Dominion Day Races at S'ide

Have you seen the list of entries for the horse races at Summerside July 2nd? If so, have you picked the winners? The 230 Trot with Peter Verdi, Princess Aubrey, Donna Harvester, The Pup, and Wats Edition, any one of which may win. Trainer Mack Steele thinks Peter is good, and James T. thinks Princess may play them the same trick as last Dominion Day. No doubt Col. McKinnon is counting a victory for his big fine trotter Donna. We still have the wonderful little trotter The Pup, and Willard Kelly's Old Glory imported, to make his first start on the Island.

The 227 Pace with seven good pacers. Bingen Aubrey the winner of the 229 class at New Annan last year, from reports real good, and looks about right for the Col. Bud Axtworthy the beautiful bay stallion is acting fine for trainer Waite. Al Worthy the winner of the three year old class at New Annan last year is training O.K. for his owner and driver Willard Kelly. And Dr. MacIntyre with Dixie Marque will try for the race; you will remember the Doctor won here last year with Aubrey Anna, York Ola, a green pacer, from reports is worth watching. Major Aubrey that has been a half in 1:03 1/2 this spring, looking good enough to win. We still have Teddy Jackson and if he shows his last fall Charlottetown Exhibition form, they will have to keep paces to beat him.

Boys what about the 230 Trot with eight entries, six of which are new to the race fans. First we have Princess Edna, a green one, next is Worthy Louise, and if reports are right, she should win. Then we have the race horse Mack Todd, and Lord Vale a last year Old Glory importation. What about the two Lacopia's, LaRico and Lacopia Beauty. Followers of the New London Ice Races last winter will remember LaRico the McArthur colt out of the race mare Miss Belle Rico, winning all the races he started in. We still have Peggy Longest and Davenport Prince. With the above eight, some one must be outside the money. Can you pick the winner. Races are being conducted on the three heat plan which means you will see real racing every heat. Don't forget Monday, July 2nd, at Summerside Driving Park.

"HORSE ON THE CAR"—Some excitement was caused yesterday afternoon about 2:10 when a Chevrolet Sedan, owned by Mr. John Warren, City, and operated by Mr. Leo McMillan of Stanhope, ran into the Government mail train close to the intersection of Prince and Grafton Streets, turning the horse over on the lawn and depositing the driver Mr. Leo McCabe likewise. No damage was reported; the horse was slightly injured. It appears that the driver of the car taking the turn from Grafton to Prince, hugged the curb too closely. Mr. Warren, seeing danger, grasped the wheel, the car however, shooting across the street to collide with the mail train. The car received some damage to headlights.

THE revelation that Governor Smith of New York narrowly escaped being described in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica as "the son of a rather unsuccessful gardener" instead of "the son of a rather unsuccessful truckman" due to the difference in the English language as spoken in the United States and England (a truckman in England being a market gardener and in the United States, one engaged in the trucking business)—recalls a somewhat similar incident affecting an American boy who was attending a fashionable English school.

THE principal of the school had occasion to ask the pupils the nature of their fathers' occupation. When it came to the turn of the American boy he answered: "Lumberman."

By the air froze and a general sniffing among the others boys ensued.

NEXT morning, before school work began, the principal announced to the boys that he had an explanation to make. He said that he had looked up the meaning of the word "Lumberman" in an American dictionary and found that it applied to one who dealt in timber in a wholesale way. In England "Lumberman" is a rags, bottles and bon-man—an itinerant collector of useful material.

AND while we are on the subject, asking John Drinkwater once again: "Why does an Englishman writing to a close personal friend begin 'My dear'—and when addressing a casual acquaintance 'Dear'—while with Americans 'My dear' is a sign of formality, and 'Dear' one of intimacy?"

AN astounding coincidence is reported in Harold Kellogg's book "The Story of the Magician." In his early stage career Houdini used to do a "spirit message" act, assisted by his wife. It was pure fake from beginning to end. Once, in a Canadian town, a woman in the audience sent to the stage a sealed question reading:

"Where is my brother John? I have not heard from him in nineteen years. (Signed) Mary Murphy."

THE usual answer to questions like that was:

"You will shortly hear from him, as he is on his way to you."

But on this occasion, Mrs. Houdini—who was the "medium" and supposed to be in a trance—recalled a Mrs. John Murphy, who kept an ice-cream parlor in New York City, and a great friend of the Houdinis.

Taking a chance—they would be safe in another town before Mary Murphy had a chance to check up the information—Mrs. Houdini replied:

"You will find your brother at East Seventy-second street, New York City."

BUT Mary fooled them. She wired. And impossible as it may sound it turned out that John Murphy of East 72nd Street in New York City, was indeed, Mary Murphy's long-lost brother.

"If some bold realist had subsequently tried to explain to the good people of that Canadian town that Houdini and I really had no inside knowledge of the spirit world, no second sight, no occult knowledge whatever, he would have courted tar and feathers," adds Mrs. Houdini.

HOUDINI was devoted to pies—especially strawberry pie. And was likewise devoted to locks—no lock was too complicated for him. Mrs. Houdini was well aware of these two facts, but nevertheless, she kept her pies under lock and key for other domestic reasons. On the Sunday the "Handout King" was at home, Mrs. Houdini made two strawberry pies for dinner and locked them up.

LATER, husband and wife went for a walk in Central Park, New York, and Mrs. Houdini thought she detected her husband had something on his mind—not his "Little Mary" bothering him. Just before dinner she discovered the reason—one of the pies was gone. On the empty plate lay Houdini's visiting card.

AFTER fixing up with the editor of a popular weekly to pay him twenty cents a word for his reminiscences, John Philip Sousa got to work in due course the manuscript was ready. Before sending it off, his younger daughter—a brilliant girl and something of a literary critic—begged to be allowed to look it over. Sousa agreed. Later she reported back that it was a fine piece of work but suggested that four words be deleted. The words were "if," "and," "but," and "ever."

"Somewhat distressed, Sousa reminded her that their absence would cost him eighty cents. But she insisted and out they went.

BROODING over the loss of those eighty cents, Sousa one day unboomed himself to Henry Kitchell Webster, the novelist.

"I'll buy the words from you at twenty cents apiece," offered Webster.

Sousa stuck out for a dollar for the four on the ground that "ever" was a two syllable word, but eventually the deal was consummated for eighty cents, Webster insisting on Sousa, giving him a receipt in full for each of the four words; that is, "I am told," says Sousa, "that Webster is writing his next novel around those four words."

REMEMBER JULY 2nd IS THE DATE OF LOT 65 TEA PARTY

THE recent issue in a single volume of E. S. Martin's "Life of Joseph H. Choate," recalls a flood of stories about that eminent lawyer-diplomatist who was one of the wisest of men in an age when giants such as Whistler, Oscar Wilde, Mark Twain, William M. Everts and Chauncey Depew were making the whole world laugh.

ONE of the best Choate stories—and it is not in Mr. Martin's book—relates to the time when he was American Ambassador in London. In those days the United States did not furnish its representative with an official home and the story goes that one cold night a London "Bobby" going his rounds on the Thames Embankment—that haven of rest for homeless derelicts—found Mr. Choate upon a bench asleep.

NOT knowing who the sleeper was, the "Bobby" woke him up, none too gently and said: "Ain't yer got no home?"

"No," replied Choate. "You see, I'm the American Ambassador."

NEAR the end of the Second Hague Peace Conference in the summer of 1907—a long drawn out affair—the Queen of Holland gave a party for the delegates which was attended by Mr. Choate, as head of the American delegation. Writing to his wife, after the event—the letter quoted in Mr. Martin's book—Choate, who was straining at the leash to start for home, said:

"The Prince (Queen Wilhelmina's consort) has little sense of humor. When I told him that I had said to Her Majesty that if we stayed here much longer I should apply to become a Dutch subject, he seemed to think a minute and then said:

"What would you want to do that for?"—which I thought was good."

THEN there is the famous story told by Mr. Coate about William M. Everts, when Everts was Secretary of State. They were going up one day—which was packed with young men who wanted jobs in the diplomatic service—when Everts remarked to Choate that it was the biggest collection for foreign missions he had ever seen taken up!

WHICH reminds me of a story told by former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall in his memoirs.

During the time Benjamin Harrison was President (chortles Mr. Marshall), he appointed a great many of his relatives to office. One hot summer's day a Westerner, with a cowboy hat, breezy in the office of the secretary to Mr. Harrison, threw his hat on the floor and said:

"Where's Ben?"

The secretary asked him what he wanted, married woman, Edith Davidson of Lower Montague aforesaid, said, Married Woman and Laura Wightman of Lower Montague aforesaid, Spinsters and all other the next of-kin of the said Jessie I. D. 1927 should not be pronounced by the said Petitioners and ANOTHER of Mr. Marshall's stories was about a lady who called on a Congressman's wife and found the Congressman present. As the caller came into the room he started to rise, and the lady said: "Mr. Congressman, don't get up."

The wife immediately interrupted, saying: "Let him alone! He's shoot learning!"

ALMA The June meeting of the Alma Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. W. Deane. Eight members were present. It was decided to hold an icecream social at the school grounds in order to raise funds. The social will be held on Wednesday June 27th. Is Safe Milk Necessary?

It would be well to make a study of what all great authorities say on the question. Milk is one of the greatest breeding grounds for disease germs. Bacteria in Milk doubles itself every twenty minutes. Milk that has 25,000 Bacteria when delivered has 100,000 in an hours time. Hence the need of all harmful bacteria being destroyed. People are becoming more alive to the question of Safe Milk, but yet there are those who think it necessary for the infant and sick child, but when baby is older or the child becomes well they think Safe Milk no longer necessary.

How many contract disease between the ages of two and twenty? Safe Milk is the only kind we deliver.

In order to give our customers the best possible service beginning July 1st, we will deliver seven days a week. Teams leaving our Plant at 7 A. M. instead of 8 A. M., one hour earlier than in the past.

Our teams also carry our Table Cream, Whipping Cream and Butter, all put up in the same sanitary manner.

Surplus supplies are always available at the Co's Plant.
