Marriage Scales

A WAY OUT

With the definite resolve to confess to Charles his own love-affair, Craig Cullam was beginning, "See here, old man, there is something I must tell you——" when his phone rang sharply.

In response to his inquiring 'Yes?" the bibulous blurred voice of a member of his company answered.

"I shay, Craig, what about coming down for a bit, hey? I've got a party—deuce of a good party—in my rooms. Girlshs want t' hear you sing love song, you ole sheik! C'mon down!!"

Cullam answered curtly.

Sorry. I have a guest."

When he turned back to Charles and found the latter looking so woe-begone hunched up in a corner of the couch, he had a change of resolve.

Why disturb Charles, immersed in his own love tragedy, with the unfortunate affaire du coeur of the man who was unwittingly responsible for his friend's dilemma? Then, too, Doris' name was sacred to Cullam. He shrank from discussing her even with his friend. He had set her apart in a shrine of silence, and never mentioned her name in conversation with others.

It was in this subtle way that Fate again intervened to keep Craig Cullam in ignorance of the fact that the girl he loved was the sister of the women who loved him—and to bar from Charles the knowledge that his friend, upon whom his wife had set her heart, was the unaccepted suitor of his sister-in-law. It needed only Mariana, weeping at home, and Doris, listening wearily to Dick Jervis and thinking of Craig Cullam, each girl ignorant of the fact that the other knew and loved the same man, to complete the charming little tangle into which a mischievous destiny had drawn four lives.

Charles gave another lusty sigh, smiled ruefully at Cullam.

"Well, Craig, we're up against it, aren't we? I don't know why I should bother you with my trouble when you're mixed up in it through no possible fault of your own— but logically there wasn't any one else to turn to and I knew I could trust your discretion. I thought maybe you could give me some advice. You've surely had lots more experience with women than I've had, a good-looking chap like you."

Cullam shook his head slowly.

"I'm afraid you've pinned your faith to a broken reed. I draw a blank when it comes to knowing women. I've as good as lost the only game I ever tried to win."

Charles looked relieved.

"You're in love with someone? I rather thought you must be—you never seem to notice women at all."

Cullam lit a cigarette, leaned back in his chair, blowing smoke idly.

"I'm in love with someone who is as far above me as the stars. She wouldn't have me as a gift."

"Lord, what a mess." Charles sighed sympathetically. "Funny how complicated life can be, isn't it? Emotionally, we're a sort of endless chain —I'm in love with Mariana, and she's crazy about you, and you're sighing for a girl who won't have you, while ten to one she's wanting a chap who's chasing another woman."

Cullam smiled faintly at the fallacy. He devoutly wished Dick Jervis were chasing another girl and not hanging abjectly about the indifferent Doris.

"Well, philosophizing won't help us any in the present situation," he remarked gloomily. "We've got to do something. We can't let your marriage blow up like this, because of a woman's temporary infatuation with a conjured-up ideal."

"But what can I do?" demanded Charles. "I can't hold Mariana against her will. In the first place I wouldn't want to, and, in the second, I made a promise to her at the time of our marriage that I would release her without protest if the time ever came when she wanted her freedom."

"She must be made not to want it," Cullam answered decisively.

"But how?" Charles was pathetic in his helplessness. His blue eyes held the look of a hurt child who gropes for comfort.

Cullam tossed aside his cigarette, clasped his hands behind his head, and sat staring at the ceiling, immersed in thought.

Charles lapsed into silence, too sunk in gloom even to think.

The minutes ticked by slowly on the dial of the travelling clock on the desk. A faint cooling breeze rustled the trees in the little park outside. The street noises were hushed by the lateness of the hour Charles sighed audibly a tintervals.

Finally Cullam said abruptly:

"Charles, did you ever see the play 'David Garrick'?"

Charles shook his head, puzzled.

"It's an interesting story," Cullam went on. "I have a hunch we might borrow a lesson from it and apply it to this particular situation."

Charles moved impatiethly.

"What do you mean?"

"I believe I've solved our problem," Cullam announced cheerfully. "Here it is. Now listen——"

THEY TELL THEIR NEIGHBORS

Women Tell Each Other How They Were Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Woodbridge, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles. I would have headaches, backaches, pains between my shoulders and under my shoulder-blades and dragging down feelings on each side. I was sometimes unable to do my work and felt very badly. My mother-in-law told me about the Vegetable Compound and I got some right away. It has done me more good than any other medicine I ever took and I recommend it to my neighbors. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you think it will help some poor sufferer."—Mrs. EDGAR SIMMONS, R. R. 2, Woodbridge, Ont.

In nearly every neighborhood in every town and city in this country there are women who have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the treatment of ailments peculiar to their sex, and they take pleasure in passing the good word along to other women. Therefore, if you are troubled in this way, why not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from roots and herbs, has for forty years proved its value in such cases. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bible Thoughts For Today

July 13, 1924

AN OLD MAN'S TESTIMONY:—I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness — 2 Timothy 4:7.

PRAYER:—Most Merciful God, we have often failed and refused to fight but Thy mercy has given us another chance; keep us stearfast in the faith from now on.

July 14, 1924

RETURN TO THE LORD:—Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.—Isaiah 55:7.

PRAYER:—O Lord, our God, we have often tried to forsake our wickedness, and to purify our own thoughts, but could not. Now we turn to Thee and with Thy help and by Thy grace, success is assured.

July 15, 1924

ETERNAL LIFE:—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. This do, and thou shalt live.—Luke 10:27, 28.

PRAYER:—May the love of God be shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who is given unto us.

July 16, 1924

THE ONLY CREATOR:—In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.—John 1: 1, 3.

PRAYER:—Most Holy One, we thank Thee for the knowledge that all things were made by Thee, but above all we rejoice thou art our only Redeemer, and that in Thee all things are for us recreated anew.

July 17, 1924

THERE IS NO DISCHARGE: —There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no discharge in that war.—Ecclesiastes 8:8.

PRAYER:—O Lord, we live and yet not we; God liveth in us, and death hath no longer dominion over us.

July 18, 1924

THE ROYAL LAW:—If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well: but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convicted of the law as trangressors.—James 2:8, 9.

PRAYER: — Dear Heavenly Father we are all Thy children by creation; make us all truly Thine by regeneration.

July 19, 1924

PRIDE A PITFALL:—Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Proverbs 16:18.

PRAYER:—Give us! O give us, Lord, the humble and lowly Spirit, which is ever conscious of its complete dependence on Thee.

JULY 13—LESSONS FROM THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

(General Topic: The Boyhood of Jesus.)

Golden Text. — Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men.—Luke 2. 52.

Devotional Reading.—Luke 10. 25-37

Reference Material. — Matt. 2, 1-23; Luke 2. 39.

THE LESSON TEXT
Luke 2. 40-52.

THE TEXT EXPLAINED

40. Filled with wisdom—Growing in wisdom daily Grace of God—God's continual blessing.

41. Went every year to Jerusalem—The center at which all Jewish feasts were celebrated. Feast of the passover—Compare Exod. 23. 15.

42. Twelve years old—The age when a Jewish boy became a "son of the law," that is, subject to its obligations being presented in the temple and receiving phylacteries from his father.

43. His parents knew it not—Not because of neglect, it being natural that he should be with the other children of the caravan.

44. A day's journey — About six miles. At nightfall they would miss Jesus.

46. In the temple—One of the chamber about the court. Teachers—Scribes or rabbis. Hearing them and asking them questions— The natural relationship of teacher and pupil.

48. Astonished — Jesus had been growing up without their recognizing it, hence they were surprised at what they saw.

49. How is it that ye sought me?—Surprise at their not knowing where he would be, Knew ye not that I must be in my Father's house?—"Could you not guess that I would be here in the temple?"

51. Went down—From Jerusalem.—Subject unto them—As a dutiful son he spent the years in toil. Kept all these sayings in her heart—The mother-heart added to her treasures of the night of Jesus' birth.

52. Advanced in wisdom and stature—His wisdom grew with his age, and the fitness of both made him pleasing to God and acceptable to those who were in touch with his life.

LESSON THEMES

A Boy's Greatest Treasure. The greatest treasure of a boy's life is a religious home. No after-association, however blessed, can take its place. The story of the birth and infancy of Jesus as recorded in Matthew and Luke reveals to us the charming simplicity and rare beauty of the home life into which Jesus came. The humble shepherds, with hearts and lives open to the light of his guiding star, throw the charm of their simple life and fellowship over the manage where lay thes newborn King, while the home at Nazareth, with its tasks, its discipline, its religious influence, and its every hallowed association, challenges our admiration and reverence. It reflects a type of home life in Israel over which the light of faith and love still shone, and which stands out in marked contrast to the harshness of the political order, and to the shallowness and hypocrisy of the social and religious life of the official circles. But thus was it ever been. A remnant of the faithful still remain. Far from the glamour and the strife of court and market-place there are hearthstones from which rises the sweet incense of family devotion, and to such home circles the Christ still comes.

A Home's Greatest Wealth. The home's greatest wealth is the children given to its love and guidance. Nothing can take the place of this circle of happy life. Every well-born child is a priceless treasure, with possibilities exceeding even the fanciful dreames of parents and friends, because equal, at least potentially, to the accumulated abilities and greatness of two coverging lines of heredity. Somewhere today, in crib and cradle, in mansion and cottage, if we could but interpret the promise and prophecy of child life, we should find the great men and women of a generation hence, the statesmen and rulers, the scientists and philosophers, the labor leaders, the merchant princes, the captains of industry, the philanthropists and social benefactors, the prophets and teachers, into whose hands will be intrusted the responsibility of leadership in the world's work, which if rightly done is the work of the Kingdom.

Our Greatest Opportunity. To those of us who in the pursuit of our tasks are brought into daily contact with child life in the home, on the village street, in the school, and in the sanctuary is given the greatest opportunity possible for shaping the social and spiritual life of the young people—the hope of tomorrow. Our every touch may be one of encouragement and inspiration. Our influence and example may be a perpetualy challenge to a noble attainment of each one's soul. It is ours to determine, at least in part, whether the possibilities of someone's life just now, in its beginning, shall be realized. Shall we inspire the promise and aid in the fulfillment of the prophecies of childhood?

FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

In what town did Jesus spend his boyhood? Was he obedient to his parents? Was he an apt scholar? What kind of training did he receive in his home? What is a boy's greatest treasure? Can anything take the place of religious home-training? What is the greatest treasure of a home? Can anything fully take its place? What is our greatest opportunity for Christian service? Did the town life of Nazareth affect the boyhood of Jesus? Do you desire, like Jesus, to grow more fit mentally and physically each day? What are you doing to further your growth?

Every man's life lies within the rpesent; for the past is spent and done with, and the future is uncertain.—Antonius.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ROBERT BROWN

On the afternoon of Thursday, June 12th, 1924. Our beloved sister Mrs. Robert Brown of Stanley Bridge, departed to be with the Lord in her 78th year.

Mrs. Brown was one of the most gentle and lovable of women, whose friendship any one might well envy. She was always interested in those things that advanced the Redeemer's Kingdom. She was held in the highest esteem by all who had the pleasure of knowing her, as was quite evident by the large number of people who gathered at the home at the hour for the funeral, on Saturday, June 14th to show their respect for the departed as well as their sympathy for the bereaved family.

The service at the home was conducted by the Minister of the congregation, assisted by Revd. Mr. Sterling and Revd. George Morris. The message from the word was both appropriate and helpful. The service at the grave was conducted by Revd. Mr. Aitken. Mrs. Brown leaves to mourn a sorrowing husband, one daughter Lottie at home, three sons, Fulton and George at home and Ivan at Kensington. Each member of the home did their part in tenderly caring for the one they loved during her sickness. Our hearts go out in loving sympathy for the bereaved husband and family. Gods ways are not our ways but "He dother all things well" and he says "what do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." We pray that all those whose lives were touched by the gentle and loving disposition of the one that is called to the house of many mansions, may receive such an inspiration from the memory of her life as will enable them to touch other lives lifting them nearer to Him who said "I am the way, the truth and the life."

The pall bearers were: U. Robinson, C. Robinson, James O. Simpson, George E. Brown, Harry Brown Isaac Brown.

CAPTAIN ALFRED GORDON

The death at Roseneath on Sunday last of Capt. Alfred Gordon, makes another break in the steadily narrowing circles of skilled and stalwart master mariners of this Province, which was at one time the centre of an extensive ship building industry, and which sent out its ships and men to all corners of the globe.

Captain Gordon, who was seventy-eight years of age, was a son of the late Peter Gordon, and it is worthy of note that of a family of seven sons, five followed the sea all rapidly rising in their vocation and receiving Master's papers.

The late Captain Gordon answered "the clear call, the call that would not be denied" over half a century ago when he shipped on the Brigantine "Letter B" George Graham Master, sailing from Pictou to St. John with coal.

Among other vessels on which he sailed were the Brigantine 'Martha" and the Barque "Mavinia" George Douglas Master. The latter vessel sailed to Matansas, West Indies, Marsailles, the River Plate in South America, Liverpool, Philadelphia, Cuba and other ports, carrying mailed cargoes, including green hides from the famous cattle region of the River Plate, Sugar from Cuba, fish for Havana, and other commodities. Captain Gordon was almost two years sailing to and from the River Plate.

Another of his ships was the Brig, "Idalea" on which his brother the late Captain William Gordon was at one tme Master and on which his brother John, subsequently Captain also sailed.

Captain Alfred left the sea for a time to plough the soil instead of ploughing the salt waves and remained home for about eighteen months. His next vessel was the bark "Sappho". He made a number of voyages on the "Sappho" his brother Lemuel being mate with him on several occasions. The "Sappho" was his last ship, and on leaving her he returned to his farm at Roseneath, where he has resided until his death.

Captain Gordon followed the sea for seventeen years, four and a half years as Master and nine years as Mate. During his career he had the thrilling experiences which fall to the lot of every Sailor, being at times at the mercy of hurricanes and storms, although he never actually suffered ship-wreck, and never lost a man from any ship under his command. The other four brothers who followed the sea were William, who died at Bridgewater, N. S., a few years ago, and who resided in Georgetown for many years. John, who died in New York; Edwin, who died of fever and was burried at sea and Lemuel, who is at present in Tacoma, Wash. Another brother Fade, of Roseneath, and one sister Mrs. John Westaway, Georgetown, are the only survivors of a large family.

Captain Gordon was a worthy representative of a well known and highly honored family of Scottish descent, whose name was prominently identified with the early history of the eastern part of this province. He was a man of great vigor and energy, and possessed decided political views, being a very strong Conservative, but he never let his politics interfere with his friendship, and his circle of friends was very wide.

He was a red-blooded man, every inch a sailor, and a most competent Master Mariner. By his death, a kind neighbor, a loving husband, and father, and a most excellent citizen of irreproachable character, has been lost to the community.

He leaves to mourn a widow (nee, Mary MacIntyre), four sons Peter H. at home, Lemuel H, Hester F. and Alfred Earl in Vancouver, B. C., two daughters, Mrs. D. G. MacRae, Heatherdale, and Miss Emma, registered nurse of Charlottetown.

The funeral which took place on Tuesday, June 24th, to the cemetery at Brudenell was very largely attended. One hundred carriages being in the procession. The services at the house and grave were conducted by Rev. C. E. Armstrong, pastor of the Christian Church, Montague of which Captain Gordon was a member. Mr. Armstrong was assisted by Rev. R. W. Stevenson of Toronto, a former pastor at Montague, and Rev. D. MacVicar, Cardigan. Many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends attested to the high regard in which the deceased was held.
