...But, after all, it is not the members of Parliament, but the electors, who are the chief actors in the political drama, for it is an indisputable fact that the moral and political complexion of the Legislature must ultimately be determined by the people themselves.

...myself, distinctly and unequivocally, the right of adapting my conduct to the exigency of the moment and the needs of my country."

...Your modern politician is usually made of different stuff. He prefers to "wait and see" the trend of public opinion, and to be wise after the event, rather than to take the initiative in forming the opinion of his fellow-countrymen.

...In 1845 Sir Robert Peel wrote as follows to a friend: "I would not admit any alteration in any of those Bills. This was thought very obstinate and very presumptuous; but the fact is people like a certain degree of obstinacy and presumption in a Minister. They abuse him for dictation and arrogance, but they like a Minister governed."

...wrote Mr. Bryce in his study of Lord Beaconsfield: "as to see a man equal to every fortune, unshaken by reverses indifferent to personal abuse, maintaining a long combat against apparently hopeless odds, with the sharpest weapons and a smiling face. His followers fancy he must have hidden resources of wisdom as well as of courage."

...When some of his predictions come true, and the turning tide of popular feelings begins to bear them toward power, they believe that he has been all along right and the rest of the world wrong.

...It is profoundly true that independence of character and a consistent support of "fundamentals" are the safest passports to success in Parliament, but they are also beyond doubt the most efficacious assets at the hustings.

...Aspirants to Parliamentary honors, however, appear usually to be unable to grasp this obvious truth.

...Notwithstanding all that they could have learnt from the record of history, candidates too often nowadays appear to have forgotten that men and women alike admire courage and strength of character more than any other qualities.

...The general public is wont to give its support to men and not to measures, and the more democratic a nation becomes, the more readily will the people respond to the appeal of men who are not afraid to maintain their principles, however unpopular they happen to be at the moment.

...The age in which we live," said Bishop Weldon (then headmaster of Harrow) in Harrow school chapel, "is democratic. 'Vox populi vox Dei' is its watchword: let me warn you against this diffident and fruitful error. There is no Divinity of numbers. God reveals himself not to the many, but to the few. The greatest crime ever wrought upon this earth was wrought by one who desired to do the people's pleasure.

...I wish to say to you, then, and to those especially who will hereafter tread the difficult and dangerous ways of public life, you may sympathise with the people as much as you like, you may hold it right that the will of the people should be done; but nothing that the people can say or do can alter by one's hair's breadth the law of right and wrong for you. You will gain respect, and what is more, you will deserve respect, if you will say to the people, not 'I will do as you tell me, whether I think it right or wrong,' but 'This I think right; this I will do. I shall be glad and grateful if you think it right, I admit that your will, your judgment, should be done, but it shall not be done by me unless I approve it. My conscience owes allegiance to God, but to none else.'

...Then, perhaps, there shall be seen again in public life that proud dignity, that noble and ennobling independence, which has of late, I fear, been too seldom displayed in the world.

...If those who set out to solicit the confidence of their countrymen would only remember, that a reputation for political consistency is far more easily gained than is generally believed to be the case, there would be less hedging at election time, and less heart-searching thereafter in the performance of Parliamentary obligations.

...But, after all, it is not the members of Parliament, but the electors, who are the chief actors in the political drama, for it is an indisputable fact that the moral and political complexion of the Legislature must ultimately be determined by the people themselves.

ASHAMED OF THE PIMPLES... Pimples and disfiguring skin diseases are particularly distressing to young ladies and gentlemen. The embarrassment is so great that you feel ashamed to appear among your young friends in society.

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS... Miss Carrie Altwater, Bittern Lake, Alta., writes: "I was entirely cured of pimples and blackheads some months ago by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

we hear so much, which was believed to be the guiding star of the sagacious mind which has just gone from us—that public opinion is moulded by every one who has a will, or heart, or head, or conscience of his own, throughout this vast Empire.

On you, on me, on old and young, on rich and poor, it more or less depends whether that public opinion be elevating or depressing, just or unjust, pure or impure, Christian or un-Christian. If it be true, as some think, that to follow and not to lead public opinion must henceforth be the course of our statesmen, then our responsibility and the responsibility of the nation is deepened further still.

The very creation of the character of our public men must then devolve in a manner upon those below them and around them. We must strive with all our strength to be that in our stations which we would wish them to be in theirs.

We must act as those act in a beleaguered city, where every sentinel knows that on his single courage and fidelity may depend the fate of all. A single regulate mind, loving the truth, and the truth only, has ere now brought the whole mind of a nation round to himself. A single voice raised constantly on behalf of honesty and justice and mercy and freedom, has rendered forever impossible practices which were once universal.

Apply the Relief to the throat and chest until the surface smart and redness. Give more the bowels. For a sudden cold take a large dose Radway's Pills and a teaspoonful of Relief with a teaspoonful of molasses, in a tumbler of hot water. Relief at once to bed, in the morning the cold will be gone.

Radway's Ready Relief

GOLDS AND COUGHS... Frank Malz, 420 6th St., New York, writes: "My wife suddenly fell very sick with influenza. I called in the doctor, but he failed to help her any. We have no time to be sick. So I bought my own doctor and with Radway's Ready Relief and Pills, I gave her according to Radway's directions, and she went back to work two days later."
