Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE BARGAIN

Roger was coming home unexpectedly. His little mother held the fluttering yellow message in her hand. He was coming tomorrow morning early; that left just one day for a thousand preparations. Standing in the doorway, looking west over the big track of marshy land that covered over half her farm, she hurriedly mapped out her plans. Roger's old room must be cleaned. Gabriela must make his favorite chocolate pudding, and she herself fry the doughnuts. A chicken must be killed and plucked. "If I only could have my boy all the time. If poor dad had not been stung, cheated with his miserable old farm, Roger might have stayed and become a prosperous farmer. And who wants to buy it? So far away from the village that has not even a railroad. Well, Roger will make good some day in the city, and then I'll just close up this house and go, too." She stopped [illegible] and strained her eyes. [illegible] that coming up the narrow [illegible] lane? An automobile? [illegible] be possible that Roger— [illegible] to the garden gate [illegible] alighted. [illegible] prosperous look- [illegible] with [illegible] "Am I [illegible] Linwood?" Roger's [illegible]

[illegible] seated themselves [illegible] man began again. [illegible] smooth and reassuring. "I understand that this farm belongs to you, Mrs. Linwood, and the track of land west from the house clear up to the next farm?"

"Yes, you mean that marshy strip; yes, I own it from the river on."

"It is not good nor much, is it?"

Mrs. Linwood shook her head. "Not much, I guess. Too expensive to drain, but on the other side of the house, the east side, is some tillage land, but it's full of stumps and rocks. It never was properly cleared. You see, my poor husband —he's dead now—bought the place without seeing it—"

The stout man interrupted in a gentle voice, "Very sad, very sad. But to come back to this marshy track—we were just passing and and have to be on our way very quickly. Now, I happen to know a party who might have use for such a swampy piece." He drew from his pocket a piece of paper and laid it upon the table. "Just a rough little sketch of the layout and boundaries of that marshland." [illegible] suddenly to he[illegible] $2,000 cash for [illegible]

[illegible] Two thousand dollars [illegible] piece of worthless [illegible] her voice she [illegible] eagerly, half fearful [illegible] might think the better of [illegible] proved to be a [illegible] the sale was drawn up legally. In less than an hour they had left, leaving a very happy woman counting and recounting a thick wad of bills.

"What will Roger say?" she thought joyously her cheeks burning. "How delighted he will be! Oh what a bargain I made, what a bargain! And it means a trip to the city."

The next morning Mrs. Linwood harnessed her fat, white horse to an ancient-looking surrey and jogged over to the village to get Roger from the stage, that brought him from East Corners, the nearest railroad station. She felt so light hearted, so contented, it all seemed too good to be true. Roger coming for a little unexpected visit, and she to surprise him with her wonderful bargain!

A tall, radiant looking young man jumped from the old stage and clasped his little mother in his arms. "Mother, you're good to look at. What rosy cheeks, what sparkling eyes!" He swung his suitcase on the back seat, and helping his mother in, took the reins himself.

"Roger!" was all she could say. Her wet, happy eyes told the rest.

"Mother, I've come on for something very special. It's wonderful!"

"You're going to get married!" guessed his mother joyously and thought immediately of the wedding present she could buy with the $2,000.

Roger blushed a deep brown red.

"Not so quick. I confess I know the girl, but that's not what I came to see you about. Mother! Roger stopped the horse and turned to her to get her full attention. His eyes were brilliant, his lips quivering with suppressed joy. "Mother, I've got to congratulate you. You're going to be a rich woman. Yes. Listen. The S. & M Railroad is going to lay tracks from East Corners clean through to Medford. Don't you see? They've got to come through our marshland right down to the river. They'll pay a big price—your price. Nobody knows it. This is all inside information, and I ran down to tell you. They say a couple of crooks—speculators, you know, are around hoodwinking the poor farmers and buying up land right and left where the railroad has to come through. Must have leaked out somewhere." He stopped. His mother's face had gone dead white. Then she told him. She saw the light die out of her son's happy hopeful eyes. She knew his beautiful air castles came down with a crash, the wedding bells he had heard ceased ringing, the girl of his dreams slipped out of his reach. He did not blame her, his mother, with a single word, but the deep disappointment cut in his eyes hurt far more than anything he could have said.

They drove on in silence. Once he leaned over and patted her shaking hand, mumbling clumsily, "Poor mother". He tried to protend he was glad to be home and attempted to choke down a doughnut. The chocolate pudding was untouched. In the afternoon he excused himself; he had letters to write.

Afterward his mother heard him sneak out of the house to walk along the edge of the swampy land. It had been the opportunity of a lifetime and she had missed it. It was nearly two miles from the river to the next farm and Roger had said she might have received $20,000 for the land.

In the morning Roger said gently, "Would you mind driving me over to the village stage right after lunch? I want to get the 6 o'clock train at East Corners back to the city."

She nodded and turned away that he might not see her tears. When would she see him again? He would hate to come and see the marshland sold and by and by the railroad bed being made—everything to remind him of what they might have had.

Roger tried to talk cheerfully at dinner, but his mother noticed how little he ate and wished the meal was at an end. Gabriela brought in the chocolate pudding and whispered. "Two gentlemen outside asking for you, Mis' Linwood."

She looked at her son questioningly. He rose and said quietly. "Come, mother, we'll see who they are."

Almost trembling she followed him. Outside two young chaps with surveying tools stood waiting. The older came forward. "I represent the S. & M. Railroad," he said. "My name is Wilburs. We're planning to lay a line through from East Corners. It will have to pass through your property. I'm sorry, but we are willing to pay a fair price."

Mrs. Linwood, with white lips, interrupted. "You're too late, young man. I sold that all to a stranger yesterday." She pointed wearily to the long track of marshy meadows.

Mr. Wilburs nodded. He did not seem particularly interested. "I hope you made a good bargain," he remarked, and then, turning east, gazing over the wide sweep of tillage land dotted by an endless number of stumps, he continued, "We are coming through east of your house, not west. We want as wide a piece as you will let us have, clean from the river up to the next boundary. What do you want for it, Mrs. Linwood?"

In the evening, when Roger kissed his radiant mother good night—he was going to stay a day longer after all—he whispered softly, "and the sale of the marshy land. You see, it was a fine bargain, after all."

Glad He Tried The Tonic Treatment

Through its Use Strength and Vigor Was Restored

To be tired after exertion is natural. Rest and food restore the body to normal after such fatigue. But to be tired all the time is a symptom of an anaemic condition that will not be corrected until the blood is built up.

Such an anaemic condition is so gradual in its approach and generally so lacking in acute pains that it is often difficult to persuade the sufferer to do anything for it. But it is not a condition that corrects itself. If the blood is not enriched the trouble will increase. The nerves will be undernourished and neuralgic pains will follow. Digestive disturbances often result from thin blood, sleep is disturbed and a general breakdown may occur.

Mr. Wilson Johnson, Nineveh, N. S., says: "A few years ago my system was in a badly run down condition. My nerves seemed always on edge, and I found myself so weak that I could hardly do any work. I suffered from headaches and from pains in the back and under the shoulders and was often so sleepless at night that when morning came I felt as tired as when I went to bed. I was taking medicine all the time, but it was doing me no good. Then I read the testimonial of a man whose condition had been similiar to mine, and who strongly recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I decided to give this medicine a fair trial and when I had taken six boxes I felt much better. I continued taking the pills until I had taken six more boxes and I can only say I am glad I did so, as I am now enjoying the best of health, and I advise all men who feel run down to give these pills a good trial."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIBERALS ARE COMING OVER

Premier Meighen on his recent visit to Stratford, Ontario, was given a cordial civic welcome by Mayor Wedlake, a lifelong Liberal. During the course of his address Mayor Wedlake said:

"During the session of parliament I read with great interest the speeches of one man on public questions and that was Rt. Hon Arthur Meighen, then Solicitor-General or Minister of the Interior, and as I saw the grasp of the mind that was giving utterance of them I said, "there is a man who will make his mark high.' While I don't count myself a great prophet, it is coming true.

"There were mighty men at the Imperial conference, headed by the great man, Lloyd George, but, Liberal as I am, I was proud of the man who represented Canada. Our Premier was just an inch or two taller than the tallest.

"Let me say this is a crucial time in the history of Canada right now and we want a captain who is filled with the best seamanship, who can stand upon the bridge and make no mistake. We want to try no experiments.

Grantie: "My! our light is on and the last whistle is blowing."

Hutchie: "All right, I'll blow it out."

Are you Sure Your Children's Eyes are Right?

A responsibility rests upon every parent to give his child every possible advantage in life; to give the child the best of weapons with which to meet the struggles of the years ahead. Surely good eyesight is "the priceless gift" that your child should have. Remember that poor eyesight means poor concentration and will retard the youngster's progress. Many a child considered dull or lazy in school or music studies has simply been suffering from defective vision. And often correct glasses have changed entirely the record of performance. Perhaps your youngster's report-card is reflecting the presence of eye-strain. Perhaps you are not doing your own child full justice. Have an examination made and know. Consult
