REV. D. P. McLEOD PASTOR OF ZION CHURCH.

The following reference to Rev. D. P. McLeod, Pastor of Zion Church, appears in the Stylus published by the seniors of Park College, Parkville, Mo., in a notice of the Class of St. Donald R. McLeod came to the college in '78 from Schuyler, Neb. Though he was specially fond of mathematics, he made high marks in all studies and his thorough scholarship and unusual aptitude of thought was shown a just recognition in his being given the first honor of the class. His vivid memories are of the plain farming and the "brilliant expositions of Scripture by President McAfee at chapel services." He dreams still of President McAfee, "and always feels better after such visions." In '85 he was graduated from Lane Seminary, in the meantime having been married to Miss Stella B. Dyer, sometime a teacher at the college, and having supplied the church at Northville, Kansas. He was the first pastor of the First Pres. Ch. at Quincy, Mass., serving for something over a year. After the death of Mrs. McLeod in '86 he assumed a pastorate which he retained for five and a half years at Orwell, Prince Edward Island, Canada. His present membership is 212 and the congregation 300. His one daughter is with him. He feels deep gratification in the successful industry thus far achieved, and "thanks God for the training received at Park College." He adds, "The world needs more Park men."

John Hays Hammond Thinks the Witwatersrand Good for Six Hundred Million Pounds.

The Engineering Magazine opens with an article on the Transvaal Mines by Mr. John Hays Hammond, who whatever his Jamesonian record may be, is one of the world's first experts in mining. Mr. Hammond's figures are calculated almost to stagger humanity. Think of a ten mile strip of reef capable of yielding $200,000,000 worth of gold! Mr. Hammond does not say positively that it will, but only that geological investigations leave that estimate highly probable. And that that ten mile strip is only a fraction of the gold-bearing area of the Transvaal. At this rate gold should some day become as cheap as copper. Mr. Hammond gives an account of the three mining regions of the Colony—the Witwatersrand region, of which Johannesburg is the capital; Lydenburg, and De Kopp. The first named dwarfs the other two. The Witwatersrand gold was discovered in 1855, several years after gold was found in Lydenburg and De Kopp. In 1897 the Witwatersrand miners produced 23,000 ounces. In the nine months preceding the outbreak of the war the output came to 4,008,326 ounces, worth about fourteen and a half million pounds. The Witwatersrand companies were, in other words, producing rather more than a quarter of the entire gold yield of the world. Mr. Hammond believes that within the next three or four years the Rand may turn out twenty-five millions worth.

The advance will be owing partly to the increase of crushing machinery, "but more especially to the starting of many of the deep-level properties which will then reach the producing stage." Talking of deep levels, the engineers are prepared to work vertically in the Rand to a depth of 8,000 feet. The cost would be great but, says Mr. Hammond, the profit would be greater. "It is estimated that for every mile in length along the course of the reefs, down to a vertical depth of 1,000 feet for the dip of these reefs, gold to the value of about ten millions will be extracted." How long will the gold yield of the Rand last? Mr. Rand thinks that mining in the Rand will cease to be profitable within twenty-five years. Shortly before the war, the Rand mines employed nearly ten thousand whites on an average monthly wage of £26, and 88,657 natives on an average of £3 9s. 8d. Most of the white workmen are British, but many of the important members of technical staffs are American. "The mine and mill foremen are usually either Americans, or British subjects, who have had mining experience in America," Mr. Hammond says nothing on the point, of course, he would not—but it is obvious that the Rand, with all this overwhelming wealth, should be made to pay its liberal share of costs for the war, and for the measures which must be taken to re-stock and regenerate South Africa.

He was with Kitchener in the advance on Khartoum. In South Africa he commanded the Fourth or Light Brigade in Sir Redvers Buller's Army Corps, and later, when Kitchener took command, was entrusted with the work of stemming the tide of invasion and crushing the rebellion in the north of Cape Colony.
