Living & Leisure

—THE WOMAN'S REALM—

God is in every tomorrow. Therefore I live for to-day. Certain of finding at sunrise, Guidance and strength for the way; Power for each moment of weakness. Hope for each moment of pain, Comfort for every sorrow, Sunshine and joy after rain.

WHITE GLOVES PREDOMINATE

With the emphasis on elegance and femininity in dressing for gala occasions, the "white-gloved look" will be important this season. Against a background of formal gowns, luxurious furs and evening wraps, rhinestone jewelry will be brilliant. Sleekly groomed coiffures will sparkle with jeweled clips and tiaras. Evening bags in gleaming satin or imported brocades will enhance the ensemble. There will be snowy white gloves for cocktails or dinner and twenty-four button lengths in white kid or satin for formal evenings.

Even the teen-age girl will be "dressing up" this year. Short white kid gloves will be her favorite. Over-shoulder bags in gold or silver kid and small black satin drawstring or box-shaped bags are designed for late-afternoon or evening occasions. Velvet or satin bows and bright hair bands will set off her smooth, shining hair.

FAMOUS FRENCH GLOVES RETURNING

All through the war the French peasants in the glove districts were busy. The Kisiav Factory of Millau, France, was the center depot for the Underground. There munitions and foods were stored right under the German's noses. While the workers were forced to make gloves for the Germans, they held back the finest grades and hid them. This was very dangerous, but they wanted the North American women who so loved the beautiful Kisiavs to have them some day.

Now, many of these very gloves are coming to this continent. In shipments, and more fine Kisiavs are being made in this country from the excellent skins being shipped here. "Qui se Lave" (that which is washable) is the French phrase from which these wonderful washables were named.

FALL COLORS ARE CO-ORDINATED

Coordination of color between jewelry and costume will be applied more strictly this fall than in any previous period.

Imported stones are once more available and jewelry designers are giving more consideration to colors which will complement the colors of costumes. Fall browns for instance are to be embellished with cream brown and topaz, emerald green and topaz combinations. Wine and purple shades for fall will be complemented with amethyst highlighted in a large variety of jewelry pieces.

RUBY, SAPPHIRE OF SAME MINERAL

Did you know that the only difference between a ruby and a sapphire is the colour? The American Gem Society states that both are varieties of the gem mineral, corundum. Only transparent to translucent varieties of corundum are gemstones. The red gem variety is known as the "ruby"—all other varieties as "sapphire".

What's more, very light red or pink corundum is not ruby at all, but sapphire! In other words, sapphires come in practically all colours of the rainbow, while the ruby includes only transparent medium to dark tones of red to purplish-red hues.

The Hindus call the ruby the "King of Precious Stones." An everlasting flame was believed to burn in this gem, and the ruby's inner heat was said to cause water to boil if the stone was placed in water. Still the most valuable of all the gem stones of to-day because of its rarity, the American Gem Society feels that it is also probably the most misrepresented. For generations, even the greatest authorities classed "spinel" as rubies, while many people cannot distinguish rubies from the garnet. Preferred by some of the most famous beauties of history, the mother of John Jacob Astor owned a famous ruby necklace of such fabulous value that it later was sold to buy an entire chain of hotels.

Hints on Etiquette

It is good manners to write a little note to the person who has entertained you pleasantly in her home and say how much you appreciated the entertainment.

Assuages Own Troubles

Jilted Woman Finds Solace in Praying For "Unknown Woman"

DEAR MISS DIX: Not long ago you published a letter from a woman who had been jilted by the man she loved and expected to marry, and who was so miserable that she was contemplating suicide. I have had the same experience and I want to tell her about it because it may comfort and help her.

The man I loved and to whom I was engaged calmly wrote me that he had married another girl. I thought I would die or go out of my mind when I read that letter, but while I was still reading it a thought came to me like a flash—somewhere, at this very moment, some other woman is being handed a cable which tells her that the man who was her very life, perhaps her husband, or maybe her sweetheart or her son, has been killed—and I was given strength in that moment to say: "Oh, God, take my heartbreak and in return comfort that woman, whoever she may be. She may not even believe in You, and that will make her grief all the more bitter and hard to bear."

CALLS HER "UNKNOWN WOMAN"

And as the days and weeks wore on I felt I had almost come to know her. I call her my "unknown woman", and so certain did I feel that God had accepted my sacrifice that I almost welcomed the feeling of loneliness and misery because I felt that I was really helping her. Now here is the wonder of it: The more I welcomed these heartaches the less frequent they became, and now I think of the man without bitterness and can even pray for him.

If the woman who is thinking of suicide because the man she loved was unfaithful to her could adopt an unknown woman with a greater sorrow, I believe it would help her. The idea may sound fantastic, but I know it saved my reason.

A STRANGER WHO HAD BEEN THERE.

ANSWER: The idea isn't fantastic. It is one of the most profound truths in the world that the only cure for our own sorrow is assuaging someone else's sorrow. The grief that is self-centred is like a cancer that eats out our own hearts. It is only when we put our own troubles aside and try to help someone else that we find healing. When we have the faith and the philosophy to take life humbly, as it comes to us, and to say, "Who am I that I should be saved from the common lot of humanity?" we are given the strength and the courage to bear our griefs. When we wipe the tears from others' eyes, we dry our own.

Lily Bulbs From Europe Replace Those From Japan

Lilies available to American gardeners this fall have been grown in this country or in Europe. No Japanese lily bulbs have yet been imported, and whether this country will ever again take lily bulbs from Japan seems to be in doubt, though prior to the war they furnished most of our supply.

Thanks to increased production in this country, and to European growers, the variety of lilies available this fall is increased, though still far from complete. Madonna lilies are again being imported from France; but if these are planted it should be remembered that they must go in early enough to make top growth this fall, if flowers are to be produced in the spring. If the ground freezes too soon after planting, flowers will fall.

Beautiful Speciosum Lilies, Formerly Imported from Japan, Now Come from Holland

A balanced plant food is fine, and some varieties will need additional spring applications. Use 1 pint to a bushel of soil. Spade your bed deeply before setting out the bulbs. If you think the ground will be frozen before the bulbs arrive, give the bed a mulch of leaves or straw to keep it from freezing until you can get the bulbs in.

A. When cooked, drain and cover securely, then wrap well in paper and set in the oven without fire. They will keep steaming hot for a long time.

A. If a few drops of paraffin are applied to a cut it often gives instant relief and also hastens healing.

Morning Smile

The Scotsman's wife had strong views on the subject of a morning drink. One night her husband came home late and badly fuddled. He managed to get inside the house without waking her, and on reaching his bedroom he got down on his hands and knees and started to crawl along the floor. But luck was against him, his wife awoke.

In the darkness, mistaking the moving object for the dog, she said, "Come on, Jack! Good dog!" "Whereupon," said the husband next day, recounting the event to a friend, "I had the rare intelligence to lick her hand."
