Gary Cooper And Merle Oberon
"The Cowboy And The Lady"
At The Prince Edward

With Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon as the stellar attractions in a swiftly-moving modern-day story, combining high comedy and an impelling drama, Samuel Goldwyn's "The Cowboy and the Lady" was last night presented on the screen of the Prince Edward Theatre.

The suspenseful tale of a Washington society girl who gambles position and fortune to marry a sun-browned cowboy of the far west, after a unique meeting at a Florida rodeo, is dramatized with telling effect against beautiful backgrounds. The story maintains a rapid pace throughout, and is highlighted by scenes of rich comedy and sparkling direction.

Cooper and Miss Oberon, as the cowboy and the lady of this title, prove again that they are two of the great actors of the screen, and their serio-comic portrayals will win them even more fans throughout the world. The case is rounded out by such notables as Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd, Fuzzy Knight and Henry Kolker.

The picture was introduced with the most brilliant backgrounds and effective lighting.

"The Cowboy and the Lady," Samuel Goldwyn's, is one of the season's top-notch pictures and belongs on the list of every moviegoer who demands the best in entertainment.

The conflict between a young settler and a rival rancher who controls the local law is the thematic basis of George O'Brien's current action film, "Lawless Valley," at the Capitol Theatre.

O'Brien cast as a young homesteader whose property is coveted by Fred Kohler, a crooked rancher, and his son, played by Fred Kohler, Jr.

When the latter two hold up and rob a stage coach of $50,000, they manage to put the blame on O'Brien and his father, and a disreputable sheriff sends the young man to prison after permitting the boy's father to be murdered in order to destroy his alibi.

The scheming rancher, after gaining the coveted property, subsequently attempts to force O'Brien's marriage with his son. Before these plans materialize, O'Brien is leased from prison and launches a vigorous campaign to bring his enemies to justice. How he succeeds in his mission, clears his father's name as well as his own, saves his sweetheart, provide suspenseful events leading to the smashing climax.

Daily Lenten Meditations
Tradition And Change
(By Lord Gorell)

TV-day, as ever since the War, to be young is to be wise, and to be old is to be, at best, deserving of toleration and, at worst, of no account. "We are young in a young world; we are the inheritors of the middle into which we were born; that is your responsibility, not ours"—how often do we feel, even if we are fortunate enough not actually to hear spoken, these thoughts in the mind of the self-confident, efficient, and at the same time curiously insensitive twenties and thirties of to-day as they speed hither and thither on a hundred new things and ways momentarily interesting.

This sense that they are in a world which may come crashing about their ears at any moment, which has haunted so many young people all their childhood is a terrible thing; we older folk who indeed have passed through the whirlwind, through days of which they have no experience and little realization, but to which we are hood in a world of remote and vast serenities—can, I often think, hardly appreciate the change; it seems probable that it underlies much more than that common-sense supposition which is responsible for that fever of living which is now so noticeable everywhere.

It is that perhaps more than any other cause, though much else in the modern world has contributed, which has brought about so marked a change of attitude towards marriage. In former days, whatever may be the nature of the arrangement, on the surface morality was unbending; divorce was not merely unfashionable, it was distinctly an offence against Society. In fact, it had become a passport—or, if that be by way of exaggeration, it is at least instructive to compare the numbers of openly unsuccessful marriages within any given circle of acquaintance thirty years ago with the similar numbers to-day.

Of old, too, again whatever may be the nature of the arrangement, to proceed to church on a Sunday morning as a family; any that do so still to-day would certainly have to be classed as abnormal; the sons and daughters, by car or motor-cycle, and the daughters—or the daughters of someone—like as not perched precariously beside the seat.

There is very much of the ways of the world before the days of easy and rapid locomotion which has, it would seem, gone irrevocably and gone sometimes—often enough—the world hope for good but gone also in not a few instances for ill as human progress is reckoned. And among the ill may be reckoned that possession of the soul's self which can only be fully gained and held in quietude. Poetry is gone; we have substituted the poetry of motion for the poetry of thought—and the world is the poorer for the exchange.

No, however one may view it, reckoning up as far as is possible and making every allowance for much misadventure, as is the case in the current, in which there are so many more beginnings than ma-

CHAMINADE CHORUS GIVES FINE CONCERT
Charming Program Presented To Enthusiastic Audience In Hertz Hall Last Night.

An expectant and appreciative audience greeted the Chaminaide Chorus last night, in Hertz Hall. This was the 4th annual concert, directed by Mrs. Hugh Miller, with Miss Beattie Smallman at the piano. The back drop, a woodland scene, was painted by Mrs. P. A. Creelman. Spruce trees, at the side of the platform, a twig-supported iron kettle, under which a fire glowed, rustic seats, and the colorful costumes of the performers, made a realistic setting for the Gypsy Program, so efficiently presented.

The concert opened with the choruses, "A Song of the Open", by Kücken, arranged by Chorus; "The Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta", rendered with spirit and precision.

The director then gave a very side history of the Gypsy people and delighted the audience with a reading in French-Canadian dialect from the works of the Canadian poet, Wilson MacDonald. A recitation from the works of Henry Drummond given as an encore was particularly enjoyed.

Gertrude Holmes, Thelma Teed, Irene Young and Ruby Stiers, assisted by the entire chorus, sang, in an interesting and delightful manner, a requested and heartily encored number, "A Merry Gypsy Band", by Vernon.

This was followed by a trio, Woodman's "Gypsy Daisies", by Mary Miller, Elizabeth Brown and Thelma Burns. The intonation, balance and interpretation were excellent. An encore, they featured an Aldeanaut selection.

Elizabeth Cox and Emma Thomson, danced, very gracefully, the stately minuet, and were encored enthusiastically.

The Chaminaide Double Quartet, Lena MacKay, Mary Miller, Thelma Teed, Hilda MacLaughlin, and Elizabeth Wood, Catherine Spencer and Thelma Burns sang, unaccompanied, the Rix arrangement of Rubenstein's priceless melody, "Thou art like a Beauteous Flower". Very appropriate and well given by Ethel Sutherland. In response to a hearty encore, the Quartet sang "The Phone Bell Rang" by Messy.

A duet, "The Sympathetic Moon" from "The Belle of Barcelona", by Chaney, was given by Elizabeth Cox and Margarita and Emma Thomson as Lieutenants Harold Wright, who had been requested by a number of people in the city, and the dainty presentation was most enjoyable. An encore was also given. A dashing and lovely solo, "Parade", was beautifully rendered by Mary Miller and thoroughly enjoyed by the appreciative audience. Equally delightful was the encore, "The Switzer's Farewell".

This part of the program closed with a chorus, loved the world over, "Benedictus Stream", in which Ethel Sutherland played a joyous guitar accompaniment.

The second part of the program was a musical comedy, "The Quest of the Gypsy", by Clements. The Chaminaide Chorus has already made a name for itself as a musical organization of merit. The featuring of a comedy is, for them, a new departure. Their dramatization was very creditable and they overcame the limitations splendidly. The humor and vivacity of the text, with the finish of their solo and part singing, really gave a most commendable performance.

The cast of characters was:
(Graduates of a famous cooking school)
Roumanian Prince—Sally Wood.
Lionel—Thelma Ramsay.
Rhodes—Lillian Wells.
Dorothy—Muriel Lowther.
Ida—Margaret Waller.
Jean—Dorothy Blair.
Hilman—Ina Swanson.
Kyla—Christine Court.
Barbara—Catherine Spencer.
Country Boy—Ruth Christie.
Other members of the cast were: Gertrude Holmes, Daisy Davey, Elizabeth Cox, Emma Thomas, Lena MacKay, Ethel Brown, Hilda MacLaughlin, Elizabeth Brown, Ruth Stiers, Alice Fraser, Ethel Sutherland, Elizabeth Wood, Irene Young, Thelma Teed, Jean Tait and Thelma Burns.

The Chaminaide Chorus is fortunate in its pianist, whose excellent accompanying and untiring interest stand for a large percentage of the success of the entertainment. They received several single bouquets to thank members who heartily to thank members who received the offering at the door; Mr. K. Clouston, who looked after the ushering; Mr. William Storey and son, Chester, for their stage settings; Mr. and Mrs. Ira Brown for stage properties; Mrs. J. P. Simmonds for valuable assistance in costuming; the Salvation Army Chorus for tambourines, and Prof. Kendall, who assisted in many ways and all others who in any way contributed to the success of the entertainment.

The concert is to be repeated tonight at 8.15 in Hertz Hall.

MR. THOMAS KEMP

Another of the old people of south eastern Kings has been called home in the person of Mr. Thomas Kemp of Milltown. He passed this life Feb. 25, 1939. Mr. Kemp who was well past the four score mark was born at the primitive hamlet of Milltown and the hemlock and while on the advance of civilization, yet on the other hand, owing to the utter disregard for the words of that familiar poem, "The Olden Time", touch not a hair of his head, he also witnessed the once well sheltered, and densely wooded "Garden of the Gulls" transformed into the memory of a desolate and swept island that is today. A stroke of apoplexy severed the silver cord, and the gentle, tenderly nursed, and every thing done to stay the win, was all to no avail and on the above date, old and full of years, he passed peacefully from time into eternity, at the great age of 88 years. He was the son of the late Capt. Thomas Kemp of Ganterbury, and his wife was the late Elizabeth Young, of this Province. His father a veteran of the seven years war at the time married in the woolen industry. The deceased, who never married, was highly respected. A hard working industrious man he eked out a comfortable existence. Two brothers, Matthew of Milltown and James of Albion, aged 85 and 90 years, respectively survive him, several sisters predeceased him.

His funeral took place from the home of his brother James in Albion, where he passed away, and was largely attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. H. Hymans who spoke very fittingly. Hymns were sung, "Shall We Meet Beyond the River, Rock of Ages, and The Hour of My Departure." The pall bearers, John James Soria, assisted Mrs. Jos. McClure, whose aunt passing will be greatly mourned by her many friends on the island.

Nazis Tinker With Circles

MUNICH, March 8 (CP)—German mathematicians, engineers and scientists must get some new measuring instruments as a result of a decree just published by the Reich Ministry for the Interior. This decree provides for division of the circle into 400 degrees instead of the traditional 360, as a consequence of the metric system. Thus a right angle in Germany no longer contains 90 degrees, but 100. All surveying in Germany from now on must be measured in accordance with the new system.

You dairymen know that your herd reaches maximum production when on pasture, in late spring or early summer. Your profits largely depend upon your ability to maintain these favorable conditions throughout the year.

It has much the same effect as fresh grass because of its bulky succulence, its palatability and its digestibility. It will keep that healthy bloom on your cattle all through the winter while the animals are in the barn. You will be surprised at its ability to keep the whole system in proper tone.

It is one of the most profitable feeds for dairy cows, and is a good conditioner for all live stock at this season of the year, and as compared with the present high prices of milk feed it is much better value.

"DOES IT MATTER?"

Almost any drug store can fill a prescription. "Does it matter?" you ask, "where I take this one to be compounded?"

Some stores regard prescriptions as a neglected sideline. In others, they are the paramount consideration. Does it matter? Some fill few prescriptions, so stocks deteriorate. Others, with a large volume, carry full, fresh stocks. Does it matter? Those who do make a business of compounding prescriptions see that each is filled exactly as the Doctor directs. Does it matter? What do you think?
