Further Details Of Liberal Party Split As Pacts Pass Commons

Angered At Criticism Of His Inconsistency In Offering To Support Irish Agreement After Spending Week In Opposing Its Principles, Mr. King Makes A Double Volte Face And Votes Against It.

Further interesting details of the split in the Liberal vote on the Rhodesian Agreement and Mr. Mackenzie King's volte face on Irish treaty, as witnessed in Parliament on Tuesday, are given by the Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Gazette. Strange and stirring things (says the Gazette writer), happened from the moment the assistant clerk of the House called the House to order for third reading of the agreement between Canada and Southern Rhodesia.

The official was about to declare formally the third reading of the measure when the Prime Minister promptly interjected his demand for a division, his purpose being clearly to align the Liberals on these agreements because of their prolonged opposition to them in the past seven weeks.

Premier Bennett's demand for a division on the first pact to be called precipitated a remarkable scene with members of the Opposition doing some rapid self-examination to see where they would stand and how that stand could be justified. Pandemonium broke loose when the Liberal leader, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, stood up to vote with the Government in favor of this treaty, and a repetition of Conservative derisive applause came with each Liberal front-bencher rising to vote with the Administration. Even louder were the Government cheers of merriment when E. J. Young (Liberal, Weyburn) ardent low tariff advocate and persistent critic of the pacts, also stood up in the roll-call of "Ayes." When the washing was all on the line only 16 opponents of this pact were disclosed, 13 of them being Liberals and the others Progressives and Labor members.

A more diverting melodrama came when the motion for third reading of the agreement with the Irish Free State was made, for there was the remarkable spectacle of the Liberal leader rising in his place and explaining to the House why he proposed to vote in favor of this agreement and then later, angered by a rather vigorous reply from Hon. H. H. Stevens (Minister of Trade and Commerce) voting against the pact. His reason for being inclined to vote for the pact laid in the fact, he declared, that it did not involve any increase in duties and it contained no provision for fixing or maintaining the margin of preference for a period of years.

When the Minister of Trade and Commerce jumped to his feet and with considerable warmth told the House that the Liberal leader had shown himself guilty of striking inconsistency and cast reflections upon the sincerity of Mr. King the latter declared there and then to change his mind and to vote against the pact, remarking that the Minister of Trade and Commerce had furnished him with a good reason for opposing it and also informing the House that as the rules forbade him making a reply to Mr. Stevens the former Minister of Justice, Mr. Lapointe, would tell the House why he had changed his mind. Mr. Lapointe's chief point of criticism of the pact with the Irish Free State was the principle of establishing preference by tariff increases.

about six weeks arguing the question. He says this is a marked advance upon the British agreement. Now, this bill gives to the Irish Free State precisely what has been given to the United Kingdom. The whole bill is based upon, allied to, intertwined and amalgamated with the British agreement. Every jot and tittle, every crossed 't' and every dotted 'i' of the British agreement is in this. Surely, the right honorable gentleman now realizes the spectacle he has been making the last six weeks.

The Prime Minister pointed out that the rules prevented Mr. King from replying. "I cannot speak again, having moved the third reading and exhausted my right to do so," said the Prime Minister.

King's Volte Face
"Then I shall ask my colleague the former Minister of Justice, to tell the House why the Minister of Trade and Commerce has convinced me by the speech he has just made that I should vote against this measure," exclaimed Mr. King, amid ironical laughter from the Government benches.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe rose to the accompaniment of desk-thumping from the Liberal phalanx behind him and said he was pleased to tell the House why he was going to vote against the Irish Free State bill. "We have been complaining," he said, "against the provisions in these agreements which increase the tariff against other countries in order to create a preference in favor of articles coming from the United Kingdom. The same thing applies to the agreement with the Irish Free State under section 3 of the bill." Amid Conservative laughter and interjections, Mr. Lapointe shouted that "I am sorry it is beyond the understanding of some honorable gentlemen on the other side but I cannot help it."

Helen Spindle and the president Mrs. Alex Buchanan on behalf of the members then presented Mr. Ross with a lovely stainless steel carving set to which both Mr. and Mrs. Ross responded with a few well chosen words.
A delicious lunch was then served by Mrs. Mackinnon after which a very pleasant social time was spent together.
Following is the address:
Dear Sister Member: As members of the Women's Institute assembled here this evening, we take this opportunity to extend you a sincere and hearty welcome to our community.
You are by no means a stranger in our midst coming here as our school teacher almost two years ago, you by your kindness and your congenial spirit and your willingness to assist in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community have endeared yourself to us all.
May you and your chosen life partner be abundantly blessed with the richest of earth's blessings health, happiness and prosperity.
We ask you to accept this wedding gift not only as a symbol of our good will but also as a token of the esteem in which both you and your husband are held in the whole community.
Signed on behalf of the Strathcona Women's Institute.
