Work is in progress on the railway wharf here. There is a big job to be done on this wharf but delay due mostly to the scarcity of material will no doubt mean that the greater part of the work will have to be postponed until next summer. Mr. Angus McLean is the foreman.

Prince Edward Island

(By Mrs. Charles R. Dennis in the Oakland Maple Leaf)

(Mrs. Dennis, 876 Hillside Drive, N.W., Warren, Ohio, nee Jean MacPherson, is a daughter of George and Elizabeth MacPherson, Summerside, and grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Crawford, West Point. Was a teacher in the Margate School and in the Summerside High School before going to Ohio.)—Ed.

Every year as August rolls around there is something in the air that awakens memories of Prince Edward Island and the desire to roam the quiet country roads or to visit its towns and villages.

That little island of some million acres, nestled in the waves of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, was the birthplace of a "clannish race." It may be that the first settlers from the Old Country by reason of their own nostalgia fostered a spirit of unity among their descendants. However that may be, it is certain that wherever they may meet, no matter how far from "The Island," the handclasp is just a little stronger if you meet a friend who hails from that island of red clay, green pastures and sunlit waters. It is not far from 160 miles in length and from 4 to 32 miles in width. But it is dotted with comfortable homes and has every modern convenience.

To the writer, Prince of Wales Marjorie Bell, had graduated in town, is an extra cradle of memories. The faculty of that splendid institution have sent many men and women out into the world to become leaders in their special field, and many are "South of the Border."

Summerside has such a fine High School also. That is where I received my early education. One of my classmates is former Premier and now Chief Justice of Prince Edward Island, Thane A. Campbell. His father was a leading citizen of the town, engaged in the insurance business. Sometime I should like to write more about the Summerside I knew.

One day not long ago a fine looking young man came to our door and in the course of our conversation I found that his mother, Marjorie Bell, had graduated in town, is an extra cradle of memories. The faculty of that splendid institution have sent many men and women out into the world to become leaders in their special field, and many are "South of the Border."

O'Leary and Kensington were both very familiar to me and are thriving towns in the midst of rich farming country. Modern schools, churches and hotels are also to be found. Then there are the numerous resorts along the coast. Malpeque, famous for its beach and its oysters, Dalvay by the Sea, and many others.

Many who have not visited P.E.I. in recent years will be surprised at the up-to-date transportation. How many, like myself, can remember the narrow gauge railroad? Conduct-

Lumberjack Is Charged With Murder

MONTREAL, Oct. 30 — (CP)—A 40-year-old lumberjack who came down from the northern Quebec woods for a good time and who became so drunk he doesn't remember what happened was charged today with the murder of Mrs. Noela Denomme, 31. The woman's nude body was found last night in a room in an east end St. Denis Street tourist house and doctors said she had been strangled. The lumberjack, Raoul Bazinet of Montreal and Parent, Que., surrendered to police this morning. At coroner's inquest he was held criminally responsible for the woman's death and the murder charge was laid at arraignment before Judge Maurice Tremblay. Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 6. Police said the lumberjack, still wearing his woodsman's clothes when he gave himself up, told them he had come here for a good time, had known Mrs. Denomme previously and had spent Monday evening with her in a night club. They had gone to the rooming house about 8 a.m. Tuesday. "I don't remember much that happened," police quoted him as saying. "I was drunk and I remember seeing her lying across the bed. Mrs. Denomme's body was found by an employee of the tourist house and was identified through labels on her clothing. Police went to her home, in suburban Verdun, and obtained from her sister, Miss Therese Pare, a picture of Bazinet. The lumberjack was arrested at police headquarters shortly after he walked in and asked the constable in charge if they were looking for the St. Denis Street murderer." Homicide squad detectives investigating the case were at headquarters and recognized Bazinet from his picture.

Object To Sections Of Agreement

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—(AP)—The United States has objected to Britain over sections of the British-Argentine economic agreement which, in the view of officials here, appear to violate promises Britain made in obtaining a $750,000,000 American loan. The objections have already been expressed orally, officials said, and Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder plans to follow up with a letter to London asking for an explanation of one of the financial provisions in the accord. Mr. Snyder, who is empowered by Congress to make certain the British-American loan agreement is carried out, will call attention to a provision in the British-Argentine pact which prevents Argentina from spending blocked sterling where she desires under certain circumstances. This is a clause under which Britain promises to release some of the money it owes Argentina if Argentina purchases more from Britain and sterling bloc countries than it sells to them. American officials expressed belief this violates a pledge that Britain will permit all such freed sterling to be converted into any type of currency a country may wish.

4,000 Prisoners To Be Home By Christmas

By GEORGE RONALD Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Oct. 30—The long-awaited—and in many cases long-teared—news is here for German prisoners of war: the last 4,000 will leave Canada by Christmas. For hundreds it is unwelcome news—they prefer to remain in the Dominion and have expressed that wish by applying for official permission to settle here. About 1,000 Canadians, who say the Germans proved themselves good workers on farms and in lumber camps, have made similar requests on behalf of the prisoners, but government orders are that all P.O.W.'s are to be sent home at the first opportunity. Most of the 4,000—last of an estimated 35,000 German fighting men sent to Canada during the war—are merchant seamen. To some, including many of the 600 who escaped from camps throughout the Dominion—22 never were recaptured—the word "home" still is magic. One tall, sun-bronzed, 23-year-old seaman with whom I talked recently at a military hospital in London, Ont., quoted with a smile the adage "There's no place like home." It was the day before high-ranking Nazis were hanged at Nuremberg. These were his thoughts, which he claimed were "typical" of those of German prisoners after several years in Canada:— "The hangings were a mistake; Goering and the rest will be 'martyrs' in the minds of German youth; Russia is the real enemy of lasting peace; Germany can and will be a successful democracy if she is given a chance; Allied propagandists have atrocious lies; 96 per cent of the atrocity stories are false; all Nazi acts against European Jews are justified."

FINDS DEBATE DULL

M. P. DARN'S SOCKS

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Nov. 1 — (CP)—Dominion parliament are usually less conventional than that in Britain, but even New Zealand parliamentarians were surprised at the method one of their number chose to pass the time during a dreary debate in the session just closed. A Labor member, C. Carr, spread out on the seat beside him a pair of socks, a darning needle and wool, and one of those wooden gadgets for pushing down inside the sock, and set to work. The occupation seemed to keep him happy and occupied until something in the debate attracted his attention. He rose to a point of order, said his piece, and then sat down, rethreaded his needle and attacked the next hole.

NOISE HAZARDS

Output of an industrial establishment may fall as low as 40 per cent of normal, due to the noise hazard, declare industrial health experts. The Department of National Health and Welfare points out that noise is more than a mere nuisance—it has a detrimental effect on health, particularly of workers in noisy industries. Sound-proofing and noise control measures, outlined in a new departmental publication now on issue, are recommended to employers and employees.
