PREFERRED BLOND

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 22

Blondes who would continue to be preferred, should never select colors that overshadow their personality. Claire Windsor, screen actress, puts her name under that advice.

"Blondes have a much harder time in selecting their colors than their brunette sisters," Claire says. "It is so easy for a blonde to select colors in the background by their vividness."

Here are a few tricks which experience has taught her.

"The ash blonde should select colors that reflect the light, but which are not vivid. A cross between baby blue and electric blue is ideal for this type of fair skinned femininity. She pink also is good. It throws a pleasing reflection on the new, yet does not detract from the personality."

"Golden blondes find the color problem easier. All the warm colors are attractive. Deep yellow, pink of all shades, even red when used judiciously, become the golden-haired woman."

INSIDIOUS EYE STRAIN

We use this adjective advisedly.

Sufferers from Eyestrain may have perfect vision and therefore do not suspect the presence of any eye defect.

The motive power of the entire human organism is Nerve Energy.

Normal eyes, it is computed utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eyestrain is present, a much larger proportion is required. Hence defective eyes, through their consumption of an excessive amount of Nerve Energy may seriously affect the functioning of other organs of the body, and produce ill health.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. AMBROSE E. KELLY

At an early hour on Friday morning, Sept. 10th, the people of Kinross were shocked and saddened to hear that Mr. Ambrose E. Kelly, one of the most popular men of the district, had passed away in the Charlottetown Hospital. Deceased entered the hospital less than two weeks previous to his death suffering from blood poisoning in his head, contracted very shortly after an operation performed on his nose.

The late Mr. Kelly was a universal favorite in the parish, as was evidenced by the grief of all. He was 49 years old and his last illness was the only sickness of his life. He was an excellent type of manhood always strong, active and supple. Hard work of which he had a great deal, was just a pleasure to him and he never was heard to say he was tired. Those shining qualities—honesty, sobriety, charity and kindness to everyone were all to be found in him. He was ever ready to assist anyone far or near whom he knew or heard of in need. All through his life he fought the good fight and on Sept. 9th he laid down his cross to receive his crown. He was a self-made man in every sense of the word. Left an orphan at the tender age of two years, he was kindly taken care of by relatives, and in his early teens he stepped out in the cold world to earn his living and do his bit. This he did as his beautiful and well-kept property shows to-day. Besides being a good progressive farmer he was also a neat and skillful carpenter and blacksmith.

He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Hughes. Shortly before her death their only child, Raymond, died when he was 19. Later he married Miss Smith, who with three small children—Doris, Raymond and James A.—are left to mourn their irreplaceable loss.

He leaves to mourn one brother, John, in California and a sister Mrs. Margaret Hughes in South Boston, Mass; besides a host of warm friends and relatives in this province and also in the United States, especially in Massachusetts, where he lived some years before taking up farming in the country. His funeral took place on Sept. 11th at 2.30 p. m. to St. Malachias's Church of which he was a regular and devoted attendant and was largely attended, and in the cemetery close by his remains were laid, to await the resurrection morn. Rev. M. J. Smith his most beloved pastor performed the funeral rites in the church and at the grave. The pall bearers were: Messrs J. J. Hughes, J. J. Smith, Michael Green, Aeneas Hughes, James Duffy, and J. M. Kelly.—R. I. P. (Journal and Patriot please copy.)

American Federation Of Labor In Convention

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—A call for increased effort in union organization and the promulgation of union principles was contained today in the annual report of the American Federation of Labor Council, presented by President William Green and his associates to the Federation's annual convention.

A summary of the work of the year, a re-statement of principles of organized labor in the social, political, and economic field, and a conclusion that the labor movement is rapidly for the period "is maintaining successfully those ideals and practices that have made it distinctively American were other features of the report.

It emphasized once more the cardinal insistence of labor organizations upon the right to organize freely for cooperative bargaining over wage scales and working conditions, and opposed compulsory arbitration or semi-judicial mechanisms for settling industrial disputes. But on this occasion a step further was taken, in that unions were urged in making agreements to provide for devices in wage agreements that would automatically adjust minor disputes, and to go forward, once agreements were made, with definite plans of cooperation with management that have given labor organizations treatment considered fair.

"The executive council is of the opinion that trade union agreements should include provisions providing plans for the establishment of permanent machinery for the interpretation of agreements and for dealing with new incidents of the industrial undertaking," the report said. "We urge also careful consideration of additional provisions whereby the union may cooperate with management. There is vital basis for cooperation between workers and management in their independent interests in the success of the industrial undertaking in which they are employed. Progress and efficiency in either group bring reciprocal benefits to the other."

"The basis for cooperation is laid in the collective agreements negotiated by unions and management. The management that seeks the cooperation of the union is taking a course that assures most intelligent production results. Throughout all industry where collective bargaining obtains are more or less developed undertakings in cooperation between the unions and management for more efficient production. Major responsibility rests upon management in developing the machinery for getting the most benefit from this cooperation."

"The trades union movement is ready and anxious to do its full share and to assume responsibility. As soon as an agreement is reached between workers and management, the workers must assume definite responsibility for maintaining the spirit of partnership or cooperation. It is fundamental for efficiency in production that the spirit and method of team work be followed."

Reviewing general conditions the report declared that "American wage earners are the highest paid workers in the world," and claim credit for the fact for organization in labor. Unions had assured participation in the benefits of our most remarkable industrial progress, it was added, and three experienced as "the living wage gave way to a saving wage and that to a cultural wage." The public attitude was likewise remarked on, that recognition had been attained for "the economic wisdom and necessity that have heretofore prompted American organizations in its wage policies and its efforts to reduce working hours."

Touching collateral conditions in industry, the report reexpressed hostility to "company unions," or plants with management cooperation, and looked askance at some programs of employee stock ownership.

"The federation will oppose to the full extent of its power the efforts of employers to compel their employees to join company unions," it was stated. "The evils resulting from company union schemes are not to be minimized. Older methods of control of workers by employers, nevertheless, cannot escape the interpenetration of paternalism in an important portion of workers' lives. The effect upon industry itself would be to retard progress."

"A supplementary method of regarding the legitimate development of trades unions is that which would have the worker financially interested in the concern by which he or she may be employed. It is the impression among workers that there is no necessity for union organization. Firms with company unions favor this plan."

"It should be understood there are instances where employers or corporations are sincerely interested in having employees participate in the profits of their joint enterprise, and where no attempt is made to use the relationship as a means of opposing trade unionism or collective bargaining. The very fact demands that the utmost discriminating care be used in forming judgment in each instance."

The entrance of labor organizations into the financial field was reviewed with the statement that on June 30 last union owned banks controlled resources to a total of $109,618,000. There were said to be thirty labor banks in operation.

"There is recognized in these institutions of labor an ever-growing interest of labor in all of the factors concerned in production and in the use and control of credit power," the report continued. "Then, too, these institutions tend toward the promotion of thrift and the development of habits of investment. While labor banks have had in the main sound and constructive management and their record thus far is most gratifying, there is inherent in their development potential and real danger that interests not concerned in the welfare of either the employer or the employee, but prompted solely by the hope of speculative gain will seek entrance into this field. The federation is deeply concerned in preventing hostile or indifferent or malevolent influences coming into this field. We suggest that labor banks avail themselves fully of all government inspection services and that to this end they make application or affiliation to the federal reserve system. It is most important that the advice of the best technical experts be sought in the formulation of policies."

"The development of labor banks has given rise to other laboring ventures in the investment, building and security field. We are prompted to sound a note of warning against this increasing tendency to divert the attention of the trade unionist from the more primary need of trade union organization and functioning. We decline to give our approval to such ventures and development and caution our unions and workers to use the utmost care and vigilance in participating in such ventures."

By nonpartisan methods, the federation will seek to aid the election of political candidates favorable to union organization at all elections, the report said, and as its greatest success during the past years, the Tennessee contest against Representative Garrett, the democratic House leader, was cited.

The appeal made by the labor movement was so successful that he was barely elected by only a 1200 majority," the statement said. "We have no doubt but that the majority received by Representative Garrett will be overturned in the next election and that he will be relegated to private life."

The federation will continue to compile and circulate the records of congressional candidates on labor legislation, it was said, and assist local union organizations in obtaining desired election results.

The total membership of unions affiliated with the federation was shown to have decreased during the year. For 1925, the number of union members enrolled in the organization was given as 2,813,910, against 2,877,297 in 1925, and as compared with a high point in the federation's history, reached in 1920, of 4,078,740. The Council expressed an intention to increase organization of workers.

"The federation is anxious to extend organization lines," it declared. "During the past few years the federation has suggested and inaugurated special organizing movements. We have given considerable thought to the problem of helping organizations to make their work more efficient. Not only do we need to strengthen our organization from within, but we need to extend our lines by organizing those still unorganized. There is need for increasing emphasis in all organizing work for women as well as men."

Taking up questions assigned to it for investigation by previous Federation conventions, the Council said that its members had investigated the Government's Citizens Military Training Camps, and found working conditions in opposition to the enterprise.

"In the judgment of the council, we believe it would be advantageous to all of the boys of the country," the opinion was expressed, "to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them in these camps."

Men Working On Hudson Bay Railway

(Canadian Press)

THE PAS, Man., Oct. 7.—Hundred men are now working on the Hudson Bay railway, repairing track, putting roadbeds in condition, replacing wooden bridges and constructing divisional facilities. Two hundred miles of track have reached first stage and is in shape for trains operating at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour. With a final lift in the spring it is expected the road will be declared in first class condition.

Between miles 224 and 254, gangs are working both ways to finish the intervening gap. The pioneer gang is at Mile 317, twenty-six miles from Nettie River bridge, the present end of steel, which point will be reached inside of a month.

Cuts have been widened and drained. Four carpenter crews are erecting water tanks. The telephone line is now in shape and operating as far as Mile 317. Two steam shovels have been continuing work on Mile 127 and 254 respectively, with six trains disposing of the output.

Three hundred and twenty thousand ties have been distributed during the season, 265,000 of which have been placed in the road. The

Bishop Refuses To Comment on the American Flapper

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—"The most thrilling experience I have had since the coronation of King George," was the way the Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, yesterday described his arrival in Chicago and a ride from the station to his host's home in a motor car, flanked by motor cycle policemen. Thousands applauded the pastor of Great Britain's Royal Family as he proceeded to the home of Bishop Charles P. Anderson.

His Lordship, a genial, wiry, energetic man, came to the city from Iowa City, Iowa, to resume here his series of talks to American college youth. It was his first visit to the city. He quickly rebuked a reporter, who wondered what a Lord Bishop thought of American flappers. The divine said he wouldn't answer "such a silly question," as interviewing of that sort was undermining the dignity of the American press.
