ADVENTURES IN RECOLLECTIONS

GEERS' FISH STORY.

In 1919 after the veteran driver Ed Geers returned from a vacation in Florida, he smothered the Memphis training camp with hints about tarpon fishing, alligators, and other tin and feather talk which is rarely heard on a race track. McMahon, Edman, and other trainers accepted it gracefully, until "Pop" began to repeat and pass around snap shots out of the old deck which his nephew Robert Neil has carried through the Grand Circuit for a dozen years.

Finally the members of the Knockers Club held a caucus and decided that it must act in self defence. Edman was the only member who remained loyal to Geers, as he was too deaf to hear any of the stories without an ear trumpet.

One morning during the high water while the club was in session on the bench near the track gate, some one suggested that it would be a good idea to take Geers fishing. As he did not fall in with it, a few of them began telling of the big catches which were being made by the town folk. This was continued until the old reinsman began asking questions. As the replies were satisfactory, he decided to make a trip one day when the track was wet.

McMahon secured a pole and line, while Edman brought a few pieces of pork from the cook house for bait. When the party arrived at the place selected, the pole was handed to Geers. A piece of pork was placed on the hook, which was large enough to haul in a small shark, and Ed was told to go to it. The wind was blowing a gale and when Geers dogged behind a pile of lumber to light a cigar, Rash and McMahon slipped a big fish, which they brought with them, on the hook and dropped it in the water. Upon its return, Geers felt the weight on the line, as usual as he lifted the pole, and landed the prize. The bait of the party made a rush for it, and after wrapping the fish in a rubber apron, stowed it away in the auto. As soon as this was done, they were anxious to pull out and go to town. Geers, however, refused to leave and said that as the fish were biting, it would be advisable to remain and get a few more. After walking along the bank for some distance, he finally did get a bite and pulled in a big cat fish.

When it was landed, "Pop" suggested that they go to town and have the fish cooked for dinner. Two or three of the others objected but in due time all of them were grouped around a table with Geers at the head of it. As the management of the restaurant was too busy to prepare and cook the fish Geers caught, the old veteran took a bill of fare and ordered a dinner in which green turtle soup, pomano, and a planked steak were given a place.

The race track appetites carried all of the guests through the different courses at top speed. When the coffee was coming, Geers was paged. He went out and found a Marion, Ohio man who had come to measure Dudette and Goldie Todd for their new sulkeys. Getting into a car with him, Geers started for the race track, leaving his friends to finish the meal.

After the finger bowls had been removed, the waiter dropped a long bill on the table. He also looked for some one to grab it, and at the same pass him a tip as big as Henry Ford left after he and Edman lunched at Hartford. Edman took a peep at it and said "Charge it to Geers." Rash suggested that McMahon add it to the account of one of Thompson's horses, when the waiter saw that every one was shy, he called the manager. Each of them tried to explain what had happened but "trust was dead" so far as that food emporium was concerned.

Before long it dawned on the party that "Pop" had put one over on them and when the manager would not take the auto as security, an assessment was made and the bill paid. The manager smiled when he heard the details, and on the strength of it asked the outfit to sample a special brand of cigar which had been received that morning. While they were being lit, Geers called McMahon on the telephone and said: "Very sorry, Dick, I had to leave you all. Trade the fish for the dinner and bring me the change. It should be worth some money when food is so scarce and prices high."

Comb Sage Tea in Hair to Darken it

IT'S GRANDMOTHER'S RECIPE TO KEEP HER LOCKS DARK, GLOSSY, BEAUTIFUL

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.
