Cardigan Head And Vicinity

Mr. John T. Corcoran was a visitor to the city on Wednesday.

Heartiest congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Angus Nicholson, Cardigan Head on the arrival of a bouncing baby boy in the King's County Hospital, March 6th.

Mr. Austin McGillivary, Cardigan North, was a visitor to Baldwins Road on Thursday.

Many friends are sorry to learn that Miss Bella Robertson, Baldwins Road, is confined to her home suffering from a severe cold.

The people of this vicinity learned with deep regret of the death of a former resident of Lorne Valley Mrs. William McLeod at a very old age. Remains arrived by train from Boston accompanied by her son Archibald on Wednesday evening and were conveyed to Lorne Valley Church followed by a host of friends who gathered at 48 Road station where remains were taken off train. Funeral took place on Thursday afternoon services were conducted by Reverend Owen Hughes. Deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved members of her family by the people of the district.

Miss Anna Curran, 48 Road, left Thursday morning on an extended trip to Boston and other parts of the U. S. A.

Mrs. James McNeil and little daughter, of Lorne Valley, were recent visitors to Mt. Stewart.

Mr. Russell McAulay, Cardigan Head left on Friday morning enroute to Halifax.

The members of the Baldwins Road Study Club held their regular weekly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Corcoran on Thursday evening with the regular attendance. Meeting was carried out in the usual manner with their leader, Miss Marion McCarthy presiding. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by the hostess C.

In Memoriam

MRS. GEORGE RAYNER

The district of Greenmount and vicinity were greatly saddened on February 16, 1940, when they learned of the passing of one of its most highly esteemed residents in the person of Mrs. George Rayner (nee Helen Dunbar) at the early age of 30 years.

During her illness of almost two years she was never known to complain although at times suffered severely and turned what might have been a melancholy sick room into one of brightness and cheer.

Her Christian fortitude enabled her to make it easy for those who came to console her in her affliction and her ready smile which greeted her loved ones and friends to the very last left a beautiful memory which will never be forgotten.

She will be missed greatly in her family circle and church where she was an active member and took part in its activities until a week before her death when the Women's Missionary Society and Bible Study Class met around her bedside.

She is survived by her sorrowing husband and three children namely: Lois 7, William 5 and Archie 2. Also her mother, Mrs. Ben Dunbar and four sisters, Emma, Mrs. Frank Barbour, Alma; Zena, Mrs. Thomas Landry, Cambridge, Mass.; Margaret Mrs. Ivan Wagner Dorchester, Mass., Sadie, Mrs. Will Mountain, Alma and two brothers, Lloyd, Montrose and Howard, Alma.

The funeral which was largely attended was held from her late residence in Greenmount and was conducted by Rev. W. Fermer assisted by Rev. G. Duncan.

The following hymns were sung: "Sweet By and By", "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and " Some Time We'll Understand."

A solo "No Night There" was feelingly rendered by Mrs. Wallace Graham.

Interment was made in the Christian Church cemetery. Greenmount.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Frank Platts Frank Barbour, Alfred Foley, Marshall Rayner, Charles Rayner and Howard Rayner.

Floral Tributes:—Pillow, Husband, Mrs. A. H. Rayner and family, Wreath, Mrs. Ben Dunbar. Spray, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Platts. Spray, Missionary Society.

AS YOU HOPE FOR VICTORY— Be Generous

A CUP of coffee and a doughnut seem small enough reward for a man who has gone over the top in the face of machine gun fire.

A pair of dry new socks means much to a man whose feet have been wet for a week.

These are only some of the things the Salvation Army does for the soldiers, but the veterans of the last war have never forgotten those two little services, and the spirit of Christian kindness that went with them.

All that the Salvation Army did for the troops in the last war will be done in this war—and more—if you will help according to the need.

Volunteer workers will call upon you. Receive them kindly as they deserve and give as your heart dictates.

THE RED SHIELD PROGRAMME

The Red Shield programme of the Salvation Army serves Canadian soldiers physically, mentally and spiritually—in the training camps . . . in the concentration centres . . . in the war zone; in Canada . . . in England . . . in France—as near to the front line as the military authorities permit. It takes care also of the soldiers' dependents where need arises. Help them also in their work among Canada's poor.

CHAPTER X

Phil's submarine had been based at San Diego for months.

Late in October, he received a telegram from Lanya — a message that was characteristic of her.

Am dying of boredom in Los Angeles. How soon can you come to my rescue?

He was pleased to hear from her. He hadn't seen her since June was always amusing. He would, he Week in Annapolis — and Lanya decided, run up to Los Angeles for the week-end.

He replied to her message with one word, "Immediately."

Arriving in Los Angeles on Saturday afternoon, he phoned her, then went at once to call on her.

"I was half afraid you wouldn't come," she said, as she led him into the sitting room of her hotel suite.

"How could I ever resist a summons from you?" he said gallantly. "Besides, if you must know the truth, I've been as bored as you said you were."

"Really? Don't tell me you've lost your charm for attractive ladies!"

He laughed. "Attractive ladies have lost their charm for me."

"I don't believe it!"

"It's true."

She sat down beside him on the sofa, offered him a cigarette,and held her lighter for him. He settled back and gazed at her appreciatively. She was wearing a green silk dress that set off her loveliness perfectly. Yes, she was looking very beautiful. He was glad he had come.

"What are you doing in Las Angeles?" he asked.

"The usual thing. Father is here on business. We've been here a month."

"And you've really been bored?"

"Horribly!"

"Why didn't you wire me sooner?"

She smiled wryly, and shrugged. "Because I keep hoping to get over you, Phil. Finally, though, I decided to see you to find out whether I have or not."

He grinned. "Well? Have you?"

She arched her brows. "I don't know. It's too soon to tell." She laughed. "I'll let you know before you go back to San Diego."

Phil spent a pleasant two hours with her. When he left, they made an engagement for the evening.

"I'm invited to a party, but you can take me," Lanya said. "Roger Channel, the movie producer, is giving it. Do you know Roger?"

Phil nodded. "I've met him."

Roger Channel's house was distinctly Hollywood in its architecture and vastness. It was imposing without too much good taste. Within it, however, was an air of hospitality, from the Japanese butler who admitted the guests to Channel himself.

Channel was in his forties, but only the gray at his temples betrayed his age. He was handsome, distinguished looking, always perfectly tailored. His face was deeply tanned, his eyes steel gray.

As he greeted Lanya and Phil, his handicap was hard.

To Lanya, he said, with easy familiarity, "Hello, darling." And to Phil, "Glad to see you again, Lieutenant."

There was quite a crowd there. Very gay and very noisy. There was a five-piece orchestra but, at the moment, it wasn't playing. A man was performing on the piano while a girl, sitting atop it, was singing in a throaty voice.

Channel said "Lanya, you know most of the boys and girls. Will you make Randall acquainted?"

A moment later, the girl's song came to an end and, amid the resounding applause, the orchestra began playing and couples began dancing.

Lanya turned to Phil. "I don't want to introduce you to any one. I want to keep you to myself. Let's dance."

As he guided her onto the floor, his eyes suddenly fell on a girl across the room — and he barely suppressed a start. It was Joyce Hammond!

He wondered what she was doing here. He had thought she was in New York — or anyway, somewhere in the East. He saw that she hadn't seen him, and his gaze followed her until she became lost in the crowd.

Later, when some one else claimed Layna, he sought Joyce out, found her dancing and cut in.

She stared at him with unconcealed astonishment. "Phil Randall!"

"In person."

"Where — where did you come from?"

"The question is, where did you come from?" he asked. "I thought you told me you were going to New York to get a job."

"I did — but the job landed me out here."

"It's grand to see you. You're looking lovelier than ever."

"Don't start giving me your blarney again! I had enough of that last June!" She laughed. "How ridiculously young I was then!"

"You're only five months older now."

"No — I'm a hundred years older!"

He was silent, studying her. She had changed. There was a hardness and sophistication about her that hadn't been there before. It was true she was older. She was no longer the eager young girl with whom he had danced in Annapolis — the girl who had done things to his heart that no one had ever done before.

But he knew he was still in love with her.

Office of The City Clerk, City Hall, Charlottetown, P.E. Island

January 12, 1940

In January, 1938 the City of Charlottetown purchased from Mr. F. R. McLaine, Agent for the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, one three ton Fargo truck. Since that time this truck has been used continuously.

During the winter months it is used with the Sargent plow in keeping our streets clear of snow, being used as many as 48 to 60 hours continuous running.

In the other seasons of the year it is employed hauling gravel, sand, etc., and keeping our streets clean of refuse.

During the period this truck has been in our possession there has been no expense for upkeep. I find also that its operating costs are very low. I may say that I have found the Fargo truck to be most satisfactory in all respects.

TAXPAYERS SHOULD TAKE NOTE

Canadian taxpayers don't mean much to Mr. Mackenzie King, it seems.

CANADA'S WAR EFFORT EVEN IN THE PRELIMINARY STAGES IS COSTING A MILLION DOLLARS A DAY. The Canadian taxpayers from coast to coast are in unanimous agreement that whatever the cost, the job must be done. But if they could all send a little note to the Government at Ottawa, they'd no doubt specify that that job MUST be done as efficiently and as economically as practically possible.

All supplies purchased by the War Supply Board are brought direct from the factory, or the central jobber in Canada. In other words, the Government doesn't deal with local retailers in any part of Canada on orders requiring any quantity. Which is as it should b[illegible]

BUT, each manufacturer, when submitting his account, is asked at the same time to furnish a list of the retailers in the communities where the supplies are ultimately directed or consumed.

AND, without a sign of effort on his part, the dealer or retailer in the community concerned receives (quite as a surprise in many cases, no doubt) a cheque for the usual commission allowed.

By way of explanation of this practice, the following statement was made by W. C. Woodward, son of the Vancouver Department store head, and a LIBERAL member of the War Supply Board, since the beginning of the present election compaign:

"WE ARE DOING THIS BECAUSE WE DO NOT WISH TO DISTURB THE LOCAL POLITICAL SITUATION."

And the local taxpayer?
