THE Patriot devotes a lengthy paragraph to the efficiency returns published in the Guardian over two months ago, and still fails to give credit to Capt. A. G. Peake, Lieuts. Sprague, Darke and the non-coms for the excellent work done by their company. The Patriot is still in error in stating that No. 1 Co., New Brunswick, has been reduced from 231 to 201 and that our No. 2 tied with it. As a matter of fact the Charlottetown Company six points over. As New Brunswick rival. That company is not the formidable competitor of our efficient Artillerymen. Probably after a second day's blundering the Patriot will set it right this afternoon.

A very pretty wedding took place at Flat River on Wednesday December 3rd when Alex D. Ross the popular merchant of Eldon was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Atanada McDonald of Flat River and sister of Judge McDonald of his city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. S. Stewart, of Woodville, assisted by the Rev. A. McLean Sinclair of St. John's Church, Belfast at the residence of the bride's mother in the presence of a few of the most intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride who was neatly and becomingly dressed was attended by her niece Miss Gracie McKenzie as bridesmaid and the groom was supported by his brother William Ross. The popularity of the bride was in evidence by the large number of valuable and useful wedding presents displayed. After dinner had been served and a pleasant evening spent the young couple drove away to their future home in Eldon, with many hearty congratulations and good wishes of their numerous friends in which the Guardian cordially joins.

HOW TO BE POPULAR.

Appear happy even if you are not. Happiness is never out of place except at funerals. Even then it is better to check it with your coat at the door, than to leave it at home.

If you have a stroke of luck see that an account of it is thoroughly circulated. The reputation of being lucky is a powerful magnet if you want a large following of friends.

Wear an air of prosperity at all times, even while availing yourself of the bankruptcy law. No one (except your creditors) will think less of you for looking prosperous at such a time.

One of the most important requisites to attain popularity is to dress well. Your jewels may be imitation, but you must have a good tailor. Few can tell the real from the false in the matter of gowns, but even a "Button" will sneer at your back if your coat has not the proper cut.

When you converse let it be lightly about nothing in particular. Remarks that indicate deep thought, sincere sentiment or strong feeling are bad form and won't be tolerated by fashionable people. If you don't know how to talk without saying something, learn how to listen effectively. There are always plenty of people ready to be enrolled among the friends of a good listener.

In short, the happier and luckier and more prosperous you seem, the better dressed you are, and the less you say, the more friends you will have.—Francesca di Maria in "Life."

Not a Half-Way Girl.

He was in love with the girl, and wanted to marry her, but he was cautious, and didn't believe in the policy of putting all his fortunes to the touch, and then getting knocked out.

In other words, he didn't want to ask for what he wanted unless he saw some sign of its being in the shop. It's a wise thing to do, too, as some men have found out after they have asked. Thinking thus, he was talking to her.

"I'd like to know just what you think of me?" he said tentatively.

"Why?" she enquired with a rippling little laugh.

"Because it would help me in my business."

"Oh," she exclaimed.

"That's all right," he hastened to assure her. "I mean business."

"Really?" she twittered.

"Indeed, I do."

"What is your business?"

"To marry you if I can."

She was sitting in the window and he stood about four feet from her. She got up and looked him square in the face with a flash in her eye.

"Well," she said, half indignantly, "what do you expect me to do to help you?"

"I don't want you to encourage me only to turn me down," he said, hedging a bit. "In other words, I want you to meet me half way."

"Would that be of any assistance?" she asked wearily.

"I'd ask you on the spot," he responded with a great confidence.

"Well," she said, measuring the distance between them with her eye, "I am no half-way girl, I'd have you know, sir," and as his heart hope went down with a dull thud she cleared the intervening space and lit plump on his manly bosom.
