In the original case the Purity Ice Cream Co. claimed $22 for ice cream delivered for a picnic given by Mr. O'Connell for orphans in Havelock. Mr. O'Connell's offer to settle for $17 was refused by the company. At the conclusion of the trial, Judge Barry ruled that $17 was a satisfactory amount and assessed costs against the plaintiff company.

In submitting the bill of costs D. Mullin, K. C., for Mr. O'Connell, included an amount of $354.75, travelling expenses from Cam-and members of St. James Church and presented with congratulatory and complimentary addresses and other tokens of appreciation and respect. The Halifax Chronicle reports that the address from the Town Council, besides mentioning Mr. Harris' aesthetic influence in the town, as exemplified in the Anglican Church building, the Masonic Temple and the War Memorial, commends the Canon's efforts in collecting old records and compiling the history of the early settlement of the district. The Presbyterian Church's address says: "Unhindered by denominational barriers, you have always given unsparringly of your time and energy wherever and whenever a need presented itself. On behalf of the parish, the following tribute is expressed in the address: 'Had you chosen worldly gains and honor, your many rich and varied gifts would have enabled you to grace positions of power and influence in a body, testified to the esteem in which Canon Harris is held and formed a fitting climax to the occasion.'

FEEDING THE WEANING FOAL
(Experimental Farms Note)
The most important period of a horse's life is the time from weaning until the foal is a year old. The amount and quality of feed fed during this period will largely determine his future development. Many potential draft horses are so checked and stunted in growth from a lack of proper feed and care as colts that they never attain the size which would raise them from a low-priced, nondescript chunk into a high-priced, profitable drafter.

The first step is to get it feeding regularly on grain before weaning it from the mare. A mixture of oats and bran are the best feeds to use from this purpose. When the foal is feeding regularly it may be weaned without danger of a severe check in growth which will always occur if weaned without being taught to feed first. If two foals can be put together in a roomy loose-box they will fret less than if kept by themselves.

The best feeds to use are oats preferably rolled, bran, a little linseed meal and good clean, well-cured alfalfa hay. The concentrates are readily procurable anywhere but the alfalfa will not be available over as wide a range. It is, however, more valuable than any other roughage and horse breeders would be well advised to make a special effort to grow enough of this feed for their foals and also the brood mares, if possible. Other good quality hays rank next to alfalfa in value as roughage and good results can also be obtained from them.

Feed should be given three times a day at as nearly as possible, regular intervals and the foals should be watered before feeding. The foal is easily taught to drink before feeding and once the habit is formed no further trouble will be experienced. Salt should be available at all times. A small block of rock salt in the corner of the manger is the most satisfactory method of supplying it.

The amounts of feed necessary will vary with different animals. A foal will very seldom eat more than it can properly assimilate, differing in this point from older horses. Reasonably generous feeding will be amply rapid in the

Open Doors
Every person's feeling have a front door and side-door by which they may be entered. The front-door is on the street. Some keep it always open, some keep it latched, some locked, some bolted—with a chain that will let you peep in but not get in; and some nail it up, so that nothing can pass its threshold. This front-door leads into a passage, which opens into an ante-room, and this into the interior apartments. The side-door opens at once into the secret chambers. There is almost always at least one key to this side-door. . . . The wedding-ring conveys a right to one; alas! if none is given with it, trust one of those keys of the side-door. The fact of possessing one renders those even who are dear to you very terrible at times. You can keep the world out from your front-door, but those of your own flesh and blood, or of certain grades of intimacy, can come in at side-door if they will, at any hour and in any mood. Some of them have the scale of your whole nervous system, and can play all the gamut of your sensibilities in semitones. . . . No stranger can get a great many notes of torture out of a human soul; it takes one that knows it well—parent, child, brother, sister, intimate. Be very careful to whom you give a side-door key.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Hockey At Summerside
What will probably be the last match here this season was played Tuesday evening in the Crystal Rink between the Bedeque Beavers and the now famous Stem Winders, the latter being victorious by the score of 7 to 2.

Jack Frost had smiled most benignly with the result that the teams had an excellent sheet of ice on which to decide who were the better puck chasers.

Play started sharp on time, with J. S. Wright handling the whistle. The Beavers went into the lead by scoring first on a wing shot. Carnation Williams soon evened up matters, when he scored the rebound from one of Canner Gallant's wicked wing shots; play was very even in the first period which ended 2 all.

During the second stanza the Stem Winders loosened up and had the score 5-4 in their favor when the gong sounded. This ended the scoring for Bedeque as the third period saw them shut out while their opponents added two more to their total.

Wright the Bedeque centre was probably the outstanding player on his team, and with some coaching will develop into fast company; Noonan their goalie turned in a very creditable game considering the fact that it is the first time this season that he has played.

For the Stem Winders every man worked hard, Canner Gallant their star goal-getter was always in evidence, and Carnation's work around the opposing team's nets, getting rebounds was good to look at; Jockey Daley worked his head off, and accounted for two of the goals, his team scored; the defensive work of Fox King Clark and Hardware Walsh (who is hail and hearty again) was all that could be desired, their solid blocking being a feature work of much commendation; in fact the work of the Fox King in both games with Bedeque was greatly responsible for the Stem Winders winning out, as he blocked shot after shot. Stonewall Dodds was not up to form in the first stanza, letting in two soft ones, but after that he settled down and displayed a brand of net-minding which the fans claim will insure him a berth on the team next season. Carnation was very neat in any out of a goal he shot when the gong was rung two minutes ahead of time, closing the second period.

Referee Wright's work with the whistle was A1 and of his usual impartial brand.
