CIVIC PROCLAMATION

In honor of the visit of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales I hereby declare Tuesday 19th instant a civic holiday.

Owing to conditions over which the citizens had no control the celebration of Peace Day was postponed until Wednesday 20th instant. Believing the occasion worthy of special commemoration and that the people should be given an opportunity to express their gratitude and give vent to their feelings of joy, I hereby declare Wednesday 20th inst. a Public Civic holiday and respectfully request the citizens to loyally observe the same.

G. D. WRIGHT, Mayor.

31.

Wanted

Four hundred returned men to act as special constables on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales. These men will be sworn in and wear an M. P. Badge, and will be employed in lining the streets from the wharf to the Provincial Building, to protect the Prince en route. The work will occupy only about one hour's time. All names to be given in at the G.W.V.A. rooms, Queen Street, and men will meet there at nine o'clock on Tuesday (19th) to receive badges and be sworn in. 223-8-13M41.

NOTICE

The Bridge at Rusticoville will be closed to traffic from Tuesday the twelfth instant until further notice while the bridge is undergoing repairs.

SANDRA THE JEALOUS By Jane Phelps

SANDRA LUNCHES ALONE WITH BARRETT EDMONDS CHAPTER XXXIX

The house was awfully lonely. The evenings seemed endless. I had not thought I should miss Everett as I did. But the excitement of dressing for him, watching until he came, in to dinner, then either talking a while or playing for him unless we went out and filled the hours fuller than I had realized.

I didn't bother to dress for my solitary dinner which I soon finished. Somehow I couldn't get up any enthusiasm about my music afterward. I went to bed unusually early but instead of sleeping, I lay thinking of all I had been told of Leola and Barrett Edmonds.

"Would I have been happier if I had married a young man like him?" I asked myself, then felt guilty toward Everett, and ashamed of my thoughts. Everett was my husband. No one made me marry him; I did it because I wanted to; because I thought him a little finer than the village boys, and felt flattered by his gifts and his attentions.

I had known for some time that I was not in love with Everett the way I supposed I should be. But I had also thought that my ideas of love, mostly taken from books, were wrong. That it was only four people like Leola that men had such love; and that women only had that kind of adoration when a man was very kind and indulgent. That it was a woman's duty to love the man she married, and his to support her, had also been one of the things which never had entered my head until I heard Mrs. Gray say so. She had been talking to Hetty. It was about some young girl friend who had married and then, because she was not happy and did not love the man she had married, had left him.

"It's a woman's duty to love her husband," Mrs. Gray had said. "He supports her, and gives her a home." "But she can't love him if he isn't nice to her," Hetty had objected. "She can if she will stop thinking of herself, and think of him." The trouble with women is they don't make any allowance for a man. They have lots of temptations women don't have. And most of them work hard. Women are silly to keep thinking about being loved all the time.

Were they? I kept asking myself that question. I did so want to be loved—really loved like Leola had been, not in the cold calm way Everett acted toward me. Only once had he shown me any of that sort of affection, and that had been the night of my birthday when he had crushed me in his arms. But he had gone away for days and left me with one little careless kiss, and evidently no great thought had been the way he left Leola, I knew.

Friday came but Alice telephoned me she had a terrible headache and couldn't go to luncheon. "You go right along," she said. "Barry came up and said he was going to join us." "No, I won't go—yes, I will too. I do wish you'd come." "If my head is better I may change my mind. I don't know that it is safe to let you and Barry alone. He's half in love with you already. First thing you know he'll be asking you to run off with him."

"The idea of putting such things into my head," I laughingly replied. "Now you'll have to come! I shall be uncomfortable if you do not." "Nonsense, I was only joking. But he does like you awfully well. He's a charming fellow, and many a girl would like him as an escort."

I dressed with the greatest care. I was purposely a little late. Barrett was there and met me at the door. We went in together after I had satisfied myself that Mrs. Sloane was not in the dressing room. "I must not stay long," I said feeling he had ordered. I had a feeling that I should not have come, that Barrett would be angry if he knew. I also was positive someone would tell him if I didn't, so I had made up my mind to inform him I had lunched with Mr. Edmonds as soon as he came home.

"Why in such a hurry?" "I wouldn't have come if I had known positively that Mrs. Sloane would not be here; but she had promised to come when we talked on the telephone." "I won't keep you one moment longer than you want to stay." He ordered a simple luncheon, and while I enjoyed being with him and watching the people, I was in a way thoroughly uncomfortable. I was doing nothing particularly wrong; yet I knew that at home a married woman never lunched with another man unless her husband was along.

I began to fear Barrett would be terribly angry. I wouldn't have coffee, but excused myself and hurried home. I knew by his expression that Barrett was surprised by my actions. But I could not help it. He never had seen Everett angry. I had, I couldn't forget the time he had been so angry when I sat in the hotel corridor when we were on our wedding trip. Perhaps he would think this worse. Tomorrow—Everett's Letter Disappoints Sandra

ST. JOHN WOMAN TRIED FOR TWO YEARS TO FIND RELIEF—PRAISES TANLAC

"By the time my third bottle of Tanlac was gone, all my troubles were gone too," said Mrs. George A. Pierce who lives at 2 Moore Street, St. John while talking to a Tanlac Representative the other day.

"I suffered terribly from rheumatism," continued Mrs. Pierce, "and ever since I had my first attack of it two years ago, I have been trying to find something to overcome it, but my efforts failed completely until I got Tanlac. Sometimes my arm and fingers would be swollen to almost twice the natural size. All my joints would swell so bad and get so stiff and sore that when I tried to walk the pain would be so severe that I would almost faint. After lying down for awhile I would have to have something to pull up by. I was certainly in a bad fix, and nobody will ever know how much I suffered."

"My son had heard so many people talking about Tanlac, and the good it had done them, that he persuaded me to give it a trial. Well, I must say that it is the best medicine I ever saw in my life, and since taking three bottles of it, I am rid of those awful pains from rheumatism, and am so well and strong in every way that I can go on all my housework with perfect ease. All the swelling has gone from my joints, and I can walk around as well as I ever could. I am glad to recommend Tanlac to everybody, and as long as I live I will praise this wonderful medicine for the great good it has done me."

RECEPTION TO RETURNED MAN

On Tuesday, August 5th a large number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Joseph Martin, Ruston to do honor to her son Mr. Eusebe Martin, who recently returned from overseas.

After a few speeches had been made by Mr. John H. Buntain and Mr. Theophilus Blanchard, of Rustico and Miss Marie Trotter and Mr. Robert Doucette, both of McCreary, Manitoba, an address was read and a well filled purse was presented to our hero for which he thanked his friends in a few well chosen words.

Following is the address: Honored and dear Friend—We, have gathered here this evening to extend to you a most cordial welcome home and to express even though we can do it very imperfectly the sentiments which your happy return evokes. Once more we would express our appreciation of the services you have rendered to our country, for we realize that we owe you a debt of gratitude which we can neither pass over lightly nor quickly forget.

In the days when the war cloud hung low over Europe we saw how nobly you offered your life to purchase the great boon of peace.

We were indeed proud of you then when you generously responded to your country's call and bravely departed for other lands where toil and danger awaited you. There we followed you by our hopes and prayers while we watched with intense interest the progress of the awful conflict waiting most anxiously.

Till danger's troubled night departed, "and the star of peace return." That star has at last arisen. The conflict is ended but it shall not soon be forgotten nor shall we forget the glorious part our soldiers took in the great world war, for the battles in which they gained lasting fame are known to all.

We heartily congratulate you dear friend on having nobly done your part in the great struggle for justice and freedom and we give thanks to the kind Providence which has watched over you in danger and brought you safely home.

May that same Providence, which has guided you and shielded you during those perilous days of the war, now shed about you the light of happiness and prosperity.

Please accept this small gift as a token of the gratitude and esteem of the friends who with joy and honest pride unite in extending to you their heartiest "Welcome Home."

QUIET RESTORED

COPENHAGEN, August 12.—(By the A. P.)—Comparative quiet has been restored at Chemnitz, Saxony, where fifty persons were killed during food riots, inspired by Spartacan agitators, according to advices from Berlin.

Various important buildings are still in the hands of the Government forces, but the majority of the troops have withdrawn behind the Anerswald-Oberlichtenau line.

Further Government reinforcements have arrived on the outskirts of Chemnitz. Negotiations with the rioters are in progress.

Live Poultry Wanted!

TO FARMERS, POULTRY RAISERS AND MERCHANTS— We are prepared to buy Live Hens during the next few weeks until weather becomes cooler, then we will buy large quantities of Dressed Poultry of all kinds.

Hens are usually fattest when they cease laying and just before moulting, and the moulting season is near, therefore you should cull your flocks now, thereby saving feed and labor of dressing your fowl.

We will not buy chickens until further notice or by special arrangement. Good prices will be paid for best quality and all Poultry will be bought on quality basis, therefore it will pay you to sell your best and fatten the poorer ones to sell later.

All poultry will be graded and correctly weighed promptly on arrival at our Warehouse, and cheques issued in payment immediately. Ship (by Express preferable) in lots of twelve or more, not later in week than Thursday.
