Libya Will Resist Any Control By Italy

CAIRO, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The people of Libya will resist the return of Italy to their country under any form of trusteeship, says Bashir Al Sadawi, president of the National Council for the Liberation of Libya. "We fought the Italians for 35 years," he said in an interview. "We have struggled against oppression and tyranny. We will continue our struggle with unabated strength and determination until we attain complete independence and unity of our country." Al Sadawi, who said he fought the Italians from 1911 to 1933, explained: "We are not alone this time. We have the support of the Arab League. The Kings and rulers of the league's seven member states, when they met at Inchas (in Egypt) in 1946, decided on the independence of Libya. They also decided to give us every material and moral help. "The Italians overcame Libyan resistance, Al Sadawi said, he left the country and began seeking support in Arab conferences against "the tragedy of the Italian rule in Libya." He is now, he said, adviser to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, who "gave me permission to come to Egypt and look after the case of my country." World powers, he claimed, are treating Libya as a subject of bargaining. "They meet and take decisions on the future of Libya while the people of the country feel that there are attempts and market for bargaining. Some powers are trying to seek the friendship of Italy, and attempt to restore Italian rule in our country. "The people of Libya will resist such unfair attempts." Speaking of the present British military administration over Libya, he said: "We do not care whether the administration is good or bad. It is a temporary administration. We are not asking for reforms, but we are asking for independence." The only trusteeship the Libyans might accept, Al Sadawi said, is that of the Arab League, if a collective one is wanted, and that of Egypt if trusteeship under a single state is desired. "We do not consider a trusteeship as a guardianship in the sense the big powers understand. We are brothers with Egyptians and Arabs in general, and there is no difference between us."

Report Princess' Wedding Gown Is Lush Creation

LONDON, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Princess Elizabeth's wedding gown, about the biggest secret around these parts since the date of the invasion of Normandy—is a lush creation that likely will knock the word "austerity" right out of the Royal vocabulary. I saw the skirt of the dress and some sketches of the whole thing at a private preview today in designer Norman Hartnell's swank fashion salon. Hartnell has had about 40 of his seamstresses working on the Royal trossouise for weeks. The piece of the dress was under a glass case in Hartnell's private office and the office windows were draped as though for a black-out to thwart fashion spies. Every newspaper representative who got into the place was screened. All had to sign written promises to be discreet about the whole business until the day of the wedding, because the Princess doesn't want every fashion show to have models of her dresses in the windows before she even gets to wear them herself. It days from now, so my lips are sealed, as they say. But if anybody tells you the Princess is going to be just plain Jane when she walks the middle aisle over the tombs in Westminster Abbey, he's wrong.

World powers, he claimed, are treating Libya as a subject of bargaining. "They meet and take decisions on the future of Libya while the people of the country feel that there are attempts and market for bargaining. Some powers are trying to seek the friendship of Italy, and attempt to restore Italian rule in our country. "The people of Libya will resist such unfair attempts." Speaking of the present British military administration over Libya, he said: "We do not care whether the administration is good or bad. It is a temporary administration. We are not asking for reforms, but we are asking for independence." The only trusteeship the Libyans might accept, Al Sadawi said, is that of the Arab League, if a collective one is wanted, and that of Egypt if trusteeship under a single state is desired. "We do not consider a trusteeship as a guardianship in the sense the big powers understand. We are brothers with Egyptians and Arabs in general, and there is no difference between us."

Libya Will Resist Any Control By Italy

CAIRO, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The people of Libya will resist the return of Italy to their country under any form of trusteeship, says Bashir Al Sadawi, president of the National Council for the Liberation of Libya. "We fought the Italians for 35 years," he said in an interview. "We have struggled against oppression and tyranny. We will continue our struggle with unabated strength and determination until we attain complete independence and unity of our country." Al Sadawi, who said he fought the Italians from 1911 to 1933, explained: "We are not alone this time. We have the support of the Arab League. The Kings and rulers of the league's seven member states, when they met at Inchas (in Egypt) in 1946, decided on the independence of Libya. They also decided to give us every material and moral help. "The Italians overcame Libyan resistance, Al Sadawi said, he left the country and began seeking support in Arab conferences against "the tragedy of the Italian rule in Libya." He is now, he said, adviser to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, who "gave me permission to come to Egypt and look after the case of my country." World powers, he claimed, are treating Libya as a subject of bargaining. "They meet and take decisions on the future of Libya while the people of the country feel that there are attempts and market for bargaining. Some powers are trying to seek the friendship of Italy, and attempt to restore Italian rule in our country. "The people of Libya will resist such unfair attempts."
