Ruggles Back On Screen In Favorite Role

If you think your wife has been minding too much of your business lately in telling you how to run your business affairs, take her to see Charlie Ruggles in his latest comedy, "Mind Your Own Business," which opened at the Capitol Theatre last night to see what a mess she can get you into if she persists!

Or, if you are the wife, and friend husband needs an extra push to get him to ask for that raise or to go after that other job, take him by the hand and take him to see how one wife took the bull by the horns and made her husband a "success"—much against his will. It's all in fun, of course, but it makes one of the most delightful comedies of the season. Good old Charlie, intent upon minding his own business, and intent upon letting glory and power fall to those who want it, is perfectly satisfied with his little job as "birds and bees" editor of a newspaper. He likes the birds and the bees and he loves the outdoors.

But friend, wife, played by Alice Brady, doesn't think he's getting along as rapidly as she would like him to so she writes his column for him one day, and what a column it is! Familiar with all the scandal of the town, she writes a real, hot "key-hole peeper," and then the fun begins. Charlie becomes the most famous reporter in town. He is regarded as thoroughly "in the know"—feared by erring husbands and philandering wives, crooked politicians, and what is more important, the underworld. The latter believe they have much to fear from the "snooper" so they decide to put him on the "spot." He is kidnapped and taken to a gang hideout. From there on everything happens, including a rescue engineered mainly through a knowledge of woodcraft and his ability to imitate an owl.

Hatfield Loses

The high tribunal late today refused to review a judgment of the first circuit court of appeals in Boston which had held that Hatfield was extraditable on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Hatfield had won a partial victory in the Appeals Court when it ruled out a "arceus charge as grounds for extradition.

Former attorney-general Ralph D. Davis, the Canadian representative, declared: "Hatfield has played his last card and lost. I expect the Supreme Court to issue a writ of extradition at once so that Hatfield can be started toward Ottawa within 24 hours for trial."

John T. O'Dowd, jailer at the county jail where Hatfield has been held for more than two years, said he had not told Hatfield of the court decision and would not until officially notified by the government.

O'Dowd asserted Hatfield had remained cheerful and in good health during his long stay.

New Proposals In Strike Are Studied

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) LANSING, Mich., March 29—Representatives of the Chrysler Corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America considered proposals today for an agreement that would reopen the strike closed Chrysler plants and send approximately 80,000 idle workers back to their benches.

They were proposals which Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan asserted might provide a formula for settling not only the Chrysler dispute "but the whole labor situation in Michigan," and "most of the difficulties in the motor industry."

After a five-hour session, conferees adjourned late today until tomorrow morning with no agreement reached. There was no indication that progress had been made towards solving the problem of union recognition.

Court Upholds States In Ruling

(A.P. by Guardian's Special Wire) WASHINGTON, March 29—The United States Supreme Court changed its position on a fundamental issue today and, by a five-to-four decision, upheld right of the States to prescribe minimum wages for women.

Its verdict, long awaited, injected a new element into the turbulent debate over the President's plan to increase the size of the tribunal unless the older justices retire. Coming at a time when the Senate was engaged in a heated debate over that very issue, the court's decision served only to enhance the tension and apparently stiffen the determination of both sides of the controversy.

In addition to the minimum wage decision, the court upheld, unanimously, the new Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act—renacted to accord with a prior decision declaring its former version unconstitutional—and also unanimously, sustained the Railroad Labor Act, intended to bullinguished patronage of His Honorable Lieutenant Governor George D. DeBlas and Mrs. DeBlas; the Honorable, the Premier and Mrs. Campbell; and His Worship the Mayor and Mrs. Turner.

"The Rowdy Gentleman" was produced under the stage direction of Mr. J. Austin Trainor, former professional director, who has a part in the staging of many successful performances in this City. The play, under the auspices of St. Charles Auxiliary Society, was in aid of the Charlottetown Hospital.

The scene is laid at the Van Horne summer home in the Air-Ondacks where Mr. Van Horne, a curt hard-shelled business man expects to enjoy a few weeks rest. That is not to be, however, for his daughter, Louise, tells him that the man she loves, a movie actor, is vacationing in a near-by camp and she wishes her father to ask him over for a visit. The father, disapproving of the match, appears to fall in with his daughter's wishes but at the same time secretly pays the actor to appear in a play and to illiterate and to disgust Louise. The father wishes to make a match between Louise and a young clerk whom he has employed. Overcoming the clerk's objections that he is not a lady's man, Van Horne attempts with fabricated stories to build up the clerk's reputation as a great lover.

The bold plan appears to be working well for a time, but complications which the father did not foresee and which he can not control arise as the plot moves through another and as the curtain falls all has worked out to the happy satisfaction of everyone and Mr. Van Horne has realized that arranging a business deal is quite different from playing a game of hearts.

Space does not permit mention of individual characters in the cast of seven men and seven women. Perhaps it is sufficient to say that regardless of whether in a leading or supporting role each member of the cast played his or her part superbly.

The following was the cast of characters: Winston Avery. (A Movie Star) Mr. William Brown, Jr. Harding Sharp, (a would be heart breaker), Mr. Gordon McWade.

Harold Hasting. (A newly wed), Mr. Edmund Christopher. Mildred Hastings, (His bride), Miss Isobel Paquet. Thomas Van Horne (The Father) Mr. Frank McIntyre. Mrs. Van Horne (His Wife), Miss Marjorie MacLean. Jack Van Horn (Their Son), Mr. Frank O'Neill.

Louise Van Horne (Their Daughter), Miss Mary Trainor. Henry Van Horne (President of the Reddington Snyder Co.), Mr. Leo Callaghan. Blanche Van Horne (Jack's Wife), Miss Elizabeth Holl. Jones (A Butler), Mr. Philip McQuaid.

Kay McCoy (An adventuress), Miss Inelda McLellan. Tilla (A Swedish Servant), Miss Jessie MacMillan. Monette (A gypsy Fortune-teller) Miss Jean Ellis.

Specialties which were so thoroughly enjoyed were: Vocal solos by Mrs. Roy Cudmore, who sang "The Wind Is In The South Today" and as an encore number, "Come to the Fair."

Master Erroll Lund delighted the audience with a song, "Ship Ahoy" and as an encore number danced the Sailors Hornpipe.

Of special interest was the selection sang by Mr. Frank Willoughby entitled "My Pretty Mormon Girl." The composer, a retired clergyman, was Rev. John Johnston, Charlottetown. Mr. Willoughby was heartily encored.

Mr. Edward Bourgeois was seen in two clever tap dancing specialties.

Music was supplied by Blanchard's Orchestra. A large audience attended a matinee performance yesterday.

18 GROUPS TO COMPETE IN DRAMA FINALS

10 Regions To Be Represented In Finals To Be Staged In Ottawa Week Of April 26.

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, March 29—At least 18 amateur theatrical companies from eight provinces will come here the week of April 26 for the finals of the fifth annual Dominion Drama Festival, launched in 1933 by the Earl of Bessborough, then Governor-General.

Adjudication of preliminary festivals in 10 regions was ended Saturday night in Vancouver where George de Warfaz of London chose the Vancouver Strolling Players' group in a one-act excerpt from "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," to represent the Pacific coast on the boards of this capital's Little Theatre.

There they and the rest of the competing groups will face Michael St. Denis, managing director of the London Theatre studio and first Frenchman to be named finals adjudicator.

Three plays by Canadian residents were chosen for the finals but popular interest probably will centre on one by a grey-haired farm woman—Charlottetown's Saskatchewan hamlet of Marshall. Mrs. Fred Bicknell, a native of Kansas, will bring three persons east to act in "Relief," the play she wrote about conditions on the drought-scorched southern plains where she lives. She directed and acted in the play that won the competition early this month in Regina, drawing high praise from Mr. De Warfaz.

Although no final announcement has been made regarding what groups will be seen here these have been chosen from the various regions:

Nova Scotia—Theatre Arts Guild of Halifax in "Miss Harlow Act Play" by A. A. Milne. New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island—Charlottetown Little Theatre Guild in "Nocturne" by Harry Foster, Charlottetown school teacher.

Quebec—Sun Life Dramatic Club of Montreal in Maurice Maeterlinck's "Interior." Best in Montreal special French regional festival was "L'Abolition" by Jose Germain and Emmanuel Boucher. Recommended was a Montreal Repertory Theatre group in "Eleventh Hour" by Joseph Schull of Montreal.

Eastern Ontario—Queen's University Guild in "The Secret" by Ramon Sender. Le Ceuveu of Ottawa in "Francoise" by Sacha Guitry was chosen at a special French festival in Ottawa.

Central Ontario—Toronto Masqueurs in "The House in the Street of Glen" by John Coulter, Irish playwright living in Toronto; Toronto Theatre of Action in "Bury the Dead" by Irwin Shaw of New York; University College Alumnae Association in "The Card Song" by Gregorio and Maria Martinez. Recommended also was a Erie House group in "This Mad World" an insect play by the Czech Capeck brothers.

Western Ontario—The Brantford Drama League in "A Sunny Morning." Spanish fantasy by Joaquin Alvarez and Quintero Serafin.

Manitoba—Winnipeg Little Theatre in "The Lovely Miracle" by Philip John on. Saskatchewan—Marshall Dramatic Club in "Relief" by Mrs. Fred Bicknell of Marshall.

Alberta—Medicine Hat Little Theatre in "Heaven on Earth." British Columbia—Vancouver Strolling Players in an excerpt from Rudolph Besler's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

to Ottawa. After Rogers had met them both Friday, he announced they were ready to resume negotiations. After that, it was just a matter of conference Saturday and another today.

The agreement ended 11 days of negotiations on the part of the men. The General Conference Committee of the Unions, speaking for an estimated 117,000 men, convened here March 18 and had been meeting here consecutively ever since. Deliberations broke up only when the vice-presidents took time out to confer with the chiefs of the C.N.R. and C.P.R. railroads.

All through the sessions the Union heads kept silent. Howard B. Chase, chairman of the General Conference Committee, would say "no statement" one day after another as he was asked what progress was being made.

Tonight, he was more loquacious. He subscribed on behalf of the men, he said, to the joint statement issued on the wage settlement. The agreement, Chase said, had been signed by labor officials and it remained only to be approved by a general session of the conference tomorrow.

northeastern gateway, the Government suddenly launched an offensive on Avila from Escorial, 25 miles northwest of Madrid.

The Government forces cut their way into strategic positions at Casa Valiente, dominating the village and valley of San Rafael in the Guadarrama foothills within striking distance of Avila.

Insurgent positions at Navalperal de Pinare, only 13 miles south-east of Avila, were battered by an artillery barrage from the Sierra de Malagon range.

Insurgent contingents stationed northwest of the Aragon highway in Guadalupe Province reportedly were being sent to bolster the Avila defences.

REBEL ATTACK REPULSED

MADRID, March 29—(AP)—Madrid Government troops today repulsed an insurgent sally toward the capital from the northwest, and after a hard day's fighting on three fronts reported positions "distinctly improved."

The insurgent attack centred around Aravaca, just to the northwest of the capital, but defence militia gained the advantage in a sharp counter-offensive.

Farther to the west, Madrid artillery was directed at strategic Navalperal de Pinare, insurgent communication centre. The artillery had moved up during the night in a surprise manoeuvre to cover a general advance on the El Escorial front.

On the Guadalupe front, 50 miles to the north, warplanes and artillery broke up insurgent contingents which sought to attack government outposts.

Government fighters still pressed their offensive in the south against Alcaracejos, seeking to force insurgent evacuation of that town and of nearby Villanueva Delduque.

Accounts reaching here said that all 15 bombs dropped by insurgent planes in a raid of their own Villa Del Rio last night fell inside the town. The pilots apparently mistook it for Andujar.

Defence Gen. Jose M. Miaja, renewing today his attacks against insurgents for use of German and Italian soldiers, observed that the Spanish war could be ended in two months if all foreign assistance were withdrawn.

Long Creek Couple Wed

Miss Annie MacPhee, daughter of Mrs. Paul MacPhee of Long Creek was united in marriage to Alexander MacEachern a son of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. MacEachern, also of Long Creek at the home of Mrs. Paul MacPhee on March 29. The ceremony was performed at 7:00 p. m. by Rev. B. G. Manzer. The attractive couple had as attendants Annie McKinnon of New Argyle, P. E. I., and the brother of the bride Jack MacPhee of Long Creek.

After the ceremony, the near relatives of both the bride and the groom sat down to a prettily decorated banquet table, while many friends and neighbors cheered from outside of Mrs. MacPhee's home.

Both the bride and groom are very popular among their friends. The Y. P. S. of Long Creek at a pre-nuptial party presented the bride with a glass service for the dining-room. The Long Creek W. I. at a second party presented an "occasional chair."

The newly weds have taken these along with many other gifts to the new home built last summer at Long Creek. All best wishes are extended to the bride and groom for much future happiness.
