The Girl Who Had No Chance
By MARION RUBINCAM
GREAT PLANS
Chapter 54.

The change in position had happened quite suddenly. Ruth found herself literally left in charge of a tiny office, with little work and most of the day to herself. Mr. Vance, the real estate man, spent nearly all his time away, sometimes in pursuit of his work, more often at a nearby pool room.
Langley Williams had been in Marketown two weeks. The day after he arrived Ruth had seen him, and decided to change her position, as she did not want to meet him in the factory. She hated the work too, and when two days later, she heard that Mr. Vance needed someone in the office, she went down promptly for the place. She wore the simple little serge suit that her aunt had bought her that spring, and the plain little waiting that went with it, and felt herself to be quite smart and business-like in appearance.
Her leisure she employed in practicing on the typewriter and making speed in shorthand. She was reading up all articles on business efficiency that she could find.
"And perhaps when I get experience here I can go to the city and apply for a place," she said. "$10 a week is very high for Marketown. I could double that if I could be private secretary to a man in a big city firm."
Her mother said nothing to this. The big house was well run. Trust Mrs. O'Neil for efficiency there! But the more people it held, the greater were its expenses. Ruth was ready to swear that the furnace gorged coal in an uncanny manner, the bins needed constant re-filling, and bed-linen would wear out towels developed strange habits, table cloths had to be purchased, and this was about all. All except that there was always a good table at home now, plenty of heat, plenty of hot water.
But Mr. O'Neil growing daily more helpless as his troubles ran their natural course, became a greater and greater expense. Medicines and doctors should be classed as luxuries Ruth decided. So with faxes and repairs and the thousand and one things that came up, the bank account kept even and that was all.
Langley Williams called on the evening already agreed upon. But he took an instant fancy to Duncan O'Neil, and the two men spent most of the evening together talking books and travel.
"You've been everywhere," Duncan said.
"But you've read all about it, and you know more concerning the places I've seen than I do," Williams answered.
And Ruth felt somehow, that she was nothing more than a small child permitted to sit and listen to the grown-up's conversation. Langley Williams paid only polite attention to her.
He came in again one evening when she had gone to Mrs. Weeds—an intermittent friendship existed there. He came again, when she was taking her shorthand lesson—she still kept them up. He knew the evenings when she was not at home, and he always seemed to call then.
Ruth decided Langley Williams did not like her.
But it did not worry her.
"I've no time for men, for flirtations, or marriage, or anything like that," she told her mother.
"I've a career to make and every possible handicap to overcome. But I'll be a successful business woman yet. Only it leaves me no time to think of romance."
"You just wait, dearie," little Mrs. Belding put in, from her place by the kitchen table.
So Ruth, as Mrs. Belding said.

37,500 Screen Fans Write to Stars Every Day
Interesting Discussion During Filming of Paramount's "Singed Wings"

How many film fan letters are mailed daily?
This question was the subject of discussion during the filming of "Singed Wings," Penrhyn Stanlaws' latest production for Paramount, featuring Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nagel, which will be shown at the Prince Edward Theatre next Monday. Miss Daniels started things by asking Mr. Nagel what he thought of it. Before the discussion ended Mr. Stanlaws, Robert Brower, Adolphe Menjou and others taking part in "Singed Wings" had offered an opinion. Here is the conclusion reached:
The average motion picture star, leading woman or leading man receives 150 letters daily. There are about 250 leading men, women and stars. This means that an average of 37,500 fan letters are received daily by famous film players. Stamps for 37,500 letters cost $750. In a year 966,500 letters are mailed. This means an outlay of $193,750 for stamps.
If the envelopes are of an average length of six inches, the total length of them all, laid end to end, would in a day be 225,000 inches or 17,750 feet or a little more than three miles. In a year the grand total would be about 1200 miles.
Jokingly, Conrad Nagel added that if all the odors of all the perfumes used to scent the letters were condensed in one grand smell it would be powerful enough to suffocate the population of New York City. He also stated that if all the ink used were put in one receptacle it would make a lake wide enough and deep enough to swim in comfortably.

Condolence
Mr. Reuben S. Barrett, Kingston, P. E. I. Respected Brother:—
At a regular meeting of King William, L. O. L. No. 1166, held on Monday night, 12th instant, a resolution was unanimously passed resolving the undersigned to tender to you the sincere sympathy of the Brethren of this Lodge in the death of your greatly respected and beloved brother, Robert Barrett.
As a consistent member of the Methodist Church, your brother will be greatly missed; but more so as a neighbor, for he was ever ready to render cheerful aid where ever his services were required in the promotion of any just cause. His life was filled with usefulness to be crowned at last with the call of his Master "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." And into His hands we commit him with the solemn admonition ringing in our ears: Be ye also ready.
We humbly pray that He who doeth all things well may sustain you in your sorrow, and cause you to remember with a feeling of joy that there is a blessed inheritance beyond into which your brother has entered forever more. While he can never return to us, yet, let us so mould our lives that we may some day go to him.
With every assurance of our most respectful sympathy.
On behalf of the Brethren of King William Lodge, No. 1166,
JOHN H. COLWILL,
SAMUEL B. NEWSON,
Committee.

A Letter Of Condolence

Brother Hector MacKenzie.
We, the officers and members of Borden L. O. L., 2829, Borden, wish to convey to you our deepest sympathy in the death of your dear brother.
Whilst deploring the sad visitation which has come to you, yet it is gratifying to know that he has had a short time previous to ourselves participated in the journey which we all shall have to make from the shores of Time to the Peaceful Realm of Eternity.
We realize that human sympathy is shallow and of little worth; we therefore commend you to a merciful Providence Who has said: I will not leave you comfortless, but will come again, that where I am there you may be also.
Signed on behalf of the Lodge,
JOHN W. DICKIE, Worshipful Master.
WM. H. MACLEOD, Past Master.

Ford THE UNIVERSAL CAR
Where Demands are Most Exacting They Choose a Ford

The city man, the farmer, the sportsman, the surveyor, in short, men in every walk of life faced with an exacting transportation problem turn instinctively to the Ford.

Its flexibility and quick "pick-up" make it the best car for city traffic. Its ample power, light weight and sturdy construction meet all requirements of the country driver.

Bad roads are no obstacle to the Ford, nor is it a stranger where no road exists.

In our show rooms we have a model to suit your requirements. Call in and arrange for a demonstration. The prices are the lowest in history.

FOR SALE

Clear View Holstein Bull 15 months old, his dam is Maritine Champion R. O. M., two year, also winner of two year old class at Amherst in milk test, open to all breeds.
Making a higher score than any two year old in Canada, in a three day open test last year. I have another bull younger than this one that would make a good herd header.
Could also spare a pair of choice females.
His sire was first prize Bull last fall at Charlottetown Exhibition.
