BASEBALL AT SUMMERSIDE

The baseball team from Charlottetown that played in Summerside on Wednesday, defeated the westerners by a big score.

In the morning a game was started and it had only reached the third innings when the game was called on account of the rain, with the score 6-1 in Charlottetown's favor.

In the afternoon at 5.45 a game of seven innings began with Charlottetown team at bat. This ended 7-1 in favor of Charlottetown. It was a good game and Milford, for Charlottetown, played the best game of his life on second while Campbell, the pitcher had speed to burn.

For Summerside L. McLellan made the only score for his side by a beautiful hit to right field on which he got a home run.

The following was the line-up—

CH'TOWN	CATCHER	S' SIDE
Saunders Oliver
	PITCHER
Campbell McQuarrie
	FIRST BASE
Fred Moore Morrison
	SECOND BASE

THROW AWAY YOUR OLD TOOTH BRUSH. Leading dentists say that a tooth brush should not be used longer than two months as after that it becomes so impregnated with germs as to be an actual menace to health. We believe in buying medium priced tooth brushes frequently. Just at present we are selling a curved brush at 25 cents. It is the most effective brush on the market. EXTREMES IN CONVERSATION
This little talk is for the girls and the younger women who are perhaps the most given to extremes in conversation. One of the manifestations of this extreme form of expression, as evidenced in the talk of almost any small group consists in the over-use of adjectives and adverbs. Many girls use these parts of speech carelessly, and more frequently than they are aware of. The words lovely, delicious, wonderful, sweet, darling, pretty, dear, cute, cunning and many others that you can hear for yourself in any ordinary conversation are constantly misused. Look up their definitions for yourself. The result will cure you of a pernicious habit. It is a schoolgirl's habit, and it will likely die after a few years of use, when the stern realities of life call for stronger and more sensible words. But if you can prevent your vocabulary from passing through this stage, do so by all means. An older person who makes the use of misapplied adjectives and adverbs runs the risk of being considered gushing and insincere.

Now, it is not required that you take all the personality out of your conversation. The purist in conversation is sometimes firing, and it must be admitted that the enthusiasm of the moment will make us use words that would not stand the severe light of criticism. But do not get the habit of talking in the extremes that rob all conversation of dignity. Do not over-use the adjectives and the adjectives that should add to the value of a sentence, not detract from it.

If you use the word awful for the description of a bow of ribbon, what are you going to do when you are describing the terrors of war? After all, the main thing to observe is the consistent and relative value of words. Keep your conversation within control and natural bounds. Do not scream out silly words that contribute nothing but a foolish chatter to your information. Try to use the words here discussed as little as possible. There is a place for "dear" but it is not in a conversation about a little toy soldier. "Darling" should never be used to modify the word "buckle," and so on; you can take each offense and analyze it out of existence.

The extreme in conversation is frequently a sign of youth; it is noticeable in the talk of women who have done very little reading and on a few words gathered in their school days try to fill the demands of all kinds of conversation. To be able to use the right word at the right time, not pedantically but naturally, is a charm worth cultivating.

STORY OF THE KILKENNY CATS
During the rebellion which occurred in Ireland in 1797 Kilkenny was garrisoned by a regiment of Hessian soldiers, whose custom it was to tie together in one of their baggage rooms two cats by their respective tails and then throw them face to face across a line generally used for drying clothes. The cats naturally became infuriated, and tore and scratched until death ensued to one or both of them. The officers were made acquainted, with the barbarous acts of cruelty, and resolved to speedily put an end to them. For this purpose an officer was ordered to inspect each baggage room daily and to report its state. The soldiers, determined not to lose the daily torture of the cats, generally employed one of their comrades to watch the approach of the officer. On one occasion he neglected his duty and the officer was heard ascending the stairs while cats were undergoing their customary torture. One of the troopers seized a sword from the arm rack, and with a single blow, divided the tails of the cats. The cats escaped through the open windows of the room, which was entered instantly afterwards by the officers, who inquired what was the cause of the two bleeding cats' tails being suspended on the line, and was told in reply that "two cats had been fighting in the room, that it was found impossible to separate them, and they fought so desperately that they had devoured each other up, with the exception of their two tails."

THEY WHO PLANTED TREES.
(From the New Orleans "Times-Picayune.")
They who once lived and planted tree
And died and passed to a better land
Are not quite dead while the trees
still stand.
For the ear can note and the eye yet sees
In the gnarled trunk and the rustling leaf
That which recalls, but assuages grief.
Though narrow may have been his path,
In life—all narrow—yet will wrought he
Who wrote his name with a planted tree.
And heaven may look down in wrath
On all who sever that final tie
With those who live, and plant, and die!
—R.B. MAYFIELD

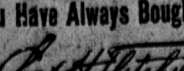

A VISION IN SPRING
On the sward at the cliff-top
Lie strewn and white flocks;
Or the cliff-side the pigeons
Roost deep in the rocks.
In the moonlight the shepherds
Soft build by the rills
Lie wrapt in their blankets,
Asleep on their hills.
—What forms are these coming
So white through the gloom?
What garments out-glistening
The gold-flower'd broom?
'Tis Apollo comes leading
His choir, the Nine.
—The leader is fairest,
But all are divine.
—Matthew Arnold.

THINK HAPPY THOUGHTS.
Think happy thoughts, O friend, in sunny weather!
'Tis easier when the skies are deep and blue.
Let thy heart and the robins sing together,
And thy clear eyes be tranquil as the dew.
Sadness, thy troubled spirit's exhalation,
Grow radiant in the early morning rays.
All vain regret and haunting expectation
On far horizons fall like distant haze
In sunny weather!
Think happy thoughts, O friend, in sunny weather,
Let Gladness and thy spirit, hand in hand,
Wander across the daisied fields together
And drink the cheer and sweetness of the land.
So rich a store of memories thou shalt gather,
So tranquil grow thy spirit and thy brain,
That when the winds blow fog and stormy weather,
Thou shalt have sunshine though the earth have rain.
—Charles Poole Cleaves, in the "Outlook."

THE SUNSHINE NEVER FAILS.
Upon the sadness of the sea
The sunset broods regretfully,
From the far, lonely spaces, slow
Withdraws the wistful afterglow.
So out of life the splendor dies;
So darken all the happy skies;
So gathers twilight, cold and stern
But overhead the planets burn.
And up the east another day
Shall chase the bitter dark away;
What though your eyes with tears
Be wet?
The sunrise never failed us yet.

The blush of dawn may yet restore
Our light and hope and joy once more.
Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet!
—Celia Thaxter.

THE ORTHOGRAPHY OF SHAKESPEARE
Some interesting Shakespeariana appear in the "Record." It is well known that in Shakespeare's time orthography was little accounted of and that Shakespeare himself would have considered the question of spelling his name in one way and not another a mere waste of time. It is, however, worth recording how the name struck the Bodleian officials, when the First Folio was given a place and mark in the library. The entries are as follows, and were all written in 1623:
Shak-sper
Shak-speare
Shak-speare
Shak-speare
Shak-spear
Shak-spear
Shak-spear
Shak-spear
The testimony, so far as it goes, is obviously in favor of the form "Shak-spear," and of the present orthography of the word. It is curious that the single or double hyphen should be used in six out of the seven entries.—Westminster "Gazette."

WHERE WEARINESS FINDS REST
Come with me, O you world-weary,
To the haunt of thrush and very,
To the cedar's dim cathedral and the palace of the pine;
Let the soul within you capture something of the wild wood rapture,
Something of the epic passion of that harmony divine!
Down the pathway let us follow from the hemlocks to the hollow,
To the vine-wound thickets in the forest vague and old,
While the streamlet winding after is a trail of silver laughter,
And the boughs above hint softly of the melodies they hold;
Through the forest never caring what the way our feet are faring,
We shall hear the wild birds revel in the labyrinth of tune,
And on mossy carpets tarry in His temples cool and airy,
Hush with silence and the splendid amber tapestry and pity:
Leave the folly and the fashion wearing out the faith of men;
Breathe the breath of life blown over upland meadows white with clover,
And with childhood's clearer vision see the face of God again!
—Ex.

THE TRENT WATERSHED.
That practically all the pine in the Trent valley has been removed, that the whole area has been burned over at least once, and that as a result of fires, 150,000 acres are practically a desert, are conclusions set forth in a report entitled "Trent Watershed Survey," recently published by the Commission of Conservation. The Dominion Government has a special interest in this particular region, as the capital invested in the Trent canal amounts to upwards of $10,000,000, and the removal of the forest cover has an important effect on the water supply.
For the most part the land is non-agricultural, and disastrous consequences have followed its settlement by farmers. Enough second-growth timber is present, however, to warrant a policy of conservation, which should be carried out under Dominion, Provincial or Municipal control. A fire protective organization should be perfected, and the whole area carefully administered with a view to perpetuating the forest resources.
The report, embodying these conclusions, was compiled by Dr. C. D. Howe and Mr. J. H. White, of the Faculty of Forestry, University of Toronto, and has an introductory discussion by Dr. B. E. Fernow. It consists of 156 pages, and is illustrated with 32 half-tone engravings and three maps.
