BREAK A CHILD'S COLD BY GIVING SYRUP OF FIGS

Cleanses the little liver and bowels and they get well quick.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When croup, peevish, listless pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs" to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

IN MEMORIAM

AUSTIN DOUGHERTY

The community at Port Hill were much shocked when it became known, that Mr. David Dougherty had received a telegram, stating that his son Austin had died on the morning of Nov. 8th in Vancouver. He was a young man of exceptional ability, having graduated from P. W. C. with high honors. He taught school for some time in this province, being principal of Alberton High School for two years. Then went West he still followed his profession, where death cut short a promising career. Much sympathy is felt for his father and brother here, his two sisters, who teach in the West and his brother Irwin in Boston. It is understood that his body is being brought home for interment in the family plot in Lot Fourteen Cemetery.

POTATO DISHES

HASHED BROWN POTATOES—Take two cups of cold boiled potatoes, chop them fine, adding pepper and salt. Turn them into the hot fat in which the bacon has been cooking, and cook for three minutes, stirring all the time. Then let them stand and brown thoroughly underneath. Fold over in the pan, as if you were folding an omelette, and turn out on a hot dish, decorating with a little parsley. Potato may be cooked in this way in any other fat or dripping that is convenient, except mutton fat.

FRENCH FRIED POTATOES—Wash and pare several medium-sized potatoes, cut each lengthwise into eight pieces, and soak in cold water for about an hour. Then dry them very carefully in a clean towel. Dry raw potato in the boiler for an hour and a quarter, until the potatoes are not only soft but brown on the top. A little finely chopped onion between the layers will improve this dish wonderfully.

SCALLOPED POTATOES—Prepare four good sized potatoes for cooking, and after they have been soaked in cold water, cut them in slices a quarter of an inch thick. Butter a baking dish generously, put a layer of raw potato in the bottom, and sprinkle it with pepper, salt and flour, adding half a tablespoonful of butter in small lumps. Put another layer of potato in and repeat the process until the dish is full. Pour in hot milk until it may be seen through the top layer. Bake the dish in the oven for an hour and a quarter, until the potatoes are not only soft but brown on the top. A little finely chopped onion between the layers will improve this dish wonderfully.

POTATO CAKES—Any cold mashed potatoes may be used up in this way. So that they are very soft and creamy, make into small cakes and roll them in flour so that they will not burn. Butter an omelette pan and brown the cakes in this, first on one side and then on the other, adding more butter if needed. The potato may also be fried like an omelette instead of in separate cakes.

NEW POTATOES IN BUTTER—Scrub or scrape two dozen very small potatoes and put them in a small stew-pan, cover them with a cupful of boiling water, and let them boil in this until brown and tender. They will probably take about half an hour. Sprinkle with pepper, salt and chopped parsley. Any butter that has not been absorbed can be kept and used again. This is an uncommon and delicious way of serving young potatoes.

STUFFED POTATOES—Bake as many potatoes as are required and cut them in halves lengthwise with a sharp knife. Scoop out the insides, and mash thoroughly in a bowl with melted butter, white pepper, salt and cream. Fill the half-cases with this mixture, place them in rows on a platter, and bake until brown on the top.

THE STALLION TO BREED FROM.

Since the ability to stamp his characteristic on his progeny is the only really important point in selecting a sire, improvement of our stock can only result from our ability to pick out such a sire and consistently breed to him. The one sure and best method is by carefully observing the progeny got by the horse from our own and other mares in the vicinity. Too frequently, however, we are not able to do this, and must make our selection wholly on the appearance of the horse. Stallion license laws have created a constantly shifting population of scrub or unsound horses, and too much discrimination cannot be used in getting not only the right type but sound pedigreed sires.

As stated, prepotency is essential, and it is well indicated by certain characteristics. Boldness of outlook, free spirited action and strong masculine appearance mark the horse with ability to pass on his characteristics to his foals. We well remember having seen a black two-year-old Percheron colt of the head of his class last summer that we venture to say will leave colts like himself. He was a stalling good colt that put on his own show. Given his head he got up and moved with such freedom and precision, strength and power, and brought his feet down so solidly that he simply made everybody look at him. He was "looking" for a bigger town. This is the result of breeding and with good conformation and soundness one of the first things to be looked for. A horse with a sleepy appearance, a mare's head and a ewe neck may do for the other fellow to breed from, but not for the man who wants real character in his colts. In spite of supposed evolution of course we can keep a fairly good degree of quality and style associated with it. We would prefer, however, a horse of 1,600 pounds, closely ribbed and fairly compact conformation, good quality and active style, to an 1800-pound or 2,000-pound horse of open conformation, slovenly get and coarse quality. The reason is that the gets of the former horse are apt to be good with the one main drawback—lack of size, but they are ways in demand at fair prices, while the gets of the big horse in this case may be anything at all and not worth nearly as much on an average as the other class. Long couplings, short ribs, slack loins, narrow and shallow chests and light quarters are things not to have in a horse. A wasp-waisted stallion will get too many colts like himself. Furthermore, violent crosses, i.e., crossing too big a stallion on a little mare is apt to beget scrubs, with something altogether disproportionate about them.

Quality is of the very greatest importance. It is best indicated by fineness of hair on both body and legs, fineness of the skin, clean, flat nature of the home or tendons of the legs, distinctness of the veining after excoriation, and general refinement of conformation. No one can altogether define quality. It must be seen to be appreciated, and it delights the eye of a real horseman. Too frequently in our show rings we see small, undersized horses bragged about for their quality, when too often it is under development. Not long ago we saw a runt of a three-year-old Clydesdale win a second place in a class of big horses simply because his quality was superfine and his action flashy. He later competed for championship against a two-year-old that was not only considerably larger but almost his equal in quality, but fortunately didn't win here.

Unsoundness, of course, ought not to be countenanced at all, i.e., hereditary unsoundness. Both spavins, ring-bones, sidebones, thoroughpins and bog spavins may tempt the gambler and anyone can easily pick them out with the eye or by running the hand closely over the hocks, fetlocks and hoofheads. In fact, cleanliness of limb is essential. The first three unsoundnesses are the worst. All should be avoided. Unsound horses will beget colts predisposed to disease and nothing reduces the market price of a horse like a set of unsound legs.
