has realized that the Universities of the Dominion need all the cementing they can get. Much more might be done for higher education, and collaboration. Colleague examining would go a long way to secure this.

Russians Going Back to Homeland

SEBESCH, Russia, Oct. 6.—Russians who fled abroad from Bolshevism in the early days of the revolution and who have since found life in the refugee colonies of Paris, Berlin, London and Prague a constant struggle to keep their heads above the water in uncongenial foreign surroundings, are returning home in constantly increasing numbers.

At the same time the Soviet regime is banishing other Russians from the country for one reason or another, and the two streams of humanity meet daily at this Russian-Latvian frontier station. Approximately 150 college professors, publicists and other intellectuals have lately been sent out of Russia charged with underground secret political activity against the Soviet Government, or they were unable to reconcile themselves to the development of the Communist system and were, therefore, of no assistance to Russia. Often the returning exile and the new exile has a few moments here to retrace experiences or express hopes for the future.

Much as they may rant against the present Government, many of these latest exiles, when ordered out of the country, have displayed great emotion and expressed the hope that they would be allowed to stay.

The returning Russians generally seem happier than those going out. Some of them have seen that life abroad has become increasingly difficult for Russians, and they much prefer to return to their native land at home than to continue the struggle in foreign lands where Governments are not sympathetic.

Among the most recent of the returning Russians were several who had occupied important diplomatic posts abroad during the Czaristic and Kerensky regime. The Russians now being exiled abroad cannot return home for three years, according to the provisions of the new banishment decree.

Homelessness for their native steppes is the reason advanced for the efforts of some thirty thousand Don Cossacks, now refugees in Czechoslovakia and elsewhere, who are seeking permission to return to Russia. They have sent General Gnilovoyoff, who was a member of the Government of the Don Cossack republic which fought the Soviet power, to Moscow to negotiate conditions for their return. They fled from Russia during the civil war.

DOCTORING A TREE It often happens that a rot develops in some part of a tree, and has to be cut away in order to prevent it from spreading. A new tool has been invented for drilling out the rotted parts of big trees which is very like a huge dentist's drill. It weighs nearly thirty pounds, and is driven by an electric motor. The mechanical tree-drill is the result of many years of experimental work by tree surgeons. Married life in a flat has a tendency to become that way.

"SOFCO"

SUNSHINE ONE REGISTER PIPELESS FURNACE

Means summer warmth the whole winter through

McCLARY'S One Register Pipeless System is most economical of fuel. As the register is directly above the furnace every unit of heat passes directly to the rooms to be heated. The cool air is removed from the house as the warm air enters, therefore there is no resistance to the heat circulation and no energy is wasted. The circulation of the air is free throughout the house, doing away with all the friction and pockets which help to retard the circulation of the warm air. The furnace is insulated by the cold air between the outside and inside casings, therefore no heat can escape in the basement. This is most important where a cool cellar is desired for fruit and vegetables. It is obvious that for houses already built the One Register Pipeless System is the ideal installation. The minimum excavation necessary is 6 ft. square by 6 ft. deep instead of under the whole house. It can be installed for very little more money than the old-fashioned Base-Burner.

The "SOFCO" Sunshine Furnace burns hard or soft coal, coke, wood, or any thing that is combustible, as it has a CAST-IRON fire-pot on which the intensest heat has little effect.

Its strength and massive construction, its generous proportions make a heating plant for a lifetime's service.

No. 91 "SOFCO" Heating Capacity 15,000 ft. Price $180.00
No. 93 "SOFCO" Heating Capacity 25,000 ft. Price $225.00

RADIUM ONE REGISTER PIPELESS FURNACE

McCLARY'S RADIUM pipeless furnace is made to meet the demand for a moderate priced heating plant. It is made with a steel fire-pot for the use of hard coal or wood only, and everything that can be said of the "SOFCO" Sunshine applies equally to the RADIUM.

No. 316 Radium, Heating Capacity 10,000 ft. Price $125.00
No. 419 Radium, Heating Capacity 14,000 ft. Price $148.00
No. 421 Radium, Heating Capacity 18,000 ft. Price $177.50
