GERMAN RED TAPE

A Most Irritating Brand Is Used In the Postoffices.

SENDING A PARCEL BY MAIL

Experience of an English Tourist Who, With Joyous Confidence, Undertook to Perform What Was Supposed to Be a Perfectly Simple Operation.

In all innocence and lightness of heart I set out one morning to send a small parcel to England from the town in Germany where I was staying.

By the time I had described the parcel, the gross weight thereof in grams and kilograms, the gross value thereof in marks and pennings and given a detailed description of each article contained therein, with its separate weight and value, I felt like an old inhabitant of that postoffice.

"Did you weigh the articles?" he asked sternly. "Yes-a!" I stammered. "Then go home and weigh them again. You have put them down at half a ton!"

Now, if there is one thing upon which I pride myself it is upon the neat way in which I turn out a parcel. So, smothering my indignation as well as I could, I assured him that it would be all right, that it was perfectly safe and that there was nothing in it which was breakable.

It was now getting toward evening, and I was feeling worried after my day's work, so I brought my brother—a willing, guileless youth—to take it to the postoffice. He took it so innocently that my conscience reproached me for not having given him a word of warning.

In desperation I seized the sealing wax and worked away until I had used it to the last speck and the parcel was one intricate mass of string and wax. Then I conveyed it once more to the postoffice.
