

STARR SKATES
MADE IN CANADA—USED ALL OVER THE WORLD

with the tested blades

Will your Skates stand this Test?

Every "Starr" blade, before being put into a skate, is submitted to a bending test (see illustration below)—and unless the blade springs back (when released) to a perfectly straight line, it is discarded—this insures every "Starr" Skate blade being full of "life" and ringing true.

STARR INTERNATIONAL FIGURE SKATE

You may pay more but you can't get more. A better skate isn't made—professionals, all and amateurs alike, use Starr skates because they are scientifically designed with a special front and heel plates—saw teeth on toe or front of blade. The blade is chrome nickel steel, tempered and tested. The entire skate is backpainted on copper, and highly hand-polished.

Ladies' Model

The skate is identical with the gentlemen's model in quality, design and construction, but with special front and heel plates made to suit ladies' boots.

except relations with the Dominions.

Co-operation With U. S.

It is authoritatively stated that England hopes to foster intimate co-operation with the United States without recourse to any special alliance between the two countries. Such an alliance is regarded as both undesirable and impossible here. It is desired, however, not only to keep the Anglo-American diplomatic state continually clean but to reach a degree of Anglo-American intimacy that would permit co-operation in outside matters, such as the far east. It is emphasized that there will be no attempt directly or indirectly to drag the United States into European politics.

Objection to Protocol.

One of the major reasons prompting England to desire to abstain from participating in the League of Nations security, arbitration and disarmament protocol, was that it was considered to be offensive to the United States as well as to the British dominions. The possibility that the English fleet might some day be nominated by the League to blockade ports in which American trade is principally interested is one of the English objections to the protocol.

England is understood to be preparing a substitute for the League peace protocol which would eliminate the features which Britain cannot accept.

kingdom that would prepare for a new order in which flith, formality, and sham would all be abolished. Thus it was preached then and so it was preached today. The world either had to accept this teaching or go down to its doom. Today men prayed for it, but how many worked for it; endeavoring to bring its spirit into the churches, the schools, the homes, and the workshops; and into the hearts and lives of themselves, their associates, and their children? And without the holiness which came of this spirit no one might enter the Kingdom or look on the face of Jesus.

Theatre, listening and looking in wrapt attention at all that went on. The message sent left by her father was insufficient to support her. She could teach! Yes she would teach, and Julie Hempel's father would help her obtain a country school and in a year or so with experience she would be able to come back to Chicago to teach. She tried now so hard to accept her father's career motto for life—"More things you do and the richer you are. Even if they are all pleasant, remember no matter what happens it's just so much velvet."

aim was that her boy, Dirk "So Big" would grow up to fill a large place in the world, engaging in some noble creative task. She had no desire for vain wealth for him nor rickie fame. She gave of her best to her boy. Out of the toll of her hands and heart made possible for him to attend school. Her heart beats high in hope when she hears of his decision to be an architect—of his devotion to this noble profession but wavers in his mind, because he finds it an uphill road of great toil and meagre rewards. He grows restless. Others about him are getting rich and rich quickly. His mother urges him to go on in his chosen profession and make good. But the pressure about him is so great that he gives up and joins an "Investment Co." to sell bonds. He does succeed financially and we have the picture of the "luxurious life of the rich of Chicago—Dirk has won riches, succeeded as the world calls success, but he has failed in Selina's Eyes. Out on the farm, which under the creative mind and imaginative heart of this noble woman had been transferred into a place of beauty and productivity lives a woman who has loved and toiled and dreamed—in the city the son—the rich and prosperous. The climax of the story is reached when, a famous French General and a Painter are visiting Chicago. The whole city is in a stir to entertain them. The Painter Artist is none other than a son of the Pool family who befriended Selina in her teaching days. They slip away from the festivities and engagements and go out to High Prairie to visit Selina. Dirk (So Big) goes along too. They talk of things that are so foreign to his life. He realizes his failure. His mother Selina, the General and Painter are truly great. He feels like a "rubber stamp."

History of the Methodist Church in Charlottetown

1774—1924

In the year 1783 Rev. William Black, justly known as the Apostle of Methodism to the Maritime Provinces, first visited and preached in Charlottetown, "at the earnest and repeated invitation of Mr. Benjamin Chappell," with whose coming in 1774 Methodism on this Island may be said to have had its beginnings. The church therefore not only commemorated yesterday the 50th Anniversary of the opening of the present Church, but also recorded 150 years of Methodist history. Mr. Black came again in the autumn of 1794, and it was he and the noble band of local preachers associated with him who laid the foundation of the Methodist Church in Prince Edward Island.

Answers to the Puzzles

There are diagrams containing black and white squares. The white squares are to be filled with letters arranged in such a manner that they spell words answering the definitions given below each puzzle. Each word should start at the square in which the number appears and extend right or down to the first black square. Every square must be filled. Hence, if there are four spaces to be filled by a word meaning "aid" it is probable that the word is "help."

Go through the puzzle and write all the horizontal words you can, then try the vertical definitions. When all are correctly solved the words will cross each other and all spaces will be filled.

THE WINNER

After the deductions for errors have been made from the total points secured for finishing quickly as described above under "Scoring," the winner is declared to be the one with the greatest number of points remaining to his credit.

THE LIMIT

It is well to set a time limit for the game, otherwise one player may hold it up indefinitely. All players who do not finish within the time limit are given 20 points less than the last one to finish.
