TEN REBELS

gunnary battle occurring in the town of Pedrabes in the Province of Valencia, where 10 rebels and two members of the guard were killed. Communists succeeded for awhile in gaining control of the town of Repollet, near Sabadell, in Catalonia, where they placed the authorities and civil guards in jail and raised a red and black flag over city hall. Reinforcements of civil guards and assault guards recaptured Repollet after a battle in which one civil guardsman and a townsman were killed and several persons were wounded. Premier Miguel Azana announced tonight that the authorities had succeeded in remaining in control at Pedrabes, where the Communists also were in charge of the insurrection. A general strike threatens the Province of Valencia tomorrow, the Premier said. He announced that the authorities in Barcelona had discovered and quashed extremist efforts to paralyze the electric light and power distribution lines this evening. While Premier Azana was talking the gas lights of the Puerta Del Sol, Madrid's main square, and of the downtown areas became very dim. Nervous citizens sought shelter in their homes, fearing disorders, but the authorities explained the weak street lighting was the result of an ordinary operating accident. Greatest precautions were taken at Barcelona to prevent acts of terrorism. Police there said that the plans of the Anarcho-Socialists and Communists throughout Spain were to hurl small bombs from automobiles and other vehicles indiscriminately. In the last two days between 25 and 30 deaths in various parts of the country have been attributed to the extremist movement. National Telephone Company authorities reported sabotage activities in Valencia and in other parts of the country. Snipers, they said, were attacking linemen attempting to splice severed wires. In Cadix street windows were broken and there was some looting. Police and civil guards repeatedly charged groups of street demonstrators.

ada unite in urging upon government and parliament the adoption and enforcement of such a policy."

Adoption of a national transportation policy would mean Canada's traffic would be handled as it was designed in the Confederation agreements it should be handled, said J. D. McKenna, of the Saint John Telegraph Journal, in moving the transportation resolution. Conditions governing the six-cent preference on Canadian grain in the U. K.-Canada Imperial Conference agreement indicated statesmen had given heed to what the Maritimes had advocated for 10 years. He thought all Canadian newspapermen would support the move.

In seconding the motion, H. P. Duchemin, of the Sydney Post, stressed the importance of the Maritime press standing as an absolute unit in advocating development of trade through Canadian ports. It was not accidental that those who had drawn up conference agreements had shown they were convinced of the case consistently supported by Maritime papers in favor of routing grain by Canadian ports.

Anything representing increased traffic in Canada and consequently increased consumption of coal would react to the benefit of Pictou County, Cumberland County and Cape Breton, said J. W. H. Sutherland, of the New Glasgow News. This was the sectional viewpoint, he said, but from the National aspect there was no shadow of doubt of the fairness and advisability of asking that Canadian railways be used for Canadian traffic.

Seconding the coal resolution, which Mr. Sutherland had moved, A. D. MacNeill, of the Glace Bay Gazette, stated the Cape Breton coal field had raised less than 3,000,000 tons in 1932, the lowest in 30 years, whereas equipment and miners available could raise 10,000,000 tons. If a million and a half more tons of coal could be sold this year, it would reduce the cost of production to a figure competitive in the world market.

E. C. MacDonald, of the Sydney Record pointed out increased Canadian traffic would mean possibly increased employment in construction of rolling stock, and George Herman of the Truro News said that already grain movement had brought employment to a large number of railway men who had been out of work.

Among those at the meeting were: A. R. Coffin, Truro News; Frank Walker, Charlottetown Guardian; R. J. Rankin and A. W. Robb, Halifax Herald and Mail; H. W. Jones and A. G. Sampson, Halifax Chronicle and Star; J. C. Keating, Moncton Times; F. X. Jennings, Saint John Telegraph Journal and J. A. Crockett, Fredericton Gleamer.

AT ROTARY

The War Debt Situation was the subject of a clear, concise, timely, and informative address given before the Rotary luncheon yesterday by Mr. W. Stuart MacNutt, son of Major MacNutt, of this city. Mr. MacNutt is at present on the teaching staff at Kings Collegiate School at Windsor and recently completed three years of study at Oxford University, England, after having graduated at Kings University in Halifax. He travelled extensively over Europe during the years he attended Oxford and was in a position to obtain much interesting information regarding the war debts and reparations, of which he made a special study.

He reviewed the various phases of the situation dealing with the financial and economic problems which have arisen throughout the world as a result of the Great War, touching on the present and prospective effects on international trade owing to countries going off the gold standard.

Reference was made to the Hoover Memorandum, the Lausanne Conference and other outstanding developments of the situation. In closing he said that there was a need today of greater education of the people on the first principles on which the economic structure of the world is built.

Past President H. L. Palmer was in the chair and the guests were W. E. Cotton and Major T. E. MacNutt. Rotarian Roy Quigley, song leader, was welcomed back to the meeting and congratulated on recovering from his recent accident.

Secretary Bisset read a letter from "The Rotarian" suggesting that Prince Edward Island should place an advertisement in the magazine with a view of attracting to this province many of the Rotarians who attend the international conference in Boston the coming summer.

The secretary also produced a gift presented to the club by Rotarian Will Webster of Halifax. This was a jug bearing the portrait of Paul Harris and the principal events in the history of Rotary since its establishment. It was a token of the silver jubilee of Rotary.

The musical program included a violin solo by Miss Moran, who was encored.

Lord Zetland Addresses Canadian Club

(Canadian Press) OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—One great task of the United Kingdom is to confer upon India, without avoidable delay, a status in the matter of government similar to that enjoyed by other great components of the British Empire. This was the statement of the Marquess of Zetland, distinguished visitor to Canada and an authority on India and the Orient, who today addressed joint meetings of the Canadian Club of Ottawa and the Women's Canadian Club, here. He is embarking on a lecture tour of Canada, under the auspices of the National Council of Education. His speech today was the first since he arrived in the Dominion.

"Lord Curzon, the man and the statesman," was the subject of the address, but Lord Zetland devoted the major part of his time to a discussion of the Indian problem. He asserted that the future relations between the British Empire and India constituted an "urgent, living and essentially important issue." No one could say what the consequences to the British Empire would be if India was to "break away." On the other hand, it was monstrosity of nations.

equally impossible to indicate the great benefits which might accrue to the Empire if the Round Table Conference should prove successful in solving the Indian problem.

There were people, Lord Zetland said, who doubted the wisdom of granting home rule to India. Some grounds doubtless existed for their feeling. But in spite of that he believed in the ideal which had been set up before the Empire. The task of "setting India on her feet" was obligatory. It would be a proud page in British Empire history when it was written that the United Kingdom had welcomed the peoples of India as partners in the community. On the other hand, it was monstrosity of nations.
