THE ORIGIN OF THE CAP AND GOWN

The custom of wearing caps and gowns at commencement exercises of the leading American universities, or at any academic function or ceremony has its origin in a mediaeval ceremony.

Before studying the recently established American code, or attempting to unravel the mysteries of the English hood, the evolution of the academic degree, gown and hood from an early age to the present day must be traced.

The old cathedral schools of Europe which were established in the seventh century were the precursors of those early universities founded in the 12th century to meet the increased demand for instruction in the higher branches of knowledge.

In the early days of the University of Paris the chancellor of the cathedral on the Ile de la Cité issued the licenses to teach, and when the student entered upon the performance of his duties as a duly licensed teacher his emancipation from the bachelor hood was symbolized by placing on his head a cap on biretta, which ceremony was performed by his former instructor. The present day custom of giving a hood when an honorary degree is conferred, is, therefore, but an outgrowth of this mediaeval ceremony. It was but natural that the early universities should preserve as their academic dress an adaptation of monk's robe with its cowl or hood. Such gowns were at first a mark of profound learning and were worn by doctors of divinity and graduates, but later, undergraduates were entitled to wear them.

At Oxford and Cambridge, where the order of things does not change with each succeeding generation, the same type of gowns have been worn since the beginning of the seventh century. In America it has been customary for eminent jurists, doctors of divinity and presiding officers of universities to wear a black silk robe of ample dimensions. This movement, which was indefinite, originated among the students themselves, and many of the graduating classes in different universities and colleges, who elected, from time to time, to wear caps and gowns at commencement exercises.

The faculties were quick to recognize the utilitarian advantage of a uniform dress, as well as the added dignity the black gowns gave to an assemblage of students, and encouraged the custom, which has spread so rapidly. Until 1894 no definite form of pattern of gowns was adhered to. In that year an intercollegiate commission was appointed to consider the question of adopting a distinctive academic costume for graduates of American universities and colleges, and as a result of that commission's work a simple system regulating the shape of gowns and colors of hoods was established. This code, which has been adopted by the leading universities and colleges of the country, provides for three types of gowns. Those worn by the bachelors are made of black worsted cloth and have a long pointed sleeve. Masters are entitled to wear silk gowns made with a long, closed sleeve, square at the end with a slit for the arm. The doctors' gowns are silk with a full, round, open sleeve. These may be faced with velvet, and have three bars of velvet on the sleeve. The color of such trimming must correspond to the color which edges the hood.

It's hard to bring up a baby without MENNE'S TALCUM POWDER. It relieves and cools his tender skin. It makes him "comfy" and happy.
Be sure it's MENNE'S—then you know it's pure, sanitary and safe. For 40 years MENNE'S has been the baby's best friend.

AN UNLUCKY REMARK
Her husband had just come home after demobilization, and had his first meeting with the new nurse, who was remarkably pretty.
"She is sensible and scientific, too," urged the fond mother, "and says she will allow no one to kiss baby while she's near."
"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near."
And the nurse was discharged.

BISHOP POTTER'S BODY CREAMATED.
One more evidence has just come to light that Bishop Henry C. Potter, sixth Bishop of New York, was a progressive man. Close friends of the prelate knew that he was a strong believer in the cremation of the human body, but no Protestant Episcopal Bishop's body had ever been cremated. So the public took it for granted that he rested in the Potter Memorial Chapel in the Cathedral of

A cake of Gold Soap is not only big but solid. It wears away slowly and evenly without crumbling or softening. It can be used down to the thinnest wafer. For this reason alone, Gold Soap is more economical than ordinary laundry soap—it goes farther. But a cake of Gold Soap is bigger than any other laundry soap at the same price—more soap for your money. It also is better soap—made only from the best materials suitable for laundry use.
