PLAY WELL STAGED.—The New Glasgow Dramatic Club presented their five Act Comedy Drama, "The Deacon" in New Glasgow Hall on Friday, March 21st. The hall was packed to the doors—many being unable to secure standing room. To make special mention of those taking part in the drama would take up too much time and space suffice it to say each did their part admirably holding the vast audience in rapt attention. The special acts between the scenes by Mr. J. Austin Trainor and his little daughter Mary were enthusiastically received and both will at any time receive a hearty welcome in New Glasgow gathering. A more extended report of this Drama will appear later.—Com.

NEW GLASGOW.—The play, "The Country Squire" advertised for the 12th and 13th at New Glasgow Hall, was not staged on account of unfavorable weather conditions, until the 14th and 15th respectively. On Thursday evening the 13th the audience was principally composed of the New Glasgow people and considering the roads and storm, was good. On Saturday the 15th the spacious hall was well filled, the surrounding districts of Hunter River, Bradalbane, Hazelgrove, Wheatley River, Brackley, North and South Rustloo, Mayfield and Cavendish were well represented; despite the heavy travelling. The cast of characters was: Squire Gray—Alder Dickleson; Anthony Ross—Eric Stevenson; Jack Carter—Herbert Stevenson; John Tarborrow—E. N. Hill; Barney McGuire—Richard Dickleson; Ben Carleton—Lorne Stevenson; Solomon Isaac—William Semple; Mason—Mervin Bulman; Judge Hardacre—Burton Stevenson; Alice—Mrs. H. E. Hill; Cynthia—Mrs. E. N. Hill; Missy—Musa Stevenson; Bridget MacGuire—Ruth Dickleson. This play of four acts was well staged—each and all doing their part creditably. Between the acts the audience was favored with the following numbers:—Solo, Miss H. Kennedy, (encored); Reading, "Immigrants at Winnipeg" by Dr. George Green; Dr. Green responded to an encore with Dr. Drummonds, "The stove-pipe-hole"; Solo, Mr. Herbert Stevenson, "encored"; Duet, Messrs. Richard Dickleson and Lorne Stevenson, Mr. Lorne Stevenson in a few well chosen words thanked the audience for their patronage, and good order and intimated that an excellent play would be staged in New Glasgow on Friday night, December 21st, and bespoke another treat for the public. The singing of the National Anthem brought the entertainment to a close.—M.

McKIM'S DIRECTORY OF CANADIAN PUBLICATIONS

There are 1,499 newspapers and regularly published periodicals in Canada, against 1,553 a year ago. Daily newspapers have decreased from 121 to 114; semi-weeklies from 34 to 30; and weeklies from 1,002 to 975. On the other hand, a small increase has taken place during the year in the number of monthly and semi-monthly periodicals.

These facts are shown in McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications, under which name the Seventeenth Edition of the Canadian Newspaper Directory has just been issued. It is the only complete directory of the publications of Canada and Newfoundland, giving accurate, physical and circulation details of each publication.

At the back of the book are several lists of publications arranged for convenient use by the advertiser. In the preface it modestly states that it is only because of the service it renders to advertisers that it has become and remained the largest Advertising Agency in Canada.

The price of McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications is $3. Copies may be had from the McKim offices at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Hamilton, and London, England, 6 North St. W. C. 2.

IN MEMORIAM

A FRIEND'S TRIBUTE

The sad news has just been received that Mr. Thomas Glover, formerly one of the highly respected members of the 2nd Canadian Siege Battery, died very suddenly in Strathburg, Sask.

This is the second case of death that has saddened the home of Mr. David Glover in the last year. As one of the members of the old battery and an intimate friend of the deceased I can assure his bereaved parents that although the shock of sudden death is always severe, they can have the consolation that Tommy was a young man of sterling character with no enemies and many friends.

To such men as him we owe the success that followed our battery wherever we went.

He was fearless and during the three and a half years we served our country together, I can never recall having heard him murmur at any one of the intolerable conditions which we sometimes encountered. His untimely death is no doubt due, largely to the deadly German gas which, slowly but surely, is still taking its unwonted toll from the ranks of our survivors.

"Brother, Thy life has flown into that promised land. We there shall meet you bye and bye. And clinging you hand in hand." On behalf of his Comrades in the late war. W. L. Jenkins.

HON. HUGH GUTHRIE M. P. EXPOSES THE PROGRESSIVES

In an Able Speech He Points Out That in Ninety Per Cent of the Cases All You Have to Do is To Scratch a Progressive And You Get a Grit.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (South Wellington): I agree with those who take the view that it is not proper to mention any question of tariff reduction or tariff increase in the Speech from the Throne. I have been a member of the House for a good many years and I can not recall a single instance in which this has been done. I can see very very grave reasons indeed why it should not be done; I can see no reason why it should be done. During the first session in which I had the honour to sit in this House, a constituent of mine requested me to ascertain if the government contemplated any change in the duty on books, as he expected an importation from the United States. In my innocence I approached the veteran Finance Minister of the Liberal party (Mr. Fielding), who was Finance Minister also at that time, and made the inquiry of him. Why his very look at himself that he has at the present time almost the whole Progressive party in his basket. That was the purpose of putting this tariff statement in the Speech from the Throne. I do not know that my illustration of fishing for Progressive votes is as apt as the illustration given by my right hon. leader in his opening speech of this session, where he referred to the philosophy of Samuel Butler as expressed in that simple couplet which he placed on Hansard, that Round white stones will serve, As well as eggs to make hens lay. Such was the homely philosophy of a very ancient rhymist and philosopher who lived in the days of the Stuart Kings in England. The philosophy is pretty sound to-day. Carrying the inquiry just a little further I wonder which particular member of the government devised this wonderful scheme of the next egg. Thinking it over last night I came down on the train I thought that probably this scheme had its origin in the fertile mind of our good friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Motherwell). He takes place immediately in sugar. So it is with agricultural implements: the announcement that a reduction is going to be made has caused great business for the purpose, in this country. Farmers will not order, jobbers will not order, manufacturers are fearful of going ahead; they want to know what is going to happen before they enter upon any new engagements.

To my mind, the statement contained in the Speech from the Throne in this regard is a very grave impropriety. I do not believe that under normal circumstances the Prime Minister would have committed the error or have allowed it to be committed. But I believe there was a direct and positive reason why the statement was made at this particular time in the Speech from the Throne. This government is known minority Government; it has not a majority of the members of the House in support of it—not openly, at all events. The government had to give some positive assurance which would enable them to secure support from the Progressives in the House from the opening day of parliament; the government could not wait for all budget. Many important questions usually arise in this House early in the session which are voted upon before the budget is brought down, and in order to feel secure from the very opening day the government deliberately placed this improper statement of fiscal policy in the

had been in falling physical condition for the past year or two, but due to loving care and a strong desire to cling to earth as long as possible, he was spared till the above date, when, worn out with the onslaughts of the gradually approaching Grim Reaper, he calmly and resignedly breathed his soul into the hands of Him who created him.

Mr. Woods was one of those men whom to know was a pleasure, and a resident of this, his native place who will long be missed, for his was a familiar figure at every assembly where the people were wont to congregate—at the church, at the corner grocery, at the school meeting, at the political meeting, at the concert, the basket social, and ever was "Tom" (as he was fondly called) in the midst of them with his cheery quaint observations and ready wit and wish to help out every community movement in which by whom initiated, so long as it tended towards the good of his neighbor or neighborhood.

On Friday the 14th, his funeral took place to Kelly's Cross Church, having been postponed awaiting the arrival of his son, Wilfred Woods, Station Agent at Port Hill. On the 12th the latter took the train for the funeral but he was stuck in the snow before reaching Wellington, and he was forced to return to Port Hill. After a Requiem Mass celebrated by Rev. T. Curran, P. P., his poor emaciated body was laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery, the pall bearers being J. T. Kelly, C. McKenna, J. A. E. Bradley, L. Malone, E. Carragher, J. E. McKenna.

Besides W. T. above named, there were left to mourn, Charles on the home, Albert in Charlottetown, and William, Brookvale and two how it was in my own riding. In daughters, Mrs. P.
