

PRINCE EDWARD

AFTERNOON 3 to 5
TODAY
Doors Open 2.30

EVENING 7 to 10.30
TODAY
Doors Open 2.30

Jesse L. Laskey
Famous Players Presents Famous Players
Thomas W. Ross
IN
"The Only Son"
IN FIVE PARTS 212 SCENES
A Supper Dramatic Masterpiece with a Pulsing Vivid Finish
A Big Story that Knocks at the Door of your Heart

Francis X. Bushman
-IN-
The Private Officer
IN TWO PARTS
A Startling Mystery Drama

Who Stole the Bridegroom Comedy -Song- My Wild Rose MR. HUSKINS	COMING	COMING
	The Streets of New York In Three Parts	The Master Key WAIT FOR IT! WATCH FOR IT! THEN COME AND SEE IT!

Brighten Up
Paints,
Varnishes, Etc.
At Saving Prices

The time for home decorating is again here and brings to our attention the necessity of brightening up the woodwork, doors, furniture, and other articles about the house in order to make it that bright, clean spot it should be. Our stock of paints, varnishes, enamels, etc. include the largest range from the world's leading manufacturers, and our prices on same will please you. Examine the list below, then call or phone your orders.

Use Sherwin Williams Paints

Do not experiment with inferior paint—buy the brand with a reputation—Sherwin Williams—you won't regret it. Price per gallon $2.50. (50 shades.)

Sherwin Williams inside paints in 1 and 2 lb. tins in all colors.

Sherwin Williams Varnish Stain, dries with a fine gloss, besides showing out the grain of the wood; per tin, 15, 25, 50 and 90c. each.

Floorlac, The master floor enamel, dries hard and can be walked on without scratching. 1 pint size, 50c., 1 quart, 90c.

Paint and Varnish Brushes from 5c. to $3.00 each.

Ready Mixed Gold Paint, per box, 25c.
Furniture Varnish in tins, 1/2 pint and pint, price 10c and 20c.
Alabastine, the sanitary wall finish, 1/2 lb. pkgs., 20c., 5 lb. pkgs., 40c. each.
Ramsays No. 400 Hard Oil Finish Varnish. A splendid varnish for general use. Our price per gallon, $2.40.
Sherwin Williams "Marmot" floor varnish, the kind that has stood the test; per gallon, $3.50.
"Sapolin" White Enamel, 1/4 pints to 1 gallon, 20c. to $4.00.
Sherwin Williams Floor Wax, per lb., 60c.
O' Cedar Furniture Polish, (the latest and best), 25c., 50c., and 75c.

Simon W. Crabbe
Agent for Sherwin Williams Paints
882-3-4-MtHdUd

Important Announcement

THE GUARDIAN PROMOTION EDITION is undoubtedly the most important publicity work ever undertaken for the advertising abroad of the advantages, resources and opportunities offered by Prince Edward Island.

The Guardian desires that this edition be thoroughly representative of the Island's men of action.

It is possible that many who might desire a representation in the work may not be reached by The Guardian canvassing representative. The Guardian will be pleased to furnish full information to those making inquiries.

882-3-2mE1f

The Central Guardian

IT PAYS to buy in this province.

SPECIAL MEETING—Special meeting in St. James' Hall to-night at 8 o'clock; everybody welcome. Subject, "The Burning Heart."

ICE RACES—Ice Races will take place in Summerside to-day. In addition to the local horses Alfred K. and Derby are going up from Charlottetown.

SOCIAL EVENING—The Young People's Society of the First Methodist Church will hold a social evening in Hertz Memorial Hall to-morrow (Friday) at 8 p.m. All members and friends of the Society are invited. A silver collection will be taken.

SALVATION ARMY—To-night, in Salvation Army Citadel, concert will be given. See the tableaux wounded soldier, Red Cross nurses, four musical dialogues, number of other special items. Good programme arranged. 2881

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS—Subscribers will please note that the club offer for Canadian Countryman is only good for the Guardian subscribers on Prince Edward Island.

THE STEAMERS—The winter steamers continue to make excellent time in crossing and yesterday the Minto docked in Georgetown at 10 o'clock with 83 tons freight, 40 bags mail and 85 passengers, and the St. John's in Pictou at 10 o'clock with 77 tons freight, 30 bags mail and 23 passengers. The mail train reached here at 12.50 p.m. The train left again last evening at 8.45 o'clock.

HOME GUARD—No. 1 Home Guard had a very successful shoot at the Agricultural Hall last evening. It was their first practice and considering this the scores were really very good. Following are the scores, possible 50 points, 5 shots at 25 yards, Rifle Cadet Ross 22; H. Blanchard, 40; Lt. Johnson, 39; C. Milford, 38; A. MacCabe, 37; G. F. Hutchings, 35; T. Hooper, 29; J. Doyle, 24; S. F. Hodgson, 21; G. H. Taylor, 20; E. Hertz, 14; V. Robin, 14.

NOTICE—Subscribers are notified that the price of the Morning Daily Guardian (mailed in P. E. I.) and Montreal Daily Star is $4.00 per year. The Morning Daily Guardian (mailed in P. E. I.) and Family Herald and Weekly Star is $3.00 per year. The price of the Evening Guardian and Montreal Daily Star (mailed in P. E. I.) is $3.25 per year, the Evening Guardian and Family Herald and Weekly Star (mailed in P. E. I.) is $2.25 per year.

FOR KING AND COUNTRY will be shown for the last time at the People's Theatre to-night. Don't miss it. 2889

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS—To-night at 8 o'clock sharp the Knights of Pythias will open on first degrees to accommodate those who could not come forward at the last meeting. A special appeal is made that they come tonight for initiation. All members who took first degrees last week are requested to attend as the second degree may be proceeded with if time will permit.

SOCIAL AND CONCERT—The basket social and entertainment which was held in Flat River Hall on Tuesday, 23rd February, came up fully to what was anticipated of it, and then some. That is, it was highly successful from every point of view. The order was good, the entertainment was varied and pleasing, and the receipts were handsome. The Belgian Relief Fund is larger by somewhat over one hundred dollars on account of it. Much mirth was provoked by the clever acting of Miss Marion MacDonald and Messrs. Neil and John Ross in the clever little farce entitled "The Sonnambulist." The singing of Mr. Allen MacDonald and Mr. W. Williamson was much appreciated and vociferously endorsed, to which both obligingly responded. In the delightful burlesque, the name of which the writer is unable to recollect, but which might be called "Sewing Circle," Miss Marion MacDonald was the leading character, ably supported by Miss Florrie McPhee, Miss Jane MacKenzie and Miss Katie Cantelo. Sparkling wit and brilliant repartee abounded in this number. Another amusing number was the pantomime very gracefully executed by Messrs. J. D. McRae and R. H. Hubley. "Bridget's Investment" is something that wears well. Justice was done this number by the characters—viz. Miss Mabel McInnis, Miss Jessie McRae and Mr. John D. McRae. The reading of Mr. C. S. MacDonald, Miss Mabel McInnis presided at the organ in her usual pleasing and capable manner. This entertainment was previously held at South Pictou Schoolhouse on Feb. 23rd and on the above-mentioned date—viz. Feb. 23rd carried down to Flat River. It is unnecessary to say that a pleasant time was enjoyed. The night was a clear calm and beautiful one and the conditions all favourable for the occasion. Mr. Nelson, the auctioneer, was masterly in the sale of baskets. There will be a change of programme in North Pictou Schoolhouse on Tuesday, 9th inst.

TALES TOLD BY MEN

(Continued from Page 2.)

BROOKLYN—Misses F. Martin and I. Murchison have returned to their homes in Point Prim, after a pleasant visit here, the guest of Mrs. M. Campbell. Miss M. Livingston, Murray Harbour, is visiting in Brooklyne, the guest of Mrs. M. Campbell. Mr. John M. MacPherson paid a visit to Mt. Vernon recently, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Morrison. Mr. Dan MacKinnon is busy training his trotter for the Bellevue races. The many friends of John W. Beers are sorry to learn of his illness. Mr. Dan MacPherson, Klondyke, paid a short visit here, the guest of Mr. Alex. A. MacPherson. Messrs Archie MacPherson and John MacPhee were visitors to Brooklyne recently. Messrs M. Ross and J. P. McLeod, Valleyfield, spent Sunday in Brooklyne, the guest of Mr. John Mathieson.

POACHER—Taking a signalling lamp as a poacher. Presently the signal came. "Fire away here; the enemy just behind." The captain did not like to give the order to fire, fearing that the man might be killed. But one of the men said: "That's all right, sir, I know Alf; he's like a bloomin' rabbit." So they cleared the enemy from that point. An hour or two later came another signal. It was Alf again. For three days nothing more was seen of the man, and the officer was very uneasy, when on the third night the signal came again from another direction: "Fire away; I've got the blighters very handy."

The next morning Alf turned up; he had been away for three days and three nights with only his emergency rations. The Commanding Officer sent for him, but all Alf said to him was: "Don't ask me anything sir; I'm that hungry I could eat the leg of a sheep with the wool on."

A MONS DOG.

A lady at work in Northern France looking after the comfort of our troops sent the following to the London Morning Post.

Some of the men have dogs, and as everything which the British soldier has either acquired or given away since he left England is to him a "souvenir," these animals are always introduced to me as "souvenir dogs, miss."

The other day I was talking to a man in an infantry regiment who had with him the queerest little mongrel imaginable. His master accounted for his somewhat unusual appearance with the remark: "E's a Bel. kien dawg, that's what it is, miss, and then he added very proudly, "E was all through Mons."

The fact that he himself had been "through Mons," that he had, indeed, been out since the very beginning, did not appear to him to be a matter of any particular interest, but his small mongrel was a hero, and he wanted me to know it!

THE KAISER'S BIRTHDAY.

An officer writes:—The greatest battle since the beginning of the war was fought here today (January 25). It started at 6 a. m. and it is now—4 p. m.—still going on. The Germans started their attack on our trenches at exactly 6.45 a. m. We gave them a little ground, just to draw them on, as the country round here is a bit open. Then we let them have it. Our brigade took about 800 prisoners. They seemed to be all fresh troops brought up specially to try to break through, but the British stone wall was a bit too hard for them.

We hurled them back on all sides. Their losses are terrible. One can see nothing but dead Germans all over the place in heaps.

The Kaiser will not relish this on his birthday. I expect his troops wanted to give him a pleasant surprise for the 27th, but they did not succeed. Our losses are very light. Only two men killed and 10 slightly wounded of my company. At one point a hand-to-hand fight took place. It was right outside the Gloucesters' trenches.

At The People's Theatre

YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU

THE REGENT FILM CO. PRESENTS

For King and Country

-IN THREE STIRRING PARTS-

Genuine Battle Scenes taken at the front, showing the heroic spirit of OUR SOLDIERS in defending OUR FLAG in comparison with the savagery and behaviour of the Common Enemy—Every Mother should see it who has a Son enlisted to defend OUR CAUSE

Twenty Minutes of Love—A Dandy Keystone Comedy

"Fraid Cat" A Pretty Story of Sonny Jim (Bobby Connelly) Featuring the "Vita" Dog, and Teft Johnson

Her Birthday Present
A Drama of Love and Temptation

ADMISSION 5 and 10 cents

—Coming—
Solution To The Serial
MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY
Watch For Pathe Weekly

AN ALL BRITISH PRODUCTION

However, the Gloucester boys proved too good for them at this game, and, in addition to blackening their eyes, rolled them in the mud and then took taken admit that the British troops are too good for them.

Our artillery was splendid. Got their mark every time. In one spot alone on the road by the canal a party of twenty Germans lay dead. Our 18-pounder caught them lovely!

A heavy attack has just started a gain guns roaring on all sides. Our machine guns are at it heavily, every man at his best. I must finish as there is no time for writing any more now.

AN 1891 FORECAST OF KAISER WILHELM

The following striking forecast of the Kaiser's career was written twenty-three years ago, in 1891, by the famous Portuguese author Eca de Queiroz. Guardian readers will be able to judge for themselves the extent to which this political horoscope has been filled.

Jose Maria Eca de Queiroz, who was born in 1845, died in 1900 in Paris, where he had been Portuguese Consul-General for over ten years. The study which is published today first appeared in the Lisbon Journal, A Capital, and belongs to the author's maturer years. It exhibits all the "conspicuous powers of observation and deduction" which German critics concede to this classic writer.

"Lui, toujours lui!"

Thus exclaimed Victor Hugo while engaged with the "Voix Interieures" of the Kaiser's soul, whose attention was claimed by so many problems, human and divine, should be obsessed with imperious pertinacity—his best thoughts and his best alexandrine monopolized—by the obtrusive "image" of Napoleon the Great.

We also may fast to his individuality, flinging it so boldly across our path, that he has made of himself a European problem. True it is that since he mounted the throne, William II, Emperor and King, has never ceased to attract and hold the curiosity of the world; an amused and expectant curiosity awaiting surprises and events—as though the throne of Germany were nothing but a gaudy stage set up in the centre of Europe.

THE PROBLEM OF THE AGE.

The world in perplexity murmurs: Who is this man that changes and multiplies himself incessantly? What thing will germinate in that well-groomed head of a regulation officer? And Mr. Reman groans because he must die before witnessing the complete development of this shifting personality. Thus William II. has become a contemporary problem—there are theories regarding him as there are regarding magnetism, the influenza, or the planet Mars. It may be that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of civilization. Now that he has thrown off the hard control of Bismarck, he can give the reins to his insatiable dilettantism of activity with like licence that each one of these theories contain, as is unfortunately the case with all theories, a particle of truth. It is my opinion, however, that he is nothing but a dilettante of activities—I mean a man strongly enamoured of activity, comprehending and feeling with unusual intensity the infinite delight it offers, and desiring, therefore, to experience it and enjoy it in every form permissible in our state of