F. to an even greater challenge in the next election.

A crushing Conservative triumph in the 1924 campaign put an end to the last previous show of energy by any third or fourth party.

Seven Farmer and four Labor representatives held seats when that election was called. Liberals held 28 and the Conservatives only two in a house that had 13 more seats than the 30 of today. Two seats were vacant.

Then came the landslide that returned 39 Conservatives, three Liberals and one Laborite.

In 1928 two Labor candidates were thrashed and in 1933 a total of six Independents, C.C.F. and United Farmers suffered a similar humiliation. Third party efforts reached a low in 1937 when the lone candidate, representing Labor, received the same reception.

The last echoes of the speechmaking in this campaign will die out during the weekend.

Premier A. S MacMillan, his tour of the province through, spoke tonight at Windsor in his own riding of Hants. Opposition leader L. W. Fraser likewise was in his own constituency, Cumberland, speaking at Oxford.

dence, although one must avoid the pitfalls of over confidence; another important point was not to become self-satisfied, no pilot ever reaches perfection, there is always plenty to learn after one has graduated. Another important matter was always to observe the rules which are laid down for the pilots safety. Avoid low flying and fool-hardy flying. Wing Commander Fullerton congratulated the instructors and students on the part they are playing in this great struggle. Each must do his part although all cannot go overseas.

Wing Commander Fullerton spoke a few words to each graduate as he pinned on the coveted wings.

A unique event was that one of the graduates, Silas Jacques Guillon had the rare privilege of having his "wings" pinned on by his father, Flying Officer S. G. Guillon, who is in charge of the "Link Trainer" in which the boys learn to fly before going up in the air. It was a proud moment for father and son. Flying Officer Guillon had seen active service in the last war as a pilot, and has been an instructor at No. 9 Service Flying Training School for some time. He was in France early in the present war and managed to get out and later come to Montreal. —S

Big naval Demonstration In City

A grim reminder of the terrible struggle which the British Empire is passing through at present was brought to citizens last evening when a great naval demonstration took place at the local R.C.N.V.R. Barracks. Plenty of fireworks were seen before the attackers were finally beaten off by a group defending the barracks and two genuine minor casualties added a realistic touch to the engagement.

The exercises by the officers and men of the local naval training barracks was a fitting show to be staged in connection with the Navy Week celebrations which are in progress throughout the Dominion in response to the appeal of the Navy League of Canada. His Worship, Mayor B. Roy Holman and members of the City Council were guests of honor during the creditable display.

The first few flakes of snow to drop this season failed to dampen the spirits of several hundred citizens who stood on the sidelines to get a taste of the navy in action. At 7.30 p.m. a lookout at the barracks, which for the purpose was similar to a land fort, noticed the advance guard of navy boys about to spring a surprise attack. Immediately he flashed word to Commanding Officer, Lieut. K. Birtwhistle, who hurriedly gave orders to defend the fort. The boys in blue went into action without delay and hastily erected improvised barricades and fortified themselves behind these to await the advance. The huge 12-pounder gun was mounted for action and when the attackers, under command of Lieut. H. Saunders, were spotted by means of the searchlight, it opened fire.

As the first big belch from the gun resounded across the City, the attackers, knowing that they had been seen opened fire with their rifles and took cover behind the nearby trees on King Square. As they advanced nearer the fort their fire was answered by the rifles at the fort and the large gun continued to blast away at them. However, by dodging from tree to tree they continued to advance until they were within striking distance. At this point hand grenades were exchanged between the defenders and the attackers. The sky was lit up by the resultant flares and fighting was at close range. Suddenly a few of the attackers charged forward with gas masks in an attempt to take the fort by storm but they were mowed down by a volley of lead. Casualties were coming thick and fast at this point and stretcher bearers began carrying the wounded and dead from the field of action.

Deeply entrenched behind the barricade, the defenders slowly proved their superiority and succeeded in beating off the enemy after inflicting heavy casualties. However, the attacking party had been instrumental in causing a serious fire to start among the barricades at the fort which was extinguished by the City Fire Department with chemical engine which was on hand to cope with any eventuality.

Lt. Birtwhistle was assisted in defending the fort by Lieut. W A. Johnston while Lt. Saunders with the attackers was assisted by Lieut. Reg McCarville and Pay Sub.-Lieut. J.M. Balyea. In charge of the medical outfit was Sgt. Lieut. J.W. Hackney. Chief Petty Officer R. Ross, who arranged the show unfortunately suffered a severe powder burn in the right arm during the demonstration. His injury required medical treatment after the show as also did the sprained ankle received by Lieut Johnston.

The engagement lasted about half an hour. Followingg it the local Naval Barracks were open to inspection by the general public. A great many citizens availed themselves of this opportunity and were conducted through the building on a tour of inspection.

Activities of The Air Force

The cause of the temporary slowing up in recruiting for the Air Force during the past six weeks appears to have been removed. Enlistments at the local Recruiting Centre are again proceeding apace. During the current week the following men were enlisted in the R. C. A. F.:

Jenkins, Spurgeon D., Mt. Herbert, Wireless Air Gunner; Livingstone, Blake, Hazelbrook, General Duties; Cook, Roy Whitman, Murray River, Radio Technician; MacPhail, Chester A., Crapaud, General Duties; Mahar, Joseph Reginald, Charlottetown, Standard Tradesman; Poirier, Paul N., Miscouche, Pilot or Observer; Gallant, Joseph Tilmon; Egmont Bay, General Duties; Dingwell, Ernest L., Bay Fortune, Standard Tradesman; Ellsworth, Thomas P., Tignish, General Duties; Morrissey, Francis F., North Point, General Duties; McInnis, Vincent R., Earnscliffe, General Duties; McMahon, Jos. Pope 'C., Kinkora, Standard Tradesman; Howatt, Victor D., Tryon, General Duties; McCaull, Arnold B., Ellerslie, Standard Tradesman; Smallman, Milton E., O'Leary, Diesel fitter; Trainor, Francis B., Vernon River, Standard Tradesman.

Through the kindness of the Carry on Canada Corps, acting for the Provincial Government, each new Air Force recruit received cigarettes before leaving Charlottetown. Mr. A. G. Bruce of the Canadian Legion War Services supervised these donations.

There is a new demand for the following skilled trades: Stationary Engineer; Fireman 1st and 2nd Class, Clerk Stenographers, Tractor Operators, Electricians and men with at least Junior Matriculation education to receive University Training for Radio Technicians. In view of this demand it is anticipated that many men will apply through the local Air Force Recruiting Center in the hope of obtaining early entry into the R. C. A. F.

In response to the appeal for Cooks for the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force the Recruiting Officer has been kept busy interviewing the numerous ladies who have applied.

History has been made this week. Two ladies from the Island are among the first applicants to be enlisted in the new Sister organization of the Air Force. These were Miss Muriel Weeks and Miss Jean Ellis who are now in Toronto undergoing a special five weeks Administration Course. If this course is successfully completed these ladies will receive Commisioned or Non-commissioned officers rank in the new organization. Their many friends wish them success.

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP)—Prof Sidney A. Gunn, 65, an authority on Celtic literature and a member of the Boston University College of Business Administration, died tonight.

THERE ARE RULES FOR HOSTESS, TOO

Everybody seems to pick on the fall week-end guests. Reams are written each year about what she should and should not do while visiting. Hundreds of people lay down hundreds of rules for guests to remember.

But what about hostesses? How about a few rules for them?

We'll begin by assuming that, except in rare instances, every hostess invites week-end guests purely and simply because she wants to have them around. Having assumed that, can't we agree that no smart hostess—

Thinks of inviting on the same week-end two people who usually are violently argumentative or two people who have shown dislike, however slight for each other before.

Forgets to put a pair of extra blankets in the closet in the guest room, or some cleansing tissues in the bathroom. If she is very thoughtful she puts a white, freshly laundered, terry cloth bathrobe and some paper bedroom slippers as well as blankets in the guest room closet.

Unless absolutely necessary, uses the guest room closet as extra storage space for little used clothes belonging to various members of the household. A week-end guest ought to rate a closet to himself.

MRS. JONES HAD A LOVELY TIME

"I had such a nice time", Mrs. Jones told her hostess of the afternoon as she left the smoke-filled living room packed with bridge tables writes Ruth Millett.

And she had spent a profitable afternoon.

She had at last seen the redecorating job her hostess had been talking about for at least a month —and she didn't think much of it.

She had noticed how really fat Mamie was getting, just letting herself go. Honestly, she looked ten years older than she was.

And she had decided for sure that Lois had started dyeing her hair. It never had quite that much red in it before.

She had heard what a terrible time poor Mrs. Brown was having. But in a way she had brought most of her trouble on herself. She had no business marrying that good-for-nothing in the first place —and she was a fool to have stuck by him through the years.

She had a nice bit of news to tell her husband at dinner. Ed White, every one was saying, was going to lose that farm he spent so much on, just to make it a show place, and to have something to talk about.

Elsie and Peggy had turned up wearing hats exactly alike.

And you should have seen their faces—especially Elsie's. She always make such a point of having things different from everybody else.

She had a perfect opening for a dig at Elsie, and she made the most of it. She guessed that would hold her for a while.

Yes, it was a lovely party. And she had certainly enjoyed herself.
